George W. Wickersham Arraigns Press Censorship Plan as Unconstitutional

Former United States Attorney-General Tells Why He Believes Courts Would Declare Such a Measure as That Proposed in the Espionage Bill as Invalid.

THE following article, the result of an interview, was carefully revised by George W. Wickersham of New York City, who was Attorney-General of the United States during President Taft's administration:

BY GEORGE W. WICKERSHAM,

(Attorney-General of the United States in President Taft's Cabinet.)

(An Interview.)

ALTHOUGH the clause in the espionage bill which threatened to muzzle the press under a special censorship has been temporarily shelved, it may be expected to reappear.

The spectacle of autocracy which recent legislation has presented to the country is beyond the expectations of the framer of the Constitution and one of the most vital elements of this democratic autocracy is the proposed censorship bill. Since it cannot be discussed as anything but a coming event, and since it has been born and reborn, doctored and redoctored, we can only speculate upon the extraordinary consequences of so complicated a piece of undemocratic legislation.

Politically, the censorship idea as presented to the country at present is an extremely bad move, because it has aroused national suspicion which, in the course of political ambition, should be avoided. Better, of course, in presenting new legislation that it should be of a character above suspicion, a political feat more or less possible which has been demonstrated in the history of past administrations. There is, however, such a majesty of power in the proposal of recent legislation in Washington, that the plain American citizen must either Europeanize his point of view, or look to the courts for ultimate interpretation of constitutional rights.

It is my impression that a great deal of this autocratic legislation will not overcome the decision of the courts and there is nothing so embarrassing to political wisdom as to find that the courts pronounce its products unconstitutional.

In this dilemma the unborn babe of censorship of the press in my opinion will find itself, should its sponsors at the political font in Washington succeed even in christening it.

Censorship Law in Court Would Plague Its Authors

The suspicion as to the true character of this legislative infant so luxuriously clothed in the swaddling clothes of political autocracy, is very definite. Should Congress succeed in the parentage of a censorship that will practically deprive the American people of the sovereign rights of free speech, of criticism, of those entrusted with office and sworn to a duty of service to the people, there is no possibility that the courts will legalize the birth right of such a bill. Illegitimate children born of illicit affection, be it for ambition or for the individual inheritance of power, when dragged before the courts bring disgrace upon the political parents.

Assuming that the censorship proposed aims chiefly at suppressing any criticism of the administration officers whose chief duty, in fact whose chief ideals are to be servants of the people, such an aim is the most dangerous political mine which could be laid to explode the structure of constitutional right upon which this United States of America has grown to be the greatest nation in the world.

Even if the purpose of a censorship incubus be the endeavor to meet the tremendous difficulties involved in the conduct of modern war, the measures suggested to Congress go far beyond the requirements of its legislative purposes.

We have been repeatedly impressed with the necessity of following in the footsteps of our allies, especially England, in the direction of our war policies.

How far the political autocracy of recent legislation in Washington aspires to apply the lessons which our allies, especially England, have been learning with so much valor and courage we do not know.

Legislation May Be Good for England Yet Very Injurious to Us

If the proposed censorship bill is the result of advices received and urged by the British Government then it seems to me that we are blundering into a form of legislation that may be perfectly good for England, but very bad for the United States.

The first amendment to the Constitution of the United States adopted in 1789 declared that Congress shall make no law abridging the freedom of speech of the press. Thus the Constitution of the United States definitely repudiated the European idea of censorship. It left the individual and the press liable for abuse of this right, but it recognized the right as one of those inalienable rights to secure which Governments exist which derive their first power from the consent of the people. In England there is no written Constitution and its Government is more immediately responsive to public opinion than ours can be. The ministry of Great Britain is practically a committee of the House of Commons, and it must at all times command the support of a majority of that House or it must appeal to the country.

The theory of the American Government is that the people are sovereign. The office holders are the public servants. To attempt to stifle criticism of their servants by the sovereigns is to subvert the whole theory of our Constitution. It is a deliberate violation of one of the most sacred and most fundamental rights.

But, the censorship bill is only one of the many forms of autocratic legislation with which a Democratic Congress has been sandbagged, for the last four years. Politically, the course which our ship of state has been taking lately is incomprehensible to any man who has given the legal purposes of our Constitution any intelligent thought.

It seems that we are asked through out Congress to enact legislation in support of the ideals of democracy that would defeat the essential principles of democracy.

Opposes Plan to Have Governing Committee of Directors

It is proposed that we have a governing committee of dictators, who shall be vested with extraordinary powers over our food, our clothes, our fuel, our oxygen even, and we are drifting to a condition of timid slavery that even that supreme land of imperialism, Germany, could not and would not permit.

As I said before there is an inevitable redress against all this political egoism, in the courts, and it is perfectly certain that should any of these extraordinary legislative bills be put into operation, the courts will be called upon once more to justify the establishment of an independent judiciary.

In making these statements I desire to make it clear that any criticism is non-political. I am speaking as an American citizen whose profession happens to be the law and who consequently is thinking about them along legal lines.

I regard the censorship legislation as the most dangerous, expressing as it does a timid autocracy, timid because it is in effect a very obvious attempt to muzzle the press, which is the balance wheel against political error.

If we have come to a point in our national career when it is necessary for the administrative officers of our Government to hide the fallibility of their acts from the public whom they serve, it is indeed time that we take council with these wise ancestors of American history, the framers of the Constitution of the United States.

If the purpose of the censorship bill is inspired entirely by the experience of England with the British press, then we are surely wrong, because Lord Northcliffe demonstrated

French Army Gravely Imperiled by Tuberculosis

Noted American Expert, Just Back from Trenches, Says Nation's Greatest Need Is American Doctors

Dr. Hermann Biggs, New York State's Health Officer, Who Was Sent Abroad by the Rockefeller Institute to Conduct an Inquiry Into the Ravages of the Disease Among the Republic's Soldiers, Says Even if War Were to End Today, the Country Would Have 500,000 Active Cases to Care For.

Attributes This Condition to General Neglect, Inadequate Facilities for Treatment of Sufferers, Lack of Physicians and Trained Nurses, Trench and Dugout Life Without Proper Precautions and General Prejudice Against Ventilation—England Has Not Over 5000 Cases to Its 5,000,000 Men.

ABOUT a year ago the attention of the trustees of the Rockefeller Foundation was called to the great problems of tuberculosis in the European armies by members of the War Relief Commission of the Foundation, and a special board of the War Relief Commission began to gather data on the subject. The report brought out in great detail such an alarming state of affairs that the trustees of the Foundation felt that a special investigation should be made by a physician—preferably a public health official—especially qualified for this work by his large experience in tuberculosis. It was then decided that Dr. Hermann Biggs, Health Commissioner of the State of New York, and formerly General Medical Officer of New York City, who was also a director and member of the War Relief Commission of the Rockefeller Foundation, should visit France with the special purpose of determining what action should be taken by the Foundation. Dr. Biggs spent two and a half months in Europe and made a report to the Foundation outlining the work to be done, which is about to be undertaken by permission of the French Government and with the co-operation of the American Red Cross. In the following interview Dr. Biggs draws a vivid picture of the health conditions in France after two and a half years of war.

By Henry N. Hall.

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 2.

"FOR two years and 10 months France has been bearing the brunt of the great war. She stands today fighting as desperately as ever, undaunted in spirit but grievously weakened by her enormous sacrifices. Aside from her military losses France faces an alarming condition of public health, which vitally menaces the present welfare and future existence of her civil population. It is hardly possible to exaggerate the seriousness of the plight in which our friend and ally finds herself."

Dr. Herman Biggs, Health Commissioner of the State of New York, who has just returned from France, where he spent two and a half months, was telling me of conditions as they are today and as he himself has seen them. He said:

"France faces three urgent problems which must be solved without a day's unnecessary delay and with which, under existing conditions, she is unable to cope herself. They are:

"1. The spread of the great white plague, which since the outbreak of the war has made enormous strides and has reached a point where, if the war were to be terminated tomorrow, there would be 500,000 active cases of tuberculosis to be dealt with. Today there are in France virtually no facilities for caring for these or even for supervising them.

"2. The lack of surgeons, trained nurses and adequate hospital facilities at the front, due in part to the high ratio of fatalities among doctors and medical units.

"3. The complete absence of anything resembling an adequate public health system in France and the need of educating the masses up to modern standards of hygiene and sanitation.

"Now, as we look into these problems we see that the great ravages of tuberculosis are due mainly to the absence of a proper public health system. The two things are co-related and ought really to be considered together. In other words, the development of tuberculosis in France since the war was caused by conditions which existed before the war.

France Has Never Done Much to Eradicate the White Plague

"Before the war France had done practcially nothing for the prevention of the spread of tuberculosis, except for some private institutions, and the authorities had never taken any official cognizance of the disease nor was notification of its outbreak ever required anywhere in France, nor is it even now.

"Virtually no provisions had been made for any institutions where either the early or advanced cases could be cared for. At the beginning of the war there were in the whole of France only about 100 sanitarium beds, and even these were in private institutions. There were no provisions for advanced cases except in the general wards of the public hospitals. This method of caring for cases of pulmonary tuberculosis was prohibited in New York more than 20 years ago by the health authorities.

"France mobilized her enormous army with great rapidity and without any thorough physical examination of the men, and thus enrolled under the stress of the situation many individuals suffering from tuberculosis. Proper examinations were impossible and pulmonary tuberculosis, which was widely disseminated among the general public, found its way into the army. Large numbers of men in latent and early stages of the disease were mobilized. Many of the men thus enrolled in the army rapidly developed pulmonary tuberculosis in the preliminary training camps, while still more broke down when subjected to the strains and hardships incident to the life at the front.

"I think few of us realize how different are the living conditions imposed on the troops by modern warfare from those obtaining in most previous wars. They are absolutely unlike those which we are accustomed to associate with an army in the field. We think of armies as living in tents in the open air under the best hygienic conditions, at least, so far as light, fresh air and life in the open are concerned. In France during the present war quite the reverse of this has been the case.

Dug-Out and Trench Life Favorable for Tuberculosis Germs

"The troops, instead of living in tents and in the open air when they go to the front, live in trenches, often wet and always damp, always cold, or they are in dugouts underground, still more damp and colder. Then, relieved from duty in the front fighting lines, they are billeted in peasant houses in towns and villages, or in farmhouses or outbuildings near the front, in very much overcrowded rooms, without ventilation or fresh air or sunlight, and even with very little diffused daylight. These peasant houses in France are provided with few windows and doors and these are rarely open, owing to the strong national aversion of the French people to fresh air.

"In other words, the French troops are at all times, excepting when on the march, living under unfavorable hygienic conditions, indeed, living under conditions which make tuberculosis especially likely to be transmitted.

"Generally speaking, the French agricultural classes, from whom so many of the soldiers are drawn are not cleanly. The results, as I said, were exactly what one would have anticipated—the development of tens of thousands of cases of tuberculosis among the troops. By the end of December, 1915, 86,000 soldiers had been returned to their homes with active tuberculosis diseases. In February of this year it was estimated that about 150,000 had thus been returned and more are constantly being discharged for this cause.

"Yet this only deals with the spread of the disease in the army. In order to get an idea of the terrible nature of France's plight, it is necessary to attempt to estimate as nearly as may be the number of foci of infection existing in her civil population.

"Before the war the total population of France was less than 40,000,000 and the number of deaths from tuberculosis was more than 100,000 a year. If we estimate the number of cases in the civil population on the basis of deaths occurring annually and allow, in order to be altogether conservative, only two cases for each death from tuberculosis in all forms, there would have been 200,000 cases in France before the war.

Fully 500,000 Cases to Care for When the War Is Ended

"Now, if we admit—and I am afraid we must—so far in this war, adding up the men now actually under arms, the civilians still living in territory occupied by the enemy or deported into Germany, the prisoners of war in Germany, the refugees and those who have died of wounds, or been mercifully slain outright in battle—one-fourth of the total population of France is accounted for, and if we further accept the same conservative ratio of tuberculosis among the remaining 30,000,000 people, we should have 150,000 cases to add to the 150,000 discharged from the army.

"To these 300,000 cases in France's present civil population, which are continually being increased by the return of new cases from detention camps, at least 200,000 will be added as soon as the war is over.

"Remember, in the departments of France which are occupied by the Germans, or were until the recent retreat, there were before the war about 4,250,000 people, and after what they have gone through in the last two and a half years it is conservative to estimate that 5 or 6 per cent of them are suffering from tuberculosis. That would give more than 200,000 additional cases.

"About half of these 4,250,000 inhabitants, or, say, about 2,000,000 people, fled from their homes before the first German invasion and after the Battle of the Marne and the establishment of the lines which have been so long held. These refugees were scattered along the front and in the villages and towns nearest their previous homes, and a good many of them remained in Paris, which was not far from the front. At one time the German army was only 14 miles from Paris and even during the past winter the nearest point of the lines was only about 40 miles from Paris.

"These 2,000,000 people have been living in the villages and towns near the lines under the most unfavorable conditions. They are homeless, absolutely without resources and dependent entirely upon charity organizations for their living, and there has been an enormous amount of tuberculosis among them—how much, of course, it is impossible to determine accurately.

"Aside from these there are about 2,250,000 people back of the German lines, civilian prisoners in Germany, who are living partly in their homes, partly in concentration camps and partly deported into Germany. All of these in the middle age of life, both men and women, practically all of them between the ages of 19 and 45, have been deported into Germany, and the rest, young men or old,

Why America Must Strike Her Hardest as Quickly as Possible at Prussianism

Andre Cheradame, in Atlantic Monthly, Warns This Country That Her Interest in Crushing Germany Is Quite as Great as That of the Allies, That the Peril to Us Is Just as Immediately Menacing.

THE following article on "The United States and Pan-Germanism," by Andre Cheradame, is reproduced in the Post-Dispatch from the current number of The Atlantic Monthly by special arrangement. The author tells what Pan-Germanism means to Germany, to the other nations of Europe and to the United States. He analyzes the mistakes of the allies in the war, points out the danger of Pan-German victory to America, and suggests full Japanese intervention with America as necessary to overcome the Pan-German menace to America and to the world.

THE Atlantic Monthly has asked me to analyze the present international situation. I shall do so with absolute frankness. It has always been my conviction that, first and last, the greatest service is done by telling the truth.

Since 1898 I have worked tirelessly to tear the veil from the Pan-German scheme, which my investigations in all parts of the world have enabled me to unearth. In spite of the positive and abundant proofs of its existence which I have been publishing for 19 years, I was unable to persuade the responsible authorities in France, Russia or England, that a formidable peril was swiftly and more swiftly drawing near. Paris and London were steeped in blind pacifist delusions. As for Petrograd, the sinister Teutonic influences which, until only yesterday, were at work on the highest personages, prevented the great Russian people from knowing the real nature of Germany's projects.

If the Europeans most directly interested in knowing the truth were, until the very outbreak of hostilities, completely hoodwinked as to the true intentions of William II, it is only natural that Americans should take some time to realize the staggering facts concerning the fantastic and odious plan of world-domination so toilsomely built up by the Government at Berlin. In peace times, too, the affairs of old Europe, especially the intricate tangle of Austro-Hungarian and Balkan politics, had no practical interest for so vast and remote a nation as the United States. This was particularly true of her Western citizens. Today, however, Americans as well as French, British, Russians and Italians, are faced with the obligation of mastering the problems of Central European affairs; for, without exaggeration, it is on the proper solution of these problems that the independent existence of the United States depends.

As events have justified the views I have held for a score of years, I trust my American readers will hold this fact in my favor. If I should seem to run counter to the ideas they now hold, they should realize that I do so deliberately, in order to save priceless time and better serve their own legitimate interests.

Situation in Europe.

The present situation in Europe is due to two factors: First, the almost complete fulfillment by the Germans of a plan which they had long been preparing with the utmost care; second, the repeated mistakes of the allies in their carrying on of the war—mistakes which alone have permitted the Germans to consummate their plans almost without opposition.

The Pan-Germanist program of 1911 called for the establishment of Prussian hegemony over a territory of nearly 4,015,000 square kilometers—in other words, besides actual conquest in the east and west, it meant the indirect, yet effective seizure of Austria-Hungary, the Balkan States and Turkey. At the beginning of 1917—before the capture of Bagdad by the English and the strategic retreat of the German troops in the West—the program had been realized to the extent of 3,600,000 square kilometers—that is, in nine-tenths of its entirety.

The basic explanation of this achievement lies partly in the fact that, if the Germans are outlaws they are very intelligent outlaws, perfectly trained for the task of seizing the booty on which they have set their hearts; partly in the fact that the leaders of the allies, intelligent and animated by the best intentions though they are, have been quite unenlightened as to the multiple realities of the European tangle, a thoroughgoing knowledge of which is absolutely necessary for the conduct of the terrible war in progress.

Proof of Ignorance.

The proof of this ignorance lies in the recognized truth that the heads of the European states now in league against Germany were, without exception, taken by surprise when war broke out. Posterity will look on this fact with amazement. The Governments of the allies were no better prepared to direct the war intellectually than were their Generals to carry it on materially. Now, the intellectual prosecution of this war presents unprecedented difficulties: It calls uncompromisingly for a detailed knowledge, not only of matters military and naval, but of geographic, ethnographic, economic and political questions which, by reason of the scale of the present conflict, react profoundly on all military operations of general scope. As a result of this interpenetration of all the various problems, the world-conflict is not, as many people still believe, a purely military struggle, in which the mere machinery of war plays a decisive role. In spite of appearances, mind—that is, the intellectual element—dominates the material element, which, though indispensable, can attain full effectiveness only when it is employed in furtherance of a definite plan of action, backed by clear thinking; and such a plan can never be formulated unless the ethnographic, psychological, economic and geographic factors capable of affecting every great movement of a general nature are calculated as carefully as the purely military factors. By reason of the potency of these many factors—invisible, but very real and powerful—it may be said: 'The war is not a mere war of armaments—it is a war of political science.'

It is because the strategists of Berlin have long recognized this conception of modern warfare; it is because they have at their fingers' ends a documentation of political science, slowly accumulated and of unquestionable worth, that they are in a position to meet endless problems as they present themselves, and to achieve successes against the allies which, on the surface, appear incomprehensible.

Leaders of the Allies.

As for the leaders of the allies, it seems as if many of them are not alive to the element of political science in the war, even at the present moment. The reason is simple. Those same men who ignored the realities of Pan-Germanism before the war are, naturally enough, unable to grasp the poltico-scienitfic, geographic, economic, ethnographic and psychological realities of all Europe now that the conflict has burst on us. In the realm of the intellectual there can be no improvisation.

To master the politico-scientific elements necessary for the prosecution of this war, there is need of minds trained by the unremitting application of fifteen or twenty years. Among the leaders of the entente no man is to be found who has bent his will to such intellectual effort; and the pressing problems brought forth by each day give no time for minute, deliberate study by the men who have succeeded to the seats of power since war began.

Mistakes by Entente.

The capital mistakes in the prosecution of the war committed by the entente proceed directly from the defective equipment of its leaders, which I have just pointed out. They explain the difference in the results obtained by the two groups of belligerents, al-

Westliche Post's Unamericanism.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Slanderously assaulting the loyalty of Americans and spewing treason and sedition against the United States Government throughout an editorial appearing Monday the Westliche Post launched a venomous attack upon "forced registration."

Asserting that "forced registration goes against the grain with the people" and neglecting to specify the kind of people he had reference to, the writer of the editorial with a Prussian hypocrisy running true to form launched his poisonous attack with the words: "Let us be honest;" an impossible feat for the Westliche Post to accomplish.

The statement that "forced registration goes against the grain with the people" is viciously false and was so stated with the deliberate intention of falsifying the true state of public opinion relative to registration.

Either the writer of the editorial knew that the American people are in full accord with the registration legislation recently enacted—and he has had every opportunity to become acquainted with public opinion as expressed through the press of the country, relative to conscription and registration—or he is entirely lacking in intelligent comprehension of recent events.

If aware of the overwhelming indorsement the American people are giving to conscription and registration, then he has deliberately falsified to his readers in reporting public opinion as opposed to these measures.

On the other hand, if he is ignorant of the true state of public opinion relative to conscription and registration, then he has deliberately falsified to his readers in reporting public sentiment—relative to registration—of which he knew nothing.

Either horn of the dilemma has the Westliche Post writer skewered hard and fast.

Continuing, the writer says: "We come back to the question, what is the purpose of our entrance into the war? What will we attain?"

An earnest study of President Wilson's speech before Congress will dispel the gloom beclouding the questioner's perceptive faculties as to America's reasons for entering upon war. Obviously he has missed entirely the meaning of American institutions.

The Westliche Post declares: "A free man must know why he fights." He does. He is fighting to save democracy from spoliation at the hands of a military autocracy. He is fighting for American honor and rights and decency.

Free men are fighting to prevent the devastation of the world at the hands of the most pitiless despots that ever cursed the earth.

They are fighting to relegate the Hohenzollern crowd to the junk heap.

The reference to Italy's role in the war as "the role of a hypocrite in league with hypocrites" is about as near treason to the United States Government as it is possible to approach and escape the penalty of treason.

The writer of the editorial just sneaks out of the twilight zone of treason by lambasting Italy, but through it all runs the cowardly leering sneer at the United States; through it all runs the yellow streak of treason which forms the warp and woof of the article.

The Westliche Post has encouraged and fostered treason and sedition since the declaration of war with Germany. Will it be permitted to continue to sow treason and foster sedition?

Patriotism.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I heard of a farmer recently who is not in affluent circumstances, and has a growing family of his own, who has adopted several orphan children, and is ready for more of them. He is the true American patriot. It even beats buying a Liberty war bond to take one of these youngsters into your home, and the returns will even be greater.

Self-Denial.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Stir yourself in with the lump. If you are leaven, work; if you are dough, rise.

It used to be said that no one was ever so fond of anything as I was of potatoes. Well, I've given up potatoes, not because I can't buy them, but because I won't. Of course, neither potatoes nor I are of any importance save as every one of us is, as an illustration of the will to help in the present emergency by doing without what we want in order that others may have what they need.

L. B. H.

The Basis of All Success.

From the Washington Star.

Some of Herbert C. Hoover's ideas have value even beyond the important task of food administration. His opinion that results are better obtained by co-operation than by coercion represents first-class economics.

JACOB'S VOICE, ESAU'S HANDS.

The peace program of the German Socialists, as announced from Stockholm, reveals how completely the Socialist movement in Germany has submitted to the ruling autocracy. That it is the work of the German Foreign Office, masquerading as the earnest work of independent lovers of peace, there can be no question.

The first point in the program is "no annexations;" a clever appeal to the Russians, wholly satisfying the Germans' purpose to recover, if possible, their vast colonial empire, now lost.

The second point, "no indemnities," contains the same subtle appeal, and if accepted, would release Germany from all responsibility to make good her wanton and savage devastation of France and Belgium.

The third point, that "the South Slavic lands and Austro-Hungarian crown lands remain in the dual monarchy," confirms and perpetuates the subjection of alien races to Austria. Incidentally, it means the surrender to Austria of Bukowina, now in the possession of Russian forces.

The fourth point declares for an independent Finland and an independent Russian Poland. Nothing is said of German Poland and Austrian Poland, which every sentiment of justice requires shall be reunited with Russian Poland in the reconstitution of the ancient kingdom, and in the expiation of the three crimes of Prussia, Austria and Russia of 1772, 1793 and 1795. Nothing could suit the imperial Prussian and Austrian purposes better.

The fifth point in the program calls for "restoration of freedom of commerce on land and sea." No single problem in the war is more ominous to the Germans than the growing realization that they have wholly destroyed the world commerce. In addition to the consciousness of the universal condemnation in which they are held, there exists the economic scheme of solidarity among the entente allies, as a most serious menace to the commercial recuperation of Germany.

The sixth and last point is a hazy and disingenuous jumble, calling for "a return to the Declaration of Paris of 1856, especially regarding the prohibition of the capture or arming of merchantmen;" a reduction in the contraband list, abolishment of prize courts and a "restriction of mechanical means which may be employed in maritime and air warfare."

As to the declaration of Paris, the reference to exemption from capture of merchantmen is a bid to recognize the traditional policy of the United States for complete exemption of private property in naval warfare, which the Congress of Paris rejected. The reference to armed merchantmen, likewise, is a false attempt to assimilate them to privateers, the use of which the declaration of Paris prohibited. It did not refer in any sense to defensively armed merchantmen.

The final reference to restrictions on mechanical measures in naval and aerial warfare is notice to the world that Germany will consent to interdict the use of submarines and Zeppelins, that she will agree that piracy and aerial outlawry, through these agencies, are illegal, if the program is accepted.

The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands that drafted the program are the hands of Esau.

"WHEN A STATE GOES DRY."

The adoption of a law prohibiting the sale of liquor is only the beginning of the fight, according to Frederick K. Blue, State Tax Commissioner of Virginia, who also is ex-officio Commissioner of Prohibition. Mr. Blue, in undertaking his new duties, has sought to set the situation clearly before the people in a little volume which bears the title "When A State Goes Dry."

Mr. Blue gives warning that he does not want to hear the retort, "Isn't that question settled?" when he asks aid in law enforcement. He declares that there always is organized opposition to a prohibitory law and that the forces that worked for the passage of the law must work even more diligently for its enforcement if they would have a fair trial of the condition they have sought. The abolition of the saloon leaves many problems to be solved. The effects of the taste for drink and the elements opposed to prohibition are not wiped out by law.

In his statement Mr. Blue discusses several phases of the dry question, one of these being the financial affairs of a State that gives up its liquor license fund. He refers to the case of West Virginia and its deficit, but asserts that this is not a fair test as the deficit was incurred during the coal mine strikes. His position is that this is a question to be worked out, not to be settled by viewing another state's situation.

His real summing up of the problem is that the conditions after the law becomes effective will reflect exactly the earnestness of those who had it passed and he declares that any pretended prohibitionist who asks that the law be not strictly enforced for fear of its repeal is insincere. The question admits of no middle ground.

THE VOICE OF COMMAND.

It may safely be surmised that if some of our eager young men who sought enrollment in the officers' reserve corps had known they were to be compelled to undertake a course in voice culture they might have hesitated. Many a young man who dreamed of leading his command into the very throats of hostile cannon might have blanched at the prospect.

Nevertheless, voice culture has wisely been made a part of the training. It is conceivable that the hottest bunch of fire-eaters that ever carried the starry flag to victory would have lost their "pep" if summoned to charge in the tone of one inviting a lady to have another ice cream soda. One of the chief complaints of young Percy Hotspur against the dandified emissary sent to persuade him to do his duty was the ambassador's style of conversation.

As part of the "mental" test given a candidate for admission into the corps, a St. Louis aspirant was asked what made him think he could command a company of inelegant but highly scrappacious American soldiers. It is for such as he that the voice culture class has been formed.

It isn't always the man with the most virile voice who is the best in a fight. But it is a safe bet that the competent fighting man will know how to declare himself in a convincing way when the proper time comes.

FARM LOAN POSSIBILITIES.

In line with the wise and needful policy of taxing unimproved land held for speculation into use for food production is the work of stimulating and aiding increased production by farm loans.

The Government has made a beginning of the farm loan policy by creating and organizing Federal Land Banks. There is a possibility of enormous increases of farm production in the system of long-time loans to farmers which has been organized. Time for the food campaign is pressing, however, but the process of making the loans is slow.

The report of President Danforth of the Federal Land Bank of St. Louis shows slow progress in the work of actually utilizing farm loans. There are applications for $13,000,000 in loans, but no loans have as yet been made and the highest expectation of immediate loans after the appraisal of lands is $700,000.

Not only ought there to be available for loans all the money required by farmers to increase acreage under cultivation and to make improvements, but special effort should be made to promote the organizing of farmers' loan associations. Organizers of associations might be employed to excellent advantage. When the food supply is an essential factor for winning victory in the war, no means or effort should be spared to increase food production.

If the Government should apply $1,000,000,000 within the next year to increasing cultivated farm acreage and increasing productivity of improved farms, the money would be well spent. This sum could easily be raised, with double advantage, by taxes on land values and surtaxes on unused lands.

CHANGE IN GERMAN OPINION.

The political conversion of Maximilian Harden, Germany's journalistic oracle, from an advocate of might to a champion of right as the basis for state action, is strikingly shown in the following quotations from his writings, the first under date of November, 1914; the second from an article in his newspaper, the Zukunft, of May 3, 1917. In the first article, rebuking German apologists, Harden said:

> Cease your pitiful attempts to excuse Germany's action. No longer wail to strangers who do not care to hear, telling them how dear to us were the smiles of peace we had smeared like rouge upon our lips. * * * Because our statesmen failed to discover and foil shrewd plans of deception is no reason why we may foist the flag of most pious morality. Not as weak-willed blunderers have we undertaken the fearful risk of this war. We wanted it. Because we had to wish it and could wish it. May the Teuton devil throttle those whiners whose pleas for excuses make us ludicrous in these hours of lofty experience. We do not stand, and shall not place ourselves, before the court of Europe. OUR MIGHT SHALL CREATE NEW LAW IN EUROPE. Germany strikes. If it conquers new realms for its genius, the priesthoods of all the gods will sing songs of praise to the good war.

New law for the world, created as Germany has tried to create it, presents a task beyond the powers of individuals or nations. That Harden is beginning to recognize this is evident from the following, giving his present point of view:

> President Wilson's speech announcing the entry of the United States into the war will be printed in school books alongside the speeches of Demosthenes, Cicero, Pitt, Mirabeau, Robespierre, Bismarck and Gambetta, and will surpass them all. The intervention will have the most far-reaching effects, if the war does not end before America has completed her preparations. The Western armies, who hold Bagdad, Mecca, Avlona, Gorizia, part of the Trentino, Salonika, and the German colonies, and who in 12 days in April counted 34,000 prisoners to their credit, do not see before them a future so enshrouded in gloom that it invites them to lay down their arms. The milliards of men who are now hostile to us will not depart humbly to their homes before the gigantic weight of the United States has been thrown into the scale.
> What now is our best course? Certainly not the encouragement of a shuttlecock and battledore game between black, red, and piebald amateur diplomatists, but a clearer recognition of realities, a return to the freedom of dignified recognition, a setting in order of Germany's house, that it may no longer be an abomination in the eyes of the world. Democracy rings us round. The responsibility for the peace which will be concluded must be borne, not by one prince nor by one family, but by the entire nation with unbended neck. Democracy is irresistible, and its help may tomorrow become urgently necessary to princes. Germany's people can only conclude this peace when they have reached a full realization of the facts and this they must and will do.

NOTHING THE MATTER WITH THE WEST.

From the New York World.

"What is the matter with the West?" The question has been a fruitful subject of magazine and newspaper discussion ever since America entered the great war. Was the West really a part of the Nation? Had the West forgotten the honor of the Nation in a riot of profits from the allied demands for wheat and horses? Did the West actually feel that it was unconcerned with a war against Germany so long as the menace of an invasion was confined to the coast sections?

These questions are now being answered. We have had one answer in the greater response of the West over the East to volunteering for the regular army and the national guard. We have another answer from Secretary McAdoo, who reports a West alive with enthusiasm in support of the great financial measures for the prosecution of the war. Everywhere he went people and communities were rising to any sacrifices within their means for the purchase of war loans.

There is nothing the matter with the West. There has never been anything the matter with the West. Those who thought there was saw darkly, and those who were thought to represent it in Congress misrepresented it.

MR. ANTWINE ON CONSCRIPTION.

"THE opposition to conscription, persisting to the point of compelling the Government to utter warnings against it, is much the best proof we have had of its fairness," Mr. Antwine said.

"It indicates much more clearly than anything else that has happened the extent to which those who stand against Germany and her crusade upon civilization would have had to fight that battle alone.

"Conscription exempts none of these un-American elements. It simply chooses us by lot, and will go on choosing us, if that is necessary, until the last man is dead. How much better this is than that those who stand for this country should fight, while those who stand for the Kaiser and God knows what else should jeer, I leave you to imagine.

"We all enjoy alike the blessings of America, and we must all share alike the sacrifices making those blessings possible. We must be tender of the feelings of those who are of enemy descent, but none the less firm with whomsoever is not going to stand with America in this crisis. Blood is thicker than reason. Don't forget that. Don't waste your breath trying to convince people of the justice of our cause when they are withheld from seeing it by bonds which easily transcend the frail ties of dispassion.

"All our wars, except those with Mexico and that with Spain, have been characterized by violent disagreement with our course at home. We saw this thing at its height in our wars with England, a country from which we had ourselves sprung. We saw it in great violence through the war with the South. It is an inevitable thing. It shows the tremendous power of human sympathy, a force which, induced by kinship, never hesitates blindly to hurl itself against even the most impregnable strongholds of human progress.

"Conscription is causing us some pain, but let us consider what the situation would be without it. We would have here a veritable hell on earth."

A CHORUS SUNG TO LIFE.

Lo! Life thou art sweet to the lips!
Thou hast song and a heart full of love!
Thou has joy and hast woe,
Thou hast wings and dost go—
Yea, more swift than the clouds sail above.
Thou hast deeps in thy way wherein dips
He who rides.
There abides
Of thy course not one hour,
Of thy garden no flower,
Of thy giving no dower—
Yet to all thou art dearest.
When the storm wreaks its joy on the sea
And the sea plays its song on the sand,
There is music and sunshine in thee,
Necromancy is there in thy wand.
For the Earth is thy garden,
And sweet is thy burden,
And holy thy guerdon
Of hope and of fears.
Thou art born of the morning,
Art child of the dawning
Of Love and of Years.
No grim gate holds thee aback.
No glad gift dost thou lack.
Through the ears of the dayspring
Doth joy of thy May spring,
And sweet is the wine that thou bearest.

WAR AND CRANKS.

ONE of the compensations for war is the hardship it works upon cranks. Kicking against everything, as they always do, they find themselves lined up with those who are disloyal. This is hard on cranks, and makes it difficult for them to do their cranking to any purpose. They are simply jumbled up with the common herd, and every nice distinction which ordinarily sets them off as individuals is lost. It is said that some of the finest and most useful cranks in Ireland lost their lives in the late revolution. They were caught in a cause which was not their cause at all. They only monkeyed with it because they were cranks. It is the impulse of a crank to be forninst, and there have been instances in history when all the competent cranks in a country were lost. From the perfectly harmless activities usual with them, they drifted into the camps of those whose offense was treason. The spectacle of a crank dying either as a traitor or a martyr is grotesque, but it is not unusual. Some of the most undeserved fame we have has been made that way, just as some of the most lovable cranks that have ever lived have been hanged for crimes of which they were utterly incapable. Nevertheless, one relishes seeing the cranks get into a general classification once in a while. They are not only a nuisance, but there at times are too many of them.

DIAMOND TESTS.

A.—An expert says: "If you touch the diamond with the tip of the tongue you can judge by its heat whether it is genuine or not. A real diamond feels cold, a false one warm. The same is said to be true of ivory and celluloid, the ivory being colder than its imitation." Diamond tests: If a real diamond be used as a miniature reading glass, aided by a larger magnifying glass, a tiny dot on paper appears clear and clean. Substitute the false stone and several points, or one badly broken one will be seen, owing to unequal refraction. Then you can try the familiar experiment of scratching the sheet of glass. Because your stone will scratch does not prove its genuineness, however. Try to break the glass evenly on the scratch. No other stone can cut through the outer skin of a sheet of glass and give certainty of an even fracture like the diamond. If you can get a fine, hard, jeweler's file, and do not value your false stone, try cutting your specimens. Your true diamond is proof against the hardest file, but that instrument will easily scratch any imitation that has ever been made. Having scratched your pretty bit of glass until it is worthless, drop it and the diamond into hydrofluoric acid. Before long the glass will be dissolved, but the diamond will suffer not at all. Then there is another experiment: Take a bit of stuff with red and white markings, pass the stone to be tested over it, and closely observe the result. If the stone be an imitation the colors will be easily distinguished through it; if it be a diamond, no difference of color will be appreciable. A genuine diamond, rubbed upon wood or metal, after having been previously subjected to the rays of the electric arc, becomes phosphorescent in the dark; this cannot be said of any of the imitations. If the stone to be tried is covered with borax paste, and after being well heated in the alcohol flame, dropped into a glass of water, the proof will be instantaneous. The glass imitation will fly into bits, while the genuine stone will not be disturbed by the ordeal. Finally, try to crush betwen two hard plates a diamond and an imitation, and learn the difference.

KEEPING OF FLOUR—FRUIT.

ARGUMENT.—Bakers keep flour about 60 days as a rule, allowing it to "age" before using. Mill products, together with spices and dried fruits, are apt to become infested with worms. These are always more common in the pantry, flour closet or cabinet, or places where mill products are stored. They are usually brought into the house with breakfast foods, bags or corn meal, flour and other mill products, and when once established is not easy to get rid of them. Thorough cleanliness is necessary at all times. All shelves and corners in the pantry should be kept entirely free of accumulations of meal, flour, breakfast cereals. All infested material should be removed and not allowed to remain to breed insects. Never push partly used packages back in corners to remain for months and attract the insects. Many times a glass jar, or a box, or a chest of drawers, becomes badly infested because it is never emptied. When the supply is within an inch or a half inch of the bottom a new lot is added, and the infested material at the bottom infests the new material in a few days. A practical means of destroying insects in boxes and the drawers of kitchen cabinets—especially those that are hiding and breeding in cracks of these receptacles—is to heat the box or drawer to a temperature of from 120 to 125 degrees. There is no stage of an insect, infesting mill products, that can withstand. a temperature of from 116 to 122 degrees for a period of 10 minutes. In Europe larger bakers keep flour supply on top floor. The different grades are dumped into large separate bins, first being sifted. Rooms are well ventilated, airy and lofty. Floors are laid with tile. The flour is frequently turned over and stirred up with large wooden shovels; this is of great beenfit, especially in aging newly milled flours and flour milled as soon as new crop wheat is harvested. Flour stored in bags should be changed at least once a month and not piled over eight bags high and rows kept apart to allow for circulation of fresh air. Sifting flour before storing it helps considerably to improve new flour. (About 30 flour substitutes tested by the United States Bureau of Chemistry have proven useful for bread when mixed with at least three times as much wheat flour. The substitutes include flours of chestnuts, bananas, soy beans, peanuts, peas, corn, barley, oats and rye. Bread of 12 parts of boiled potato to nine of wheat flour proved satisfactory.) Now read "Doctored Foods," in today's Post-Dispatch Magazine.

48 STARS, ETC.—No regular "declaration of war" was made by this country against Germany. April 6, a joint resolution was passed by the Senate and House of Representatives, and approved by the President on the same day, which proclaimed that a state of war had been forced upon us by Germany.

A. B.—Title is the right to or ownership of property, especially of land, with or without possession. Abstract of title is a brief and orderly statement of the original grant and subsequent conveyance and incumbrance relating to the title and ownership of real estate. Certificate is an instrument of conveyance under seal. Mortgage is a lien on equity and a conveyance at law. Recorder of Deeds has records of real estate conveyances. (Large onions grow from onion sets in about 100 days.)

SWISS.—The children of brothers are called cousins, cousins german and first or full cousins. Often, however, the term second cousin is loosely applied to the son or daughter of a cousin german, more properly called a first cousin once removed. A first cousin once removed is the first cousin's child; a first cousin twice removed is the grandchild of one's first cousin; a second cousin once removed is the child of one's second cousin. A first cousin once removed is sometimes called a second cousin, followed by a third, four, etc. The relation of an individual to his father's cousin is that of a first cousin once removed, and his relation to his father's cousin's child is that of first cousin twice removed, or third cousin.

TOO MUCH EFFICIENCY

By E. J. RATH

Author of "When the Devil Was Sick," "One-Cylinder Sam," "The Man With the 44-Chest," etc.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING INSTALLMENTS

In the home of John Brooke, wealthy manufacturer, there appears a young man who announces that he is H. Hedge, Efficiency Engineer, and that for a few months, while Brooke is on a business trip, he is to be the head of the family and "father" to the three spoiled children there — Constance, Alice and Billy. They learn that their father, having been pleased with the introduction of efficiency methods into his business, has accepted the challenge of the President of the Economy and Efficiency Corporation, to do the same in his home.

There follows a bad time for the children. Their allowances are cut in half; Billy is forced to go to work and his supply of gasoline is cut; the help is compelled to punch a time clock. But Constance gets even when the Efficiency Engineer undertakes to purchase a cheap hat for her. It happens to be an "exclusive" one, price $150. But he is undaunted, and interrupts a dance of the Brookes and their young friends to demonstrate to them how efficiency even can be extended to dancing. Then he chases one of Miss Constance's suitors from the house and breaks up a poker party of Billy and his friends. In desperation, Alice draws up the Brooke family "Declaration of Independence," which they all sign, including the servants. It serves notice that everyone in the Brooke household is going on a hunger strike until the efficiency man abolishes all rules and restores the children's full allowances. Presently hunger makes them waver.

Billy soon tired of knocking billiard balls around. Alice still sulked in her room. Constance had gone to her own apartment, where she tried to think and finally dozed off on the couch.

It was long past noon when there was a commotion in the second floor hall. Constance was the cause of it, running at top speed in the direction of her sister's room.

"I've got it!" she cried, bursting in upon Alice, who was sitting glumly at the window, staring out.

"What have you got?"

"Where's Billy? Wait till we all get together."

"He's in the billiard room, I think."

"Come on!"

Constance seized her sister and dragged her along.

Billy had the balls lined up for a particularly difficult shot, when Constance swept them aside and swung herself up on the table, where she sat with her feet swinging.

"I've found a way to eat!" she exclaimed.

"No!"

"To eat and not to break my word!"

Billy flung his cue in a corner and assumed the expression of a hungry lion.

"Say it quick!" he commanded. "I'm dying on my feet."

"Forcible feeding!" cried Constance.

Her brother looked at her in disgust and pity.

"You don't suppose that guy downstairs is going to feed us by force, do you?" he growled. "No such luck! He don't care if we never eat again."

It was Constance's turn to express derision in her eyes.

"Of course he won't," she said. "I didn't say he would. I'm not so foolish as to think so. But somebody else will!"

"Who?"

"Horace!"

Billy and Alice stared at their sister, registering profound perplexity.

"Listen now," commanded Constance. "What did they do with the suffragettes who went on hunger strike? They fed them by force. The suffragettes couldn't help themselves. They had to eat. But even after they had been fed they had not broken their word. They had been overpowered and they were not responsible. Now, we are just like the suffragettes. We cannot break our word, but if somebody comes along and just makes us eat, we can't help it. Can we?"

"No!" cried Alice and Billy.

"We are still on hunger strike, aren't we?"

"Yes!"

"And we are doing our best to live up to our word, but somebody else won't let us."

"You bet we are!"

Constance viewed the other Brookes with a superior air.

"Am I a good thinker?" she demanded.

"Great!"

"All right. Send for Horace."

The butler came upstairs, a troubled look on his face. Something had happened in the Brooke household that he did not understand.

"Horace," said Constance, "get a large tray, fill it completely with food, and bring it here inside five minutes."

Horace hesitated, swallowed hard, and then shook his head slowly and timidly.

"I—I can't, Miss Brooke."

"Can't! What do you mean?"

"It's against positive orders."

"Whose?"

"Mr. Hedge's, miss. He sent out word for us all to be particular about Rule 24."

"What's that?"

"It says that no meals are to be served outside the dining room, except with his orders."

Billy and Alice groaned, but Constance remained undismayed.

"I care nothing for Mr. Hedge's rules," she said coldly. "I order you to do as I say."

"I'll—I'll be discharged, Miss Brooke."

"You may not be caught."

"It's a big risk, miss."

Constance fixed a stony glance upon the butler.

"Horace," she said, "perhaps you will be discharged if Mr. Hedge finds it out; but you will be hired back again when my father returns. But if you do not do as I say, while Mr. Hedge will probably keep you in his employ, you will most certainly be fired when my father returns—and you will be fired for good. Can you understand that, Horace?"

"Yes, Miss Brooke."

"Do as I say, then."

Horace turned and started upon the execution of his perilous errand.

"Use the rear stairs," cautioned Constance, "and bring a clothesline with you as well as the food."

"A clothesline, miss?"

"Yes. Hurry now. I'll explain the rest when you come back."

She turned to Billy and demanded some pennies. When he had produced these, Constance distributed them among the three.

"We match to see who's fed first," she explained. "Odd man wins."

The choice fell to Billy, who whooped his joy until Alice scowled at him.

"But what's the clothesline idea?" he asked.

"Horace has to overpower you and tie you in a chair before you can be fed. Don't you understand? You succumb to force."

"Say—if I'm going to be fed, I can be tied up with a raveling thread. Oh, you grub!"

The tray that Horace brought into the billiard room was the fairest sight the three Brookes had ever seen. It was piled high with heaps of bread and butter, cold chicken, cold tongue, jams, jellies, cakes, sandwiches, fruits and a large pot of steaming coffee.

"I don't think I was seen," whispered Horace, as he set the tray on the billiard table. "And here's the clothes line, miss. I'll get back downstairs now before he misses me."

"Oh, no, you won't," said Constance. "We are not through with you, Horace. You have to stay here and feed us."

The butler looked blank.

"Now we haven't time to explain all the reasons for this," she continued hurriedly. "We're too hungry. You simply do as I say and as quickly as you can. To begin with, you grab hold of Billy, overpower him, and put him in that chair."

Horace shrank back, terrified and shocked.

"Why, Miss Brooke"——

"Hurry! He won't hurt you. Why he'll only be a child in your hands. Won't you, Billy?"

"Sure," said Billy with a grin. He was nearly a foot taller than the butler.

"Grab him, Horace!"

Horace advanced gingerly and placed a gentle hand on Billy's arm.

"Resist, Billy!" commanded Constance.

Billy made a feeble motion with his little finger and sighed.

"Push him itno the chair." Constance was giving her orders like a general.

Billy backed toward the chair so rapidly that Horace could hardly keep pace with him.

"Now, Billy, protest!"

"I protest!" whispered Billy.

"Now you and I protest, Alice. Ready?"

"Aw, hurry up," complained Billy. "I'm dead!"

"We must observe certain rules," said Constance firmly. "Now, Alice!"

The two Brooke girls raised their hands dramatically and chorused:

"We protest!"

Horace scratched his head and regarded them uncertainly. He feared that absence of a breakfast had sapped their reason.

"Now, Horace, you say to us: 'Stand back! I am an officer of the law.'"

Horace coughed and stammered.

"Say it!"

"Stand back. I am an officer of the law," he mumbled in a flat voice.

"Good. Now we stand back. We are afraid of you and dare not interfere. Now, you tie Billy in the chair with clothesline. Be sure to tie it around his arms."

As though he were committing a sacrilege, Horace picked up the clothesline and passed it once around Billy's body. He was preparing to make further loops about his victim when Billy interrupted him.

"Hey! That'll do. I'm tied hard and fast. Can't move a muscle."

The butler stepped back and viewed his ruthless work.

"Now feed him!" commanded Constance.

"Yes, feed me!" echoed Billy. "Push a chicken sandwich into my mouth, if you dare—you coward!"

Horace was a good servant. He understood not in the least the meaning of it all, but he recognized an order when he heard one. From the glorious trayful he selected one of Mary's sandwich masterpieces and advanced upon the helpless prisoner, napkin in hand. Billy opened his mouth wide. One eye winked triumphantly at his sisters, who stood mute and anxious awaiting their hour of torture. The sandwich was not six inches from Billy's lips, when——

"All very interesting," said a cool voice from the doorway, "but completely against the rules."

The sandwich fell from Horace's trembling hand and was wrecked upon the floor.

"Horace,"said the efficiency man, "you will immediately take that tray of food downstairs. You deserve discharge for this violation of orders, but because of your long service in the family I will overlook this one instance. It will, however be noted upon your record, counting as 20 demerits."

The three Brookes were speechless, as Horace picked up the tray and went hurriedly from the room. They stared at the food as long as it was in sight, and after that at H. Hedge.

"If any of you are ill,' he said, "I shall send for a physician. If he decides that it is necessary for you to go to bed you will go to bed. If he prescribes food for you under those conditions, you may have it and eat it, if you wish. But under no other circumstances will food be served, except in the dining room, and then only at regular meal hours. It is now 2:30 o'clock and lunch has been over for an hour. The next meal is at 7 o'clock. Thank you for your attention."

The efficiency man was gone as silently as he came.

For a short minute nobody spoke. Then it was Billy who, after tossing aside his bonds, stood up and declared:

"For once in my life I'm fit to commit murder. Confound it all, I could eat Hedge! Why did you go through all that rigmarole, Connie? I'd have had one sandwich, anyhow, if you hadn't been so particular."

"I was trying to save the family honor," she said miserably. "Oh, dear!"

Alice was almost on the verge of tears.

"I—I wish I'd never thought of a hunger strike!" she stormed. "Did—did you ever see such beautiful food in your life?"

Billy stalked from the room and disappeared in the direction of his own quarters. The two girls heard his door slam viciously.

"So long as it had to happen, I'm glad it came when it did," observed Constance. "If Billy had been fed, and we hadn't I'd have never forgiven myself."

"Never mind, Connie. It was a beautiful scheme. But what are we going to do next?"

"I think I have an idea for that, too. I'll tell you later."

At 7 o'clock in the evening four persons sat at the table in the dining room. Three of them were hungry-eyed Brookes.

"We have decided," said Constance, civily, "to withdraw our demands for the present. A strike does not seem to be practical."

The efficiency man bowed politely. He did not betray the slightest evidence of exultation. He merely replied:

"You are wrong about a strike not being practical. This one was—eminently so. It resulted in the saving of $3.87 worth of food, which, added to other economies, makes this a red-letter day in the household.

"Oh, and by the way," added Hedge as an afterthought, "since you and your brother have refused to work, your allowances are suspended until further notice. Alice's will continue, since she goes to school."

The two older Brookes were too nearly famished to do more than groan.

CHAPTER XIV.

Compliments of the Season.

And Christmas came with such silent and swift approach that the three Brookes were not aware until it was fairly upon them. Then they gasped at their own unpreparedness. Christmas was always a ceremony in the Brooke mansion, albeit an expensive one. But the Brookes were in poverty, even though they were admirably filled with the spirit.

"Well, what are we going to give each other?" demanded Alice, whose mind was normally of practical purpose.

"Greetings," said Billy, turning his pockets inside out.

Constance frowned. At least we will have the usual tree," she remarked with finality. "We have a few traditions left."

"Yes. We are strong on tradition," affirmed Billy. But we are awfully weak on the other stuff. You can't buy anything with a tradition."

"Except happiness."

"You can't buy 10 cents' worth of that," from Alice. "We can't even buy a tree."

"E. E. can," said Constance. "He can buy anything—but he won't."

"Except a hat," Billy observed savagely.

Constance smiled reminiscently. She could not deny that the hat had been an achievement.

"Tut," she counseled. "Let's keep in the spirit, anyhow."

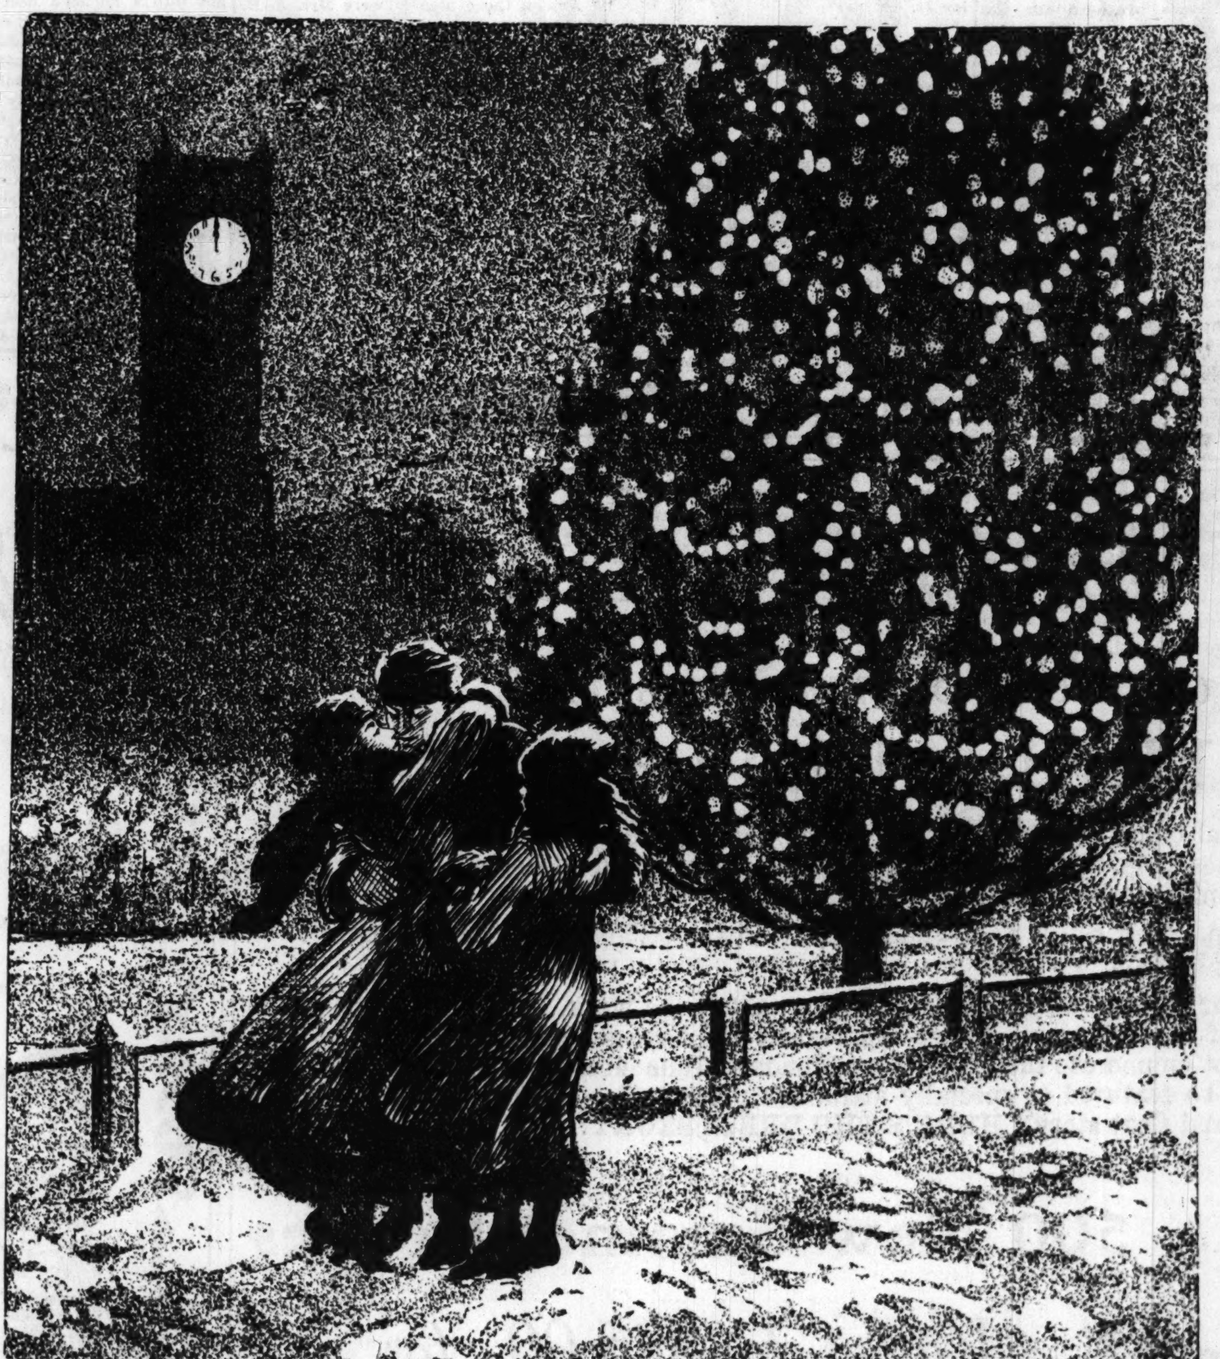
So, always in the spirit, they approached H. Hedge on the subject of Christmas.

"I do not approve of Christmas gifts," said the efficiency man.

"There won't be many gifts," said Constance sadly. "But there is always the Christmas spirit."

"Yes? What is the Christmas spirit, Miss Brooke?"

Constance stared.



''MERRY CHRISTMAS, BILLY!''

"What is it? Why"——

The efficiency man waited patiently for the remainder of the answer, but Constance had lost her voice in wonderment at the question. Alice answered.

"A tree," she said.

"So you regard a tree as the Christmas spirit?"

"Symbolical," remarked Billy offhandedly, who was so pleased with the way the word rolled out that he said it again—"Symbolical."

Alice nodded.

"It may symbolize something," admitted Hedge, "but I do not approve of a tree."

The Brookes drew slightly away from him.

"We always have a tree," said Constance.

"And it is always decorated with candles and we always hang up our stockings," supplemented Alice.

"I have no objection to your hanging up your stockings," observed the efficiency man judicially. "I cannot see that it does any harm, except to lend encouragement to a foolish myth and possibly to breathe the fallacy of expecting something for nothing. But as to a tree and candles—no."

"What's the reason we can't have a tree?" demanded Billy.

"They're unsafe, for one thing. There is a liability to fire."

"We use electric candles."

"A waste of current. A tree also entails an unnecessary amount of cleaning in the house. Furthermore, it is wicked, because it represents an attack on the natural resources of the country. The decorations that are placed on it are tawdry and without artistic merit. Such gifts as are hung on it or placed under it are almost invariably foolish and unnecessary. The entire custom and practice relating to Christmas trees is wasteful and extravagant and serves no useful purpose. No tree."

The Brooke children studied the creature who had thus developed a newly horrid aspect. Alice, still secure in her daily pittance, rallied.

"Very well," she said haughtily. "If you will not buy us a tree, I will buy one."

"You may buy it," H. Hedge informed her, "but it will not enter the house."

"I cannot bring my own tree into the house?"

"No."

"Why, we have always had a tree—right in this very room! You can't have Christmas without one."

"You can have the 25th of December without it, at any rate," answered the efficiency man. "That is what we will have—the 25th of December."

"Why—even the poor have trees!"

"Sure; we're entitled to one," added Billy with fine irony.

"No tree."

"Just a little one!" pleaded Alice.

"No."

"Why, even the servants have a tree!"

"Do they? I'm glad you mentioned it," said Hedge, making a memorandum, the sinister character of which the three Brookes understood.

"This is the very last straw!" cried Constance.

"Well, it shows which way the wind blows," returned the efficiency man brutally.

He wanted to end the argument, and he succeeded. The three Brookes, as had become their habit under such circumstances, retired for conference. As an interchange of counsel and advice it did not amount to much; but as an indignation meetig it was a superb success. Everybody made a speech and some of them were delivered in unison.

"Well, anyhow, we can ask somebody else to invite us around to their party," said Billy.

The tree was such an established tradition in the Brooke household that it was impossible to contemplate Christmas without one. But Constance, always unconsciously assuming command, shook her head.

"No family has a right to invade some other family's Christmas," she said. "I wouldn't dream of such a thing. It would be like begging for presents, too; and we haven't quite reached that."

"Pretty nearly," remarked Alice dolefully. "I'll cry my head off if I don't see a tree on Christmas."

"None of us will be exactly cheerful,' her sister said. "None of us but—— And I suppose he will rub his hands and congratulate himself."

So Christmas eve came to the three paupers of the big Fifth avenue mansion. Dinner was eaten in almost complete silence. Only H. Hedge attempted to talk, and he abandoned the effort after a brief trial. There was nobody to talk with; the Brookes were at table, but they would not answer him.

It was past 9 o'clock when a solemn procession of three, headed by Billy, walked out into the night. The efficiency man, who, as usual, was working, did not become aware of the exodus until the big front door closed. For an instant he contemplated pursuit; then abandoned the idea and turned again to his examination of the day's accounts.

The three Brookes walked for several hours and several miles. There was nothing else to do. Billy strode along in the center, a sister clinging to either arm. They saw shops and shoppers, bundles, delivery wagons, wreaths—everything that concerned a Christmas of which they were not a part.

It was not a pleasant night to walk, unless you had your pockets filled with money. There was a raw wind and a leaden sky. It was no night whatever for an indefinite goal.

At that, however, it was better than a great house on Fifth Avenue—with no Christmas. The Brooke children were unanimous on that point, even though they were not enamored of the alternative.

It was Alice who made the big discovery—a tree!

Flaunting its colored lights against the black sky it sprang into vision as the wanderers rounded a wind-swept corner and paused momentarily for breath. It was a very large Christmas tree; the largest Alice had ever seen. Almost it seemed to reach into the scudding clouds. But for all its size, it was truly a Christmas tree. The tinsel was there, and the garish ornaments, while the electric candles appeared to be numbered by the thousand.

Alice uttered an exclamation and pointed. For a full minute the Brooke children stood and stared at the apparition. The waving branches beckoned to them.

"The charity tree!" whispered Constance.

Then, without a further word, the trio drove forward against the wind, crossed the street, and entered Madison Square.

A winding walk among the benches carried them to the outer rim of a crowd that stood oblivious to the night, conscious only of the big tree that touched a prismatic radiance in the center of the little park. It was a crowd in furs; much of it was not even a crowd in overcoats. But for all that, it was a Christmas crowd, and because of this the Brookes again felt themselves strangly aloof from it.

Only with the tree itself did they seem to be on terms of intimacy and understanding. The tree was friendly; it belonged as much to the three Brookes as to any of the hundreds who gazed up at its lights. So they stood and stared, unmindful of numbed feet and tingling ears, And while they stood the snow came; intermittent flurries at first—the outriders of the storm. And then, in steadily increasing numbers, the soft flakes, flying lightly in the gusts, swept down from the dark sky and began their patient work of covering the earth.

There was an uncertain stir in the crowd. Little groups began to detach themselves and wander off into the night. A man standing close to Constance turned up a flimsy coat collar, blew upon his fingers, and hurried away. Two women with baskets sighed, took their last look at the bravely blazing tree, and joined the scattering retreat. But still the Brooke children lingered.

A deep-voiced bell from somewhere beyond the square struck a heavy note—then another and another. Billy looked up at the great clock in the Metropolitan Tower. Midnight! Christmas eve was over.

"Merry Christmas, Connie," he said, slipping his arm around her shoulders.

She reached up and kissed him.

"Merry Christmas, Billy."

He turned to Alice, drew her close, and kissed a face that was wet with melted snowflakes.

"Merry Christmas, Alice!"

"Merry Christmas!"

And then the sisters stood for a minute, their arms about each other, their cheeks touching, their lips whispering "Merry Christmas!"

Constance felt a light hand on her arm, and, turning, looked down into the big eyes of a child. The girl was not more than 12, yet her face seemed strangely old for her small body. It was framed in a shawl, and it smiled up at Constance in a spirit of comradeship.

"I—I came out to see the tree," ventured the child.

"It's beautiful, isn't it?"

"Yes, ma'am. And I—I"——

"Yes?"

"I was just watchin' you, ma'am, an' the gentleman, an' the other lady."

The child paused and smiled again, this time in manifest confusion.

"And why did you watch us?" asked Constance gently.

"I was watchin' you say 'Merry Chris'mus.'"

"Oh!"

"An' I was wonderin' if"——

Once more the voice faltered, but the smile persisted.

Constance stooped down, took the small face between her hands, and kissed it.

"Did I guess right?" she whispered.

"Yes, ma'am. That was it. Merry Chris'mus! Now I'm going home, ma'am. We—we ain't got a tree."

"And we haven't any either, dear," said Constance gently.

The child stared in unbelief, then turned and started to hurry away.

"Wait, please!" called Alice.

She was fumbling with chilled fingers in a small purse.

"Merry Christmas!" she said, thrusting something into the child's hand.

The little girl stared down into her palm and hesitated.

"I didn't mean that," she said.

"But you will—just to please me," said Alice in a voice that was not very steady.

"Why—yes, ma'am. An'—Merry Chris'mus!"

The little girl with the shawl ran off into the night.

The three Brookes watched the small figure until the darkness blotted it out, then looked at each other, and then for a last time at the tree.

"Let's go," said Billy, linking arms again.

They crossed the square into Broadway, walking in silence until, after several blocks had been covered in the flying snow, Billy began to whistle an inconsequential little tune.

"Let's eat," he said presently, bringing his sisters to an abrupt stop in front of a window, where a man with a white cap was busy turning pancakes.

"Can we?" asked Constance eagerly.

"Sure," he answered grandly.

So they ate pancakes and drank steaming coffee, and discovered that paper napkins are a rather clever invention. And then out again into a white Christmas.

"Anybody got any money?" asked Billy, as they paused on the sidewalk. "Mine's gone."

"I gave mine to the little girl," said Alice.

"And I didn't have any," confessed Constance.

The Brooke children looked at each other and laughed.

"Then it's us for a walk," announced Billy.

"Of course," chorused Constance and Alice contentedly.

So they walked up Broadway, clinging tightly to each other's arms.

In the library of the Brooke mansion the efficiency man was pacing the floor. He was nervous, and, therefore, it was for him an extraordinary occasion. Frequently he glanced at the slowly ticking clock, comparing it with his watch, as though to make quite sure it were long past midnight.

He rang a bell and, to his surprise, Matilda answered instead of Horace.

"Where is Miss Brooke?" he demanded.

"I don't know," answered Matilda icily. She purposely omitted the "sir."

H. Hedge was unconscious of the fact that he had neglected to make his question inclusive. It seemed quite natural to have nobody but Constance in mind.

"Did she wear her new hat?" he asked irrelevantly.

"I don't know."

He shook his head in annoyance.

"Did she say when she would be back?"

"She didn't say anything."

"You're Miss Brooke's maid, aren't you?"

"Yes."

"Then how is it you don't know anything about her?"

Matilda stiffened her angular figure and looked squarely into the eyes of the efficiency man.

"If you would treat her as she ought to be treated," said Matilda with surprising heat, "she wouldn't have to run out of the house on Christmas eve."

H. Hedge stared in astonishment. The indictment caught him unprepared.

"There is nothing to be criticised in my treatment of Miss Brooke," he snapped. "Absolutely nothing. I treat her very well."

"Oh, do you?" sniffed Matilda. "She thinks differently."

The efficiency man fell into a brief reverie. He was really very much surpriced. The mere suggestion that he did not treat Constance properly shocked him. He was conscious of an intention to treat her in the best possible manner. Why, he had even bought her a hat—at a hundred and fifty! He wanted to do anything that Constance wanted—within reason. Why? Oh, H. Hedge had his reasons.

"I wish you would tell Miss Brooke"——

He stopped short. It was undignified to send messages by a servant. He would tell her himself, if necessary.

"Well?" demanded Matilda.

"I wish you would tell her, when she comes in, to change her shoes and stockings immediately. It is very wet outside."

It was not what he intended to say at all. Matilda snorted contemptuously.

One o'clock came. He lighted his fifth cigar and continued his walk, back and forth, the length of the library. Outside it was snowing harder than ever, and the wind had risen to half a gale. The cigar was nearly burned when a noise caught his keen ear and brought him to a sudden halt.

Somewhere a key was turning in a latch. An instant later he heard a stamping of feet, a muffled chorus of laughter, then the closing of the front door. The efficiency man's lips tightened and a stern look came into his eyes. Outside in the hall there was a mysterious whispering, lasting for nearly a minute.

Then the portieres parted and the three Brookes stood on the threshold. They looked like snow men, save for their glowing eyes and their red cheeks. They were laughing!

The efficiency man braced himself against the table and frowned.

"Where have you been?" he demanded shortly.

"That," said Constance, "we will never tell. We just stopped to wish you a Merry Christmas!"

Before the efficiency man could speak again the Brooke children vanished. He could hear them racing up the stairs, laughing as they ran.

For a little while he stood leaning against the table, glowering at the rug. Then as he walked across the room and snapped off the lights, he muttered.

"Oh the devil!"

Alice stole into Constance's room enveloped in a quilted kimono.

"Wasn't it fun?" she gasped.

"What?"

"To see E. E. sitting up for us."

Constance surveyed herself in the mirror and continued to comb her hair.

"Not so much," she observed.

"What?"

"I said, not so much."

Alice looked disappointed.

"He looked rather sad, I thought," added Constance.

"Sad! Well, why shouldn't he? Don't you want him to look sad? Oughtn't he to look sad?"

Constance ran her fingers through her hair and studied her image critically.

"I don't know, Alice," she said in a preoccupied tone. "It's Christmas, you know, and"——

"You're getting mushy," declared Alice brutally.

Constance arose from her dresser, grasped her sister firmly by the shoulders and propelled her out of the room. Mushy, indeed! Her cheeks were flaming. Nevertheless, he had looked sad. She was willing to leave it to anybody. No—she wasn't, either.

"THE SONG OF THE STARS"

Entertainments in Connection With Convention of World Advertising Men, and Performance of "Aida," Two Big Events in Social Life This Week—Two Weddings of Interest.

By Frances Cabanne Scovel.

SO filled is the week with affairs both social and civically important that the whole town will be on the go from early till late.

The most important of all is the annual convention of the Advertising Clubs of the World which begins today. There will be entertainments of all kinds in honor of the visitors both private and public in which "society" will have its share.

The big open air production of "Aida" in the Municipal Theater in Forest Park will open Tuesday evening with a wonderfully fine cast and the audience promises to be as gay with its box and parquet parties as the opera in winter at the height of the season.

Two particularly interesting weddings are scheduled—Miss Fredonia Johnson to Dr. David S. Pratt of Pittsburg, which will be Thursday evening at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Oscar Johnson, in Portland place, and that of Miss Blanche Turner to Kelton E. White, in Arcadia, Mo., on Saturday afternoon.

Besides there will be a Conservation rally at the Artists' Guild tomorrow afternoon and a big ball game for the benefit of the Tuberculosis Society and last but not least by any means a big ball game tomorrow afternoon at National League Park for the Teachers' Benevolent Annuity Association.

The School Board has given a half holiday for the occasion and before the game which will be between the Cardinals and the New York Giants, there will be an interesting program of rythmic dancing, gymnasium exercises, and a drill by the five High School Cadets.

It will be one of the busiest weeks on the spring calendar, so it is just as well the Registration parade has been postponed.

THE wedding of Miss Julia Bates, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Frederick Bates, to Arthur Hiemenz, was one of the most beautiful nuptial affairs ever seen in St. Louis. The ceremony was at the New Cathedral at high noon and the reception immediately afterwards at the Bates residence, 5326 Westminster place.

Archbishop Glennon, assisted by the Rev. Fathers Francis Gilfillan and Francis J. O'Connor, officiated.

The bride entered with her father. She was preceded by her sister, Miss Nancy Bates, and walking in front of her was little Winifred Walsh, the 4-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Walsh. The bride wore a gown of white satin with a drapery of point lace. There was a court train of satin embossed with velvet. Her veil, which was of tulle and extended almost to the end of the train, was edged all around with point lace about eight inches deep. It formed a head dress that fitted closely on her dark hair and was held with small sprays of orange blossoms. She carried a round bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley.

The bridemaid's gown was of pale blue taffeta silk with the skirt draped up at each side at the hip line. The bodice was cut into a deep "V" back and front over cream colored lace. The sleeves were of the lace. She wore a leghorn hat with a blue silk brim and a wreath of small pink and blue flowers. Her bouquet was of pink roses and blue larkspur.

The little flower girl wore a blue silk frock and a leghorn hat and carried her bouquet right up close to her face, with her eyes peeping just over the top of the blossoms.

The music before and during mass was unusually fine, as there was an orchestra with the organ and at the offertory the Bach-Gounod Ava Maria with a violin obligato was sung.

For the reception the Bates home and the residence of Mrs. Edward Walsh, Mrs. Bates' sister, adjoining, were connected by a canvas way that hid the garden behind. The guests went to Mrs. Walsh's to lay aside their wraps and went across the lawn to the Bates house for the reception. Mr. and Mrs. Bates and Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Hiemenz, the bridegroom's parents, received at either side of the bridal party, who stood before the mantel in the drawing room.

The house was decorated with larkspur and pink roses and over the mantel in the drawing room, where there was a tall mirror, garlands of roses were festooned.

In the garden between the houses a tent was spread and under it and the trees, tables were arranged for the luncheon.

The bride is one of the most charming young women in the fashionable set. She is the niece of Chouteau Maffitt, Miss Emilie Maffit and Mrs. Edward Walsh, who was Miss Julia Maffitt.

Her grandmother was Miss Julia Chouteau, whose residence at Sixth and Olive street gave place to the Julia Building and later to the present white tile skyscraper.

The bride was a Sacred Heart Convent girl and afterwards went to Miss Wright's school at Bryn Mawr. She and her sister are members of the Imperial, Junior League and everything else that girls of their wealth and position belong to.

Mr. Hiemenz is a graduate of Yale and is a member of the Racquet Club. John Ledlie was best man for Mr. Hiemenz and the ushers were Thomas R. Francis, William Maffitt Bates, the bride's brother; Geoffrey Kimball, Leo de Smet Carton and Dr. I. D. Kelley Jr.

Miss Ida Mellier, daughter of Mrs. Albin Mellier, of 4903 Berlin avenue, has returned from a visit of several weeks in Louisville, Ky.

A CHARMING uotdoor fete was given Friday afternoon in the extensive gardens of Kellerbrae, the country home of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Keller, for the members of the Minerva Literary Club. More than one hundred guests were entertained. The program included instrumental and vocal numbers, readings, and a number of interpretative dancers. The dancers were Miss Stella Eyerman, Miss Natalia Gabel, Miss Thelma Witzig and Miss Adeline Rotty. Readings were given by Mrs. Harry Wagoner, Miss Selma Practer and Mrs. Printy. There were violin solos by Miss Grace Davis and Miss Adelaide Blase and piano selections were played by Mrs. Yoder. The vocal numbers were given by Mrs. Arthur Haill and Mrs. D. J. O'Hayer.

Among those present were Mrs. J. E. Allen, Mrs. J. M. McBride, Mrs. L. P. Bell, Mrs. J. A. Weaver, Mrs. George Richardson, Mrs. M. W. Hayden, Mrs. E. E. Wall, Mrs. L. M. Ottofy, Mrs. Everett L. F. Smith, Mrs. John Rothm and Mrs. Ottmar Moll.

Distinctive hemstitching. 5c per yard, while you wait; pleating, buttons, work guaranteed. Becker's, 819 Washington, Main 4403.

IT was a regular game of baseball the Foresters played Friday afternoon on Francis Field, even to the scrap with the umpire, when they shook their fists in his face and went on in real ball fashion and made $418 for the American Ambulance field service and the fund for the "Children of the Frontier."

The boys, who are about 12 or 14 years old, played but five innings.

During the intermission a group of girls went through the audience to collect for the Red Cross dogs. Both they and their own dogs, who took part, were dressed in Red Cross costumes. They came away with $35 for the war dogs, one of which 5 cents keeps three days.

Altogether it was an interesting affair. Several hundred persons, their fathers and mothers and friends of the boys, were there, and when Tim McCabe of the Browns made that queer decision the youngsters flew at him full of fight—he must have thought he had got into a hornet's nest—and onto the field rushed some of the fathers to see what the rumpus was about.

The Foresters is an athletic organization. Raoul Pantaleoni is treasurer, George Lea Lambert is captain of one of the ball teams and James Wear Walker is captain of the junior team.

The Foresters are:

Clark Boeckler, Henry A. Boeckler Jr., George Bass, Shapleigh Boyd, Leonard Blake, Robert Mudd Cook, Hobart Cale, Paul Cornwall, Randolph Dyer, James M. Miss Eva Morrison, daughter of Mrs. G. H. Morrison of Webster Groves, and Kenneth Coggeshall, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Coggeshall of the same place, were married at the home of the bride, 440 Selma avenue, Friday evening, by the Rev. C. L. Kloss of the Congregational Church of Webster. A reception followed the ceremony.

Mr. Coggeshall and his bride have gone West for their honeymoon trip and will be at home after July 1 at 440 Selma avenue.

The bride was graduated from Washington University in 1913 and is a member of the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority.

Mr. Coggeshall graduated in the engineering department of Washington University.

EDGAR P. WITHROW, who is ill with typhoid fever, and Miss Elizabeth Sneed Rash were married yesterday at his bedside rather than postpone their wedding day.

No one was there but the bride's father, Dr. Ryland D. Rash, and her aunt, Mrs. S. D. Winter, with whom she made her home, and the bridegroom's parents, former Judge and Mrs. James E. Withrow.

No further plans have been made for their wedding trip or future home, as the bridgroom has been quite ill and is beginning to be better.

Mrs. Theodore F. Prewitt will close her apartment in the Oxford about June 20 and will go to her summer home in Wequetonsing, Mich.

Her granddaughter, Miss Dorothy Pilot, the daughter of P. Stuyvesant Pilot of New York, who has been at school in the East, will arrive in time to go with her.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Mildred Gladys Goerner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Goerner of 4150 Flora boulevard, to Arthur L. May of Ridgedale, N. Y.

Mrs. Lorainne F. Jones of Ivy Lodge, Kirkwood, Mo., will depart this week for a visit to her daughter, Mrs. Benjamin O'Fallon Randolph, and Mr. Randolph at "The Moorings," their place near Milwood, Va.

THE crop of engagements was larger than usual last week and on Thursday afternoon two more than usually important ones were announced almost at the same time. They were Miss Katherine Berthoud Clifford's to Truman Post Young and Miss Anna Potter's to Charles F. Galt, the artist.

Mrs. Robert H. Clifford gave a tea on that afternoon in honor of Miss Marie Soderer of New York, who is the guest of Miss Clifford, and formally announced the engagement. Miss Anna Potter came up from Arcadia for the occasion and had written notes to her friends telling them of her betrothal.

Miss Clifford's wedding has been set for June 30 and Miss Potter's will be celebrated in Arcadia the latter part of June or the first of July at the Potter summer home.

Miss Potter is the second daughter of Mrs. William B. Potter, who was Miss Agnes Farrar. She and her sister, Miss Minnie Potter, are considered immensely clever.

They have been out several winters and are members of the Imperial.

For the marriage of Miss Helen Beatrice Bryars yesterday to John Dudley Kincade, formerly of Kansas City, the parents of the bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. George P. Kincade, came from Kansas City and his sister, Mrs. Paul Gallagher, from Omaha, Neb. The bride's sister, Miss Mildred Bryars, arrived Friday from New York, where she had been studying music. The ceremony took place in the morning at 11 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bryars, at 5824 Raymond avenue. The Rev. Arthur L. Odell of the King's Highway Presbyterian Church officiated, and only the immediate family was present.

Mr. Kincade and his bride have gone away to spend their honeymoon, and will reside in St. Louis upon their return.

ST. LOUIS ASTONISHED BY MERCHANT'S STORY

A merchant relates the following: "For years I could not sleep without turning every hour. Whatever I ate caused gas and sourness. Also had stomach catarrh. ONE SPOONFUL buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-i-ka relieved me INSTANTLY." Because Adler-i-ka flushes the ENTIRE alimentary tract it relieves ANY CASE constipation, sour stomach or gas and prevents appendicitis. Physicians use it to remove foul and poisonous matter from the bowels which other mixtures (and the various oils and waters) are unable to dislodge. Dr. James Weaver, one of America's oldest physicians, states: 'I have found nothing to excel Adler-i-ka in my fifty years' practice." ALKALI MAKES SOAP BAD FOR WASHING HAIR

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.—ADV.

New Hair Remover Works Like Magic

(Positively Removes Roots and All)

No discovery of greater benefit to hair-disfigured womankind has been made in recent years than the marvelous phelactine method. It is entirely unlike and much superior to electrical, depilatory or other methods, because it actually removes the hair entire, roots and all—before your very eyes—easily, instantly, harmlessly! Get a stick of phelactine, follow the simple directions and you will be astonished and delighted—or the druggist will refund your money without question. It is odorless, non-irritating and so harmless a child could safely eat it. It leaves the skin so soft, smooth, hairless that not the least sign of your former trouble remains.—ADV.

STRONG FEELING IN NORWAY AGAINST GERMANY SHOWN

Outburst in Press as Result of Shipments of Nickel, Used in Torpedoes.

SHIPS ARE BEING SUNK

Spy Question Widely Agitated in View of Messages Reaching Submarines.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

CHRISTIANA, Norway, May 6.—Several recent happenings have served to emphasize the anti-German feeling which manifests itself predominately these days in the press and in public expression in Norway.

One of these was the widespread demand for the cancellation of the engagement of the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra (under Arthur Nikisch) to play here May 11. Even the newspaper Morkenbladet, which hitherto had been friendly in its attitude toward Germany, protested in a very satirical article against a German institution like this intruding upon Norwegian hospitality at a time when Norwegian ships are being torpedoed by the scores and Norwegian sailors engaged in their country's trade are being killed by the Germans.

Other newspapers and public men were even more caustic and energetic in their demand for the cancellation of the concert.

This free expressio of opinion followed shortly the defeat of a bill imposiong a very strict censorship upon the press with heavy penalties of imprisonment and fine for papers publishing anything likely to disturb Norway's "friendly" relations with another country. The Minister of Justice (M. Amberahamsen) had to quit the Cabinet on this defeat. A general rumor that this bill had been inspired from Germany drew forth a public denial by the Cabinet.

Feeling Against Nickel Plant.

Anti-German feeling also caused an outburst in the press against the Norwegian nickel syndicate, which from a period dating before the war had contracts with Germany for the export of refined nickel ore mined in the vicinity of Christiansand. This export has been greatly increased during the war, being one of the few sources from which Germany was able to get nickel, it being said here that without this Norwegian supply the manufacture of torpedoes in Germany would be greatly crippled.

Norway, it has been pointed out, gets this nickel back again in the form of German torpedoes, which sink its vessels and kill its sailors. The company has been severely criticised in the press and in private, for in this way indirectly profiting at the expense of Norway's ships and men, but it pleaded inability to break its contracts, declaring it was a Governmental function to decide regarding exports and imports.

During this discussion in the press part of the melting plant burned, and for want of special machinery it is said rebuilding will be impossible in the near future. By this accident the export of nickel may be stopped for a while, and the Government relieved of the necessity of passing upon the question of prohibiting it, an affirmative decision upon which it is considered would have been likely to lead to German measures of reprisal.

Spy Question Agitated.

The spy question has been another one widely agitated, in view of the messages said to be reaching German submarines giving information as to the movements of Norwegian vessels. It has been asserted that Germans have established wireless plants at secret places along the Norwegian coast, as it has been shown that German U-boats have been lying in wait for Norwegian ships just outside territorial waters within a couple of hours after ships had left port.

In one case the submarine officer is quoted as having scolded the Norwegian commander for being "overdue," as he ought to have been in the particular spot in question two hours previously, the U-boat commander informed him.

The Norwegian authorities declare the operation of a wireless station is impossible without their knowledge, but the recent discovery of a small wireless plant on an island outside of Bergen—the property of a school boy who was operating it experimentally, not knowing it was illegal—is considered to cast doubt upon this claim.

Private interests, chief among which are the shipowners, have offered high rewards for the detection of spies, promising $2500 for the first one caught and proved guilty and $250 for each one in addition.

M. U. AMBULANCE UNIT TO SAIL FOR FRANCE ON JUNE 23

50 Men Have Been Accepted for Service for Duration of the War.

COLUMBIA, Mo., June 2.—The two ambulance units of 50 men which will sail from New York on June 23 as representatives of the University of Missouri and the American Ambulance Field Service in France will stay for the duration of the war. The French and American Governments have refused to accept the services of the men who volunteer for six months, the previous period of enlistment.

The individual expense for each man has been reduced to $250 and the American Ambulance Field Service has every official assurance that the service will be taken over soon by the United States Government.

The State is being campaigned for funds and enough is expected to be raised by June 15 to finance the units.

ZULOAGA EXHIBIT WILL OPEN TODAY AT ART MUSEUM

Notable Display of Unique Work of Modern Spanish Painter Is to Be Made.

HAD A STORMY CAREER

Once Forsook Brush for Bull Ring and Vagabondage; Returned to Canvas When Wounded.

A notable exhibition of paintings by the modern Spanish artist, Ignacio Zuloaga, opens at the City Art Museum today. Zuloago is one of the dominant figures in the field of modern art, and his powerful canvases have brought again to Spanish art the glory which faded with Velasquez and Goya. The present collection, containing 43 canvases, is one of the best representative exhibitions of this modern master's work which has ever been assembled. It was brought to America through the efforts of Mrs. Philip M. Lydig of New York and sent to various museums throughout the country for exhibition.

Ignacio Zuloaga was born in the village of Eibar, Spain, in 1870. His parents were Basques, one of the oldest and haughtiest of the races dwelling upon the Iberian Peninsula. The Zuloagas have for many generations been skilled armorers, artists and craftsmen. The father of the painter was a metal worker and damasceener of such consummate skill that he was called the "Spanish Benvenuto Cellini."

Two Influences on His Work.

The two influences with which the young artist thus found himself surrounded were the sixteenth century traditions of his family and the bustling, colorful life of the thriving little village of Eibar; and these influences are today apparent in his masterful renditions of Spanish character, which for all their modernity, are dignified by a certain unmistakable air of the past.

Zuloaga suffered many hardships and bitter disappointments before achieving the reputation which he now enjoys. Through failure to earn a livelihood as an artist, he was driven to forsake his brush and to wander through the length and breadth of Spain as a vagabond, associating with the wild muleteers in the mountains, with the outlaws on the Portuguese border and with the distorted dwarfs and the religious fanatics of the remotest districts. As a climax to this career, he entered the bull ring as a toreador and did not return to his paints and canvas until the nineteenth bull which he encountered inflicted a severe wound.

Through these experiences, he gained an intimate and first-hand knowledge of the types which he wished to depict; and such good use has he made of this knowledge that Spain has not always felt flattered by the veritable sincerity of the images of her sons and daughters which he has presented.

One Characteristic Picture.

One of the most characteristic pictures in the present collection is the canvas "My Uncle Daniel and His Family," which shows the artist's uncle, Don Daniel Zuloaga, who is a manufacturer of artistic pottery at Segovia, and his three piquant daughters, Senoritas Theodora, Candida and Esperanza. The venerable ceramist and the three sprightly cousins of the artist, with their powdered faces and quaint Spanish costumes, are of the precise type which Zuloaga loves to paint—the old Basque race, uncontaminated by any mixture of foreign blood. It will be noted that each of the dramatically rendered figures is practically an independent portrait, and this quality of portraiture will be found in all of Zuloga's work.

Typically Spanish is the morbid composition, "The Brotherhood of Christ Crucified," with its ghastly crucifix, reminiscent of Ribera, and its portrait studies of Basque peasants in various attitudes of worship. A wide sweep of desolate, forbidding country with a walled city in the distance, forms a fitting background for the scene.

Even more poignantly sinister in tone is the "Victim of the Fete." This shows a vanquished picador returning from the bull-ring, his dejected figure and the form of his sorry, blood-stained steed silhouetted against an ominous background of darkling sky and dreary landscape. Zuloaga is said to have painted this picture as a protest against the fate meted out to the unsuccessful toreadors and picadors.

Among other unforgettable canvases are "Women on the Balcony," "The Cardinal," "Segovia," "Mlle. Lucienne Breval," "Portrait of Mme. La Comtesse Mathieu de Noailles," and "Future Idols."

City Owns "The Hermit."

Attention should also be called to the characteristic example of Zuloaga's painting, "The Hermit," which the City Art Museum purchased in 1914. In all these is displayed the same typical handling, the same grim and bitter outlook and the same fidelity to national character. Delicate tonalities and subtle color harmonies are neither to be found nor expected; for Zuloaga's work does not please by its charm and grace; its strength lies in its indisputable truthfulness—a truthfulness which we may not like, but whose power we cannot escape.

Beginning with today also the eleventh annual exhibition of water colors by American artists will be on display. The collection this year embraces 160 examples by a large number of artists.

Picnic of Former Lewis County Residents.

The annual reunion of former residents of Lewis County will be held on picnic grounds No. 4, in Forest Park next Sunday afternoon. One hundred and twenty-five former residents attended last year.

LEMONS WHITEN! MAKE THIS LOTION AND BEAUTIFY SKIN

Strain lemon juice well before mixing and massage face, neck, arms and hands.

What girl or woman hasn't heard of lemon juice to remove complexion blemishes; to bleach the skin and to bring out the roses, the freshness and the hidden beauty? But lemon juice alone is acid, therefore irritating and should be mixed with orchard white this way. Strain through a fine cloth the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing about three ounces of orchard white, then shake well and you have a whole quarter pint of the best skin and complexion lotion at about the cost one usually pays for a small jar of ordinary cold cream. Be sure to strain the lemon juice so no pulp gets into the bottle, then this lotion will remain pure and fresh for months. When applied daily to the face, neck, arms and hands it really does clear, smoothen and beautify the skin amazingly.

Any druggist will supply three ounces of orchard white at very little cost and the grocer has the lemons.

Social Events

Shawmut place, and Fred R. Riesmeyer, son of Mrs. Gustave Riesmeyer, of 3112 Hawthorne boulevard, were married Wednesday evening at 8:30 o'clock at the home of the bride.

The date of the wedding was advanced because the bridegroom is one of a group of St. Louis men who have purchased a yacht and given it to the Government for patrol duty, and will depart this week for Norfolk, Va., to enter the Naval Training School there.

Mr. Riesmeyer and his bride have gone to Chicago for a brief honeymoon trip, and when they return Mrs. Riesmeyer will remain with her parents while Mr. Riesmeyer is in the service.

The bride is one of the most attractive girls in society. She made her debut at the Veiled Prophets' ball three seasons ago. The other young men who will go to Norfolk are Charles T. and Alfred T. Abeles, Harvard '14, twin sons of Julius D. Abeles, of 4140 Washington boulevard; Marquard Forster, S. H. Kaiser and G. T. Stanley.

THIS is the day of the Spring Regatta at the Century Boat Club, when barge races and canoe races and races for married and single men will be held.

The boathouse on the Mississippi, at 5500 South Broadway, overlooking the water, is one of the most attrative clubs in or around St. Louis. At the foot of the bluff are the boathouses, and after 3:30 tomorrow afternoon the river for a mile straightaway will be a gay scene.

In the barge race at 4:30, with six oarsmen in each barge, Miss Evelyn Beach will be the coxswain in one and Mrs. William A. Meston in the other.

The coxswains in the married men's barge race will be Mrs. Ben Brinkman and Miss Elenor Franke.

There also will be a war canoe race, three loaded to the gun'l, with four men in each.

There will be a table d'hote dinner in the evening and dancing afterwards.

Mrs. C. F. Irwin of 814 Hamilton avenue, gave a luncheon yesterday to announce the engagement of her daughter, Miss Edith Irwin, to Jean P. Nelson. There was corsage bouquet at each guest's place with a card inscribed with both names attached. Miss Irwin is the granddaughter of the late Judge Charles W. Irwin and Mr. Nelson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert N. Nelson of Webster Groves. The marriage will be sometime in July.

Mr. and Mrs. I. Apple of the Hamilton Hotel are expecting Mrs. Samuel Rose and her daughter, Miss Ella Rose, to arrive this week from Stigler, Ok., for a visit.

The engagement of Miss Rose to Lewis T. Apple was recently announced.

Mrs. Joseph A. Mayer, formerly of St. Louis, has come from Montevido, Uruguay, to visit Mr. Mayer's sister, Mrs. W. Fitzgerald of 3450 Crittenden street. Mr. Mayer, who is the manager for the Swift company at that place, will follow in a short while.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Jamison have bought Kellerbrae, the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Keller, near Midland Valley Country Club, on the Creve Coeur line, and will take possession of it about June 15.

Mr. and Mrs. Keller will move to town.

The ladies of St. Ann's parish will entertain with eucher, lotto and peanut party in school hall, Page and Whittier street, on Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

The annual school picnic of the Holy Ghost parish will take place Tuesday at Eden Park, 6800 St. Charles rock road.

The Young Men's and Ladies' Hebrew Charity Society will hold its annual picnic today at Normandy Grove.

Mrs. A. Henry of 5875 Page boulevard gave a linen shower and luncheon on May 26 in honor of Miss Dorothy Wood of 5670 Kingsbury boulevard, whose marriage to E. Heimann will take place in June. Those present were Mmes. Stapp, Pflanze, Meyer, Afholter, M. Wood, W. Wood, J. W. Wood, Kilpatrick, Lowenstein, Eggerl, Chase, Bremser, Richardson, Wirner; Misses Gulbor, Downey, Kilpatrick, Sills, Wood, Vogel, Afholder, Wolf, Neumann, Summerfield, Coldwe, Wirner, V. Woods.

Mr. and Mrs. George York Sharkey of New York will arrive Saturday noon for a month's visit with Mr. Sharkey's brothers and sisters, Misses R. Ella and Annie Laurie Sharkey in the Lucille Apartments, 1853 South Spring avenue.

Miss Frances M. Ross of 5061 Wells avenue left last week for a summer visit to her friends, the Misses Teppenfeld, daughters of Mrs. M. Teppenfeld, formerly of St. Louis, and now of New York City. In July they will go to Niagara before returning to St. Louis.

Wednesday will be "Ladies' day" at Midland Valley Country Club, and there will be a special luncheon, bridge and 500 played, starting at 2:30 o'clock.

This evening there will be a brilliant wedding at Arcadia when Miss Pearl Shapiro, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Shapiro of 3018 Easton avenue, and Eli Kahan will be married. Two rabbis will officiate at the ceremony.

The bridal party will lead a grand march with the bride and her mother and the bridegroom and his father. They will proceed to the end of the room where a bower of greenery will be erected and there, according to the custom, the bride will be given in marriage by her mother and the bridegroom by his father.

The bride will have two attendants, Miss Minnie Kershman and Miss Minnie Shapiro. The bridegroom's attendants will be his brother, Sam Kahan, and Louis Feldman.

The bride will wear a gown of white silk lace over white satin. Her veil will be of tulle worn with lilies of the valley and she will carry a bouquet of white roses. The bridemaids will wear flesh-colored net and will carry pink roses.

Following the ceremony, which will be at 6 o'clock, there will be a supper and a dance.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bugger of Troy, Ill., have announced the marriage of their daughter, Miss Adelia Bugger, to August A. Bieg of 907 Ann avenue, St. Louis, for June 13. The wedding ceremony will be performed at 9 o'clock mass at St. John's Catholic Church, Black Jack, Ill. The bride will be attended by the bridegroom's sister, Miss Johanna Bieg, and the bride's brother, Zeno Bugger, will be groomsman. Master Alphonse Munier, the bride's nephew, will serve as ring bearer. Little Helen Joseph, the bride's niece, will be flower girl. The Rev. William Pachlhofer of Troy, Ill., will officiate. After the church service there will be a reception at the home of the bride's parents.

Misses Daisy Flook of 1343 Montclair avenue and Marjorie French have returned from a visit to Misses Ruby Gray and Evelyn Payne of St. Charles, Mo.

Mrs. J. P. Mullen of Newark, N. J., accompanied by her two daughters, Misses Dorothy and Ethel Mullen, are stopping at the Planters Hotel en route to California.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Edward O'Neil of 4250 Lindell boulevard are announcing the birth of a son, May 25. Mrs. O'Neil was Miss Mary Frances Moore.

The engagement of Miss Mabel Neustadt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Neustadt of 5213 Wells avenue, to Earl E. Fay has been announced. The wedding will take place June 30, at the though the courage and self-sacrifice of the allies' soldiers are as great as those of the Germans. They explain, too, why the three hundred millions of allies—this takes no account of their colonial resources or of the support drawn from transoceanic neutrals—have not yet succeeded in defeating Germany, which entered the war with a population of 68,000,000, and one ally, Austria-Hungary, of whose 52,000,000 people three-quarters were directly antagonistic to Berlin.

WHY AMERICA MUST STRIKE HEAVY BLOW AT PRUSSIANISM

These capital mistakes made by the allies are as follows: They believed that a friendly agreement with Bulgaria was possible, although that country was treaty-bound to Berlin and Constantinople long before the war. They cherished illusions concerning King Constantine, who, above all else, was brother-in-law of the Kaiser. They organized the Dardanelles expedition, which should never have been attempted. Even if this operation had been judged technically feasible, its futility would have been apparent if the allies had realized—and it was their arch-error not to realize—that the strategic key to the whole European war was the Danube. The mere occupation by the allies of the territory stretching from Montenegro through Servia to Rumania would have resolved all the essential problems of the conflict. Cut off from the Central Empires, Bulgaria and Turkey, whose arsenals were depleted by the Balkan disturbances of 1912-1913, would have found it impossible to make a strong stand against the allies. Turkey, who had been imprudent enough to defy them, would have been obliged to open the Straits within a very short time for sheer lack of munitions to defend them. This opening of the Straits would have been effected by a strong pressure by the allies on the south of Hungary. Moreover, by the same action the Central Empires would have been barred from reinforcements and supplies from the Orient. Germany, finding herself cut off on land in the south as she was blockaded by sea in the north, would have been obliged to come to terms.

Allies Not Prepared.

Unhappily, the general staff of the allies in the West were not prepared to grasp the politico-scientific character of the war, especially the cardinal importance of the economic factor. This ignorance remained unenlightened until Roumania was crushed in 1916. As a result, for 27 months the Balkans were looked on by the leaders in the West as being of only secondary military importance. During these 27 months the allies were obsessed by the idea that they would vanquish Germany on the Western front by a war of attrition. This conviction delayed the Salonika-Belgrade expedition, and when it was finally undertaken, it was on too small a scale to insure success. Such a grave error would never have been committed by the allied strategists if they had fully realized that the principal objective of the Pan-German scheme, for the attainment of which Germany was primarily fighting, was the seizure of the Orient. This point of view, however, was for a long time ignored, in spite of the tireless efforts made by a few to demonstrate its vital importance.

The Austro-Germans, profiting by this basic mistake of the civil and military chiefs of the entente, were able in October-November, 1915, to join hands with Bulgaria and Turkey over the corpse of Servia. From that time on the General Staff at Berlin has been profiting by this situation, improving it and consolidating it by seizing half of Rumania toward the close of 1916. The direct result of the mistakes of the allies, coupled with the methodical procedure of Berlin, has been the realization of nine-tenths of pan-Germany.

Pan-Germany's Elements.

This pan-Germany is composed of two elements. First, the great occupied territories taken by Germany from Belgium, France, Russia, Servia and Rumania. Second, the practical seizure effected by her at the expense of her own allies: Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria and Turkey; for, as a matter of fact, the quadruple alliance is nothing but a great illusion carefully fostered by the Kaiser for the purpose of concealing the true situation from the neutrals—particularly the United States. If one wishes to see things as they are, one must realize that Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria and Turkey are not the allies—that is, the equals—of Germany. These three states are practically the vassals of Berlin, in whose sight they scarcely count for more than Saxony or Bavaria. The principal proof of this state of affairs lies in the fact that the Kaiser wields an uncontested supremacy from Hamburg to the British front at Bagdad.

Since the beginning of hostilities there has been a formidable extension of Prussian militarism. At first, it held in its grasp only the 68,000,000 people of the German Empire. By April, 1915, it had extended and organized its influence among the 30,000,000 of Austro-Hungarians, who, until that time had taken orders from their own independent military chiefs. After October-November, 1915, the date of Serbia's downfall, the Prussian system reached out to Bulgaria and Turkey. By taking account of these extensions and adding together the populations of the territories occupied by Germany, together with those of her infatuated allies, one finds that today—April, 1917—Prussian militarism no longer controls 68,000,000 souls, as in the beginning of the war, but about 176,000,000 European and Ottoman subjects.

Fact Must Be Faced.

This is the brutal, overwhelming fact which Americans must face if they wish to learn the sole solution of the war which will assure to them, as well as to the rest of the world, a durable peace.

The following figures will show how the three groups of the population of Pan-Germany are divided at the beginning of 1917:

1. The Masters
	Germans		73,000,000
2. The Vassals
	Magyars	10,000,000	21,000,000
	Bulgars	5,000,000
	Turks	6,000,000
3. The Slaves
	French (about	1,000,000	82,000,000
	Belgians	7,500,000
	Alsatians, Lorrainers	1,500,000
	Danes	300,000
	Poles, Lithuanians	22,000,000
	Ruthenians	3,500,000
	Czechs	8,500,000
	Jugo-Slavs	11,000,000
	Roumanians	3,000,000
	Italians	800,000
	Armenians	2,000,000
	Levantines
	Ottoman Greeks	1,000,000 1,000,000
	Arabs	6,000,000
	Total		176,000,000

To sum up, 73,000,000 Germans rule over 21,000,000 vassals and 82,000,000 slaves—Latin, Slavic, Semitic, belonging to thirteen different nationalities—who are bearing the most cruel and unjustifiable yoke that the world has ever known.

It is undeniable, moreover, that each extension of Prussian militarism over a new territory has enabled Germany to prolong the struggle by obtaining new supplies of food, new reinforcements to press into her service and territory to exploit, new civil populations, whose labor is made use of even in works of a military nature. As a result, the technical problem now confronting the allies in Europe is, through the mistakes of their former leaders, infinitely more complicated than at the outbreak of hostilities.

Today Berlin, by means of Prussian terrorism methodically and pitilessly employed, disposes of the military and economic resources of 176,000,000 people, occupying a strategic position in the center of Europe which is all to her profit. It is this very state of things founded on the slavery of 82,000,000 of human beings, which is intolerable.

Pan-German Destruction.

Many times, and rightly, the allies have declared that it was not their object to exterminate the German people and bring about their political extinction. On the other hand, it is just and essential to proclaim that pan-Germany must be destroyed. On this depends the liberty, not only of Europe, but of the whole world. This is the point of view which, in the crisis of today, should prevail with Americans, for the following reasons. Suppose that pan-Germany were able to maintain itself in its present position. It cannot be denied that its territory contains considerable latent

Women! Stop Corn Pain Few Drops and Corns Lift Out

Don't hurt a bit! Cincinnati man discovers drug that works miracles—No humbug!

Your high heels have put corns on your toes and calluses on your feet, but why care now?

This tiny bottle holds an almost magic fluid. A genius in Cincinnati discovered this ether compound and named it freezone. Small bottles of freezone like here shown can be had at any drug store for a few cents. Don't limp or twist your face, but get a bottle of freezone and apply a few drops on your tender, aching corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so shriveled and loose that you can lift it off with the fingers.

Just think! You get rid of a hard corn, soft corn or a corn between the toes, as well as hardened calluses without suffering one particle. Freezone is magic!—ADV.

Maison de Bernard

Beginning Monday, Maison de Bernard will sacrifice at one-half the former price, all Gowns, Wraps and Suits from the recent lot shown in their rooms. All imported garments will be sold for the actual duty cost only, the cost or value of garment being disregarded.

TRIPLE STRIP

CORSETS AT NEW PRICES

On July 1, 1916, the increased costs of materials compelled us to slightly advance the prices of certain Nemo models. At that time we were hoping that the material market would soon decline to normal. Instead of that, costs of all materials have steadily increased, and are going higher every day.

Nevertheless, we have protected our customers' interests by averaging our reserve stocks (bought before the great advance) with new materials bought at new high prices, thereby avoiding, so far, any general increase in retail prices.

Now, however, a further and greater advance in the cost of all corset materials is positively assured. In fact it may even become very difficult to secure certain materials, of the Nemo standard of quality, at any price.

Nemo quality shall never deteriorate; and, our reserve stocks being practically exhausted, we reluctantly give advance notice of an increase in retail prices of certain Nemo models, to be in effect

On and After Monday, July 2

Following are the few models now advanced:

SELF-REDUCING—Nos. 300, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 324, 326 and 344 Retail price now $3.50—will be advanced to $4.00

SELF-REDUCING—Nos. 506, 508, 522 and 523 Retail price now $5.00—will be advanced to $6.00

These advances affect only the few models named, and represent only a fraction of the increased cost of production. Still further advances, and on additional models, may be compelled in the near future, because of scarcity of materials and uncertainty of supply. We therefore suggest that it will be true economy to secure a liberal supply of your favorite Nemo model while present low prices prevail.

military and economic resources, as well as strategic positions of world-significance, like the Dardanelles. If these resources were freely exploited and developed to their highest pitch by the relentless organizing spirit of Berlin, Prussianized Pan-Germany, dividing Europe in two, would dominate the Continent, uncontestably and indefinitely, by means of her crushing strength. France, Russia, England, Italy, ceasing to exist as great Powers, could only submit to Germany's will. And Berlin, mistress of Europe, would soon realize, not merely the Hamburg-Bagdad and Antwerp-Bagdad railways, but the Brest-Bagdad line as well; for Brest has long been coveted secretly by the Pan-Germanists, who would make of it the great military and commercial transatlantic port of Prussianized Europe.

Moreover, if Germany achieved the ruin of the allies, it is entirely probable that the General Staff of William II would launch a formidable expedition against the United States without delay, in order to allow her no time to organize herself against the Prussian tyranny hypothetically dominating Europe. Even if Berlin felt it necessary to defer this step, Americans would none the less be forced to prepare for the inevitable struggle and to serve an apprenticeship to militarism which would be odious to them. If Americans, then, see things as they really are and perceive the dangers to which they are pledging their future, they will be convinced that they, quite as much as Europeans, have a vital interest in the annihilation of pan-Germanism. In a word, it is clear that any peril accruing to the United States from Europe can arise only from so formidable a power as pan-Germany, and not from a Germany kept within her legitimate frontiers and forced to behave herself, by the balance of other Powers.

Moral Consideration.

We must also realize that the moral considerations at stake are a matter of the liveliest interest to the United States. Can republican America allow the feudal spirit which kindled the torch of this war to triumph over the world? This spirit is made up of the following elements: the feudalism of the Prussian Junkers, chief prop and stay of the Hohenzollerns; the feudalism of the great Austrian land owners; the feudalism of the Magyar grandees, whose caste-spirit is precisely the same as that of the Prussian lordlings, and the Turkish feudalism of Enver Bey and his friends. In other words, this fourply feudal spirit which is the basis of pan-Germany is in radical and absolute opposition to the democratic spirit of the modern world. Granting for a moment that Germany were victorious, Russia, after a frightful reign of anarchy, would be forced to submit once more to the yoke of autocracy. As for the peoples of Western Europe, reduced to worse than slavery, they could only renounce their dearest ideals—the ideals for which they have shed their blood for centuries.

The present war, then, is manifestly a struggle a outrance between democracy and feudalism. To Americans as well as to Europeans falls the task, not only of preserving their corporeal independence, but of saving our common civilization. This can be accomplished only by the destruction of pan-Germanism.

Berlin's Peace Plan.

It is plain that Berlin, failing so far to crush the allies completely, is bending every effort to maintaining pan-Germany in its present position, so that, after peace is declared, it may crystallize and swiftly develop its full power. When, in December, 1916, President Wilson requested the belligerents to make known the causes for which they were fighting, the Government of Berlin issued no definite statement. The reason for this attitude is plain. If Berlin still hopes to enforce her outrageous pretensions by her immense military power, she cannot possibly put down her terms in black and white, in a document subject to general perusal, without instantly calling down on her head the blazing reprobation of the civilized world.

The allies, on the contrary, replied to Mr. Wilson's question easily and with precision.

The universal attention drawn to this reply has entailed advantages and disadvantages. By the very nature of things, the allies definitely announced that the smaller nationalities in Turkey, Austria-Hungary, and the Balkans must be set free, thus implying a radical opposition to the Hamburg-Persian Gulf idea. This has enabled Berlin, for one thing, to bind her accomplices at Vienna, Budapest, Sofia and Constantinople more closely, if possible, to her cause, and also to galvanize for a still longer period the forces of the German people, who are resolved to endure the bitterest suffering in order to assure for themselves, after peace comes, the immense advantages accruing from the fait accompli of Pan-Germanism.

By way of compensation for this, the publicity given the reply of the allies has accomplished two excellent ends. First of all, it has permitted every one to see that the common purpose of the allies is to solve the Central European problem, which, as a matter of fact, is not only European, but of universal interest, since such a solution puts a quietus on German dreams of world-domination. This publicity, too, has made it possible to compare the principles invoked by the allies in their peace terms with those of President Wilson, proclaimed in his message to the Senate on Jan. 22, 1917, and to establish the fact that these principles are identical.

German Agents in Russia.

Let us now accept the following facts: The troops of France are beginning to be exhausted. The iniquitous administration of the Czar has seriously compromised the provisioning of the Russian army with food and munitions. In that vast country, it is possible that idealistic extremists may guide the revolution toward pacifism or anarchy. The swarming agents of Germany are working there without respite. If their efforts succeed, the strength of Russia will swiftly dissolve. This would practically insure a German victory, for, with the Russian armies demoralized, all the forces of Pan-Germany could be flung against the Franco-British front. Moreover, if, from the moral standpoint, the Berlin Government is universally to be despised, the same cannot be said about her general technical military ability, whose elements are as follows:

Berlin is incontestably mistress of Pan-Germany—that is, she has absolute disposal of vast resources in men and in the manifold products of a great territory with a population of 176,000,000 The Kaiser's Great General Staff, whose intellectual resourcefulness cannot be questioned, is quick to make the most of every lesson taught by the war. The annual levies of men from the various territories of Pan-Germany certainly outnumber the losses sustained each year by her troops. It is therefore, in my opinion, a grave error to assume, as the allies have done, that the Germans can be beaten by mere attrition of their forces. By organizing under one uniform system the soldiery furnished by the many different countries of Pan-Germany, Prussian militarism has unquestionably given its troops a cohesion and a unity which was unknown to the vassal-allies of Germany before the war. This state of affairs has undoubtedly added to the military effectiveness of the vast armies which take their orders from Berlin.

Advantage of Errors.

The German military authorities most advantageously employed the respites given them by the strategic errors of the allies. Never have the broad lines of trenches, the far-lung battle frontiers, been more powerfully guarded than now. Never have the Germans had more abundant stores of munitions. Nover has the network of railways covering the length and breadth of Pan-Germany been so complete. Never has the Great General Staff, making full use of its central position, been better able to concentrate on any front with lightning speed. For these reasons, it is my opinion that we may safely say that never before has the Berlin Government, from a military point of view, been so strong. The various statistics which justify such a conclusion are, I think, to be relied on. Even supposing them to be exaggerated, it is much better to run the risk of overestimating the enemy's strength than to underestimate it. Many of the allies' mistakes sprang from neglect of this axiom.

German Plans for 1917.

Let us now attempt to forecast the German military plans for 1917. For some weeks persistent reports have been telling of their tremendous preparations for hurling an offensive against the Russian front. As for the Franco-British front in the west, it was stated that the General Staff at Berlin would be glad to hold things stationary on that side until, after winning the victory on which they

FOR RUN-DOWN PEOPLE

The condition of being "run-down" is one that doctors do not recognize as a disease; the physician of today who gets his training in a hospital where severe disorders only are encountered knows little about it. But those who are run-down in health know that it is not a fancied affliction.

The expression "run-down" comes from the feeble action of an unwound clock, and the comparison is a good one. Applied to health it means a condition in which all the bodily functions are enfeebled. Appetite fails, the digestion is impaired, the nerves are impoverished, the complexion becomes pale, there is no animation but rather worry and mental depression. Fatigue is a constant symptom.

No particular organ being affected you must look for relief to the blood that circulates everywhere. Improvement in the blood is quickly felt throughout the entire system and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are the best and most convenient blood builders. As the blood becomes rich and red, the various organs regain their tone and the body recovers its vigor. If you have any or all of the above symptoms try the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Fifty cents a box at your druggists.—ADV.

count in the east, they are free to devote their attentions to the occidental theater. This project, of course, cannot be confirmed; but the voluntary shortening of the western line by the Germans would lend color to its probability. Moreover, such a plan would coincide perfectly with the present interests of Berlin, with the habitual methods of the Kaiser's General Staff, with the broad Pan-Germanist scheme, and with the personal preferences of Marshal von Hindenburg. It is also natural that the Germans should avail themselves of the sinister and undeniable effects of the Russian imperial administration on the army and civil population of the country before the new government at Petrograd has time to repair the all-too-abundant harm that has been wrought.

We must cherish no illusions. As long as it can dispose of the vast resources of Pan-Germany, which, to my thinking, are still taken too lightly by the allies; while the results of the Russian revolution are still uncertain; while the reorganization of the Muscovite armies still remains uncompleted, the government at Berlin, in spite of its serious problems connected with the food supply, is still convinced that it can win a decisive military victory by dealing one by one with its adversaries. And so we should foresee that the German General Staff will meet its problems in succession.

Rumano-Russian Line.

It seems probable, then, that it will follow the basic principles of warfare and concentrate all the forces at its disposal agints the weakest front. This, without question, is the Roumano-Russian line. Its great extent, together with the formidable development of the German railway system (infinitely superior to that of the Russians), makes it easier to introduce the element of surprise, which is of capital importance for swift, decisive victory. The Russians, too, are certainly less well provided with munitions of war than the Franco-British troops; and the Germans have succeeded in further weakening them by means of the terrible explosions recently engineered by their spies at Archangel. As a result of the execrable administration of the former Government, the food situation in Russia is most critical, while the revolutionists are not yet sure of the reorganization of the military forces. The Germans, therefore, have an unquestionable interest in profiting without delay by this state of affairs.

A vigorous offensive on the Eastern front is also in harmony with the Pan-Germanist plan, which for 25 years has looked forward to the seizure by Germany of Riga, Little Russia and Odessa. And a German success in the south of Russia would be big with economic, naval, military, and moral consequences of world-import. The Germans would become masters of the rich and boundless wheatlands of Little Russia which, from the midst of their food problems, they watch with greedy eyes. The capture of Odessa and the complete conquest of the Black Sea, by means of transports (sent in large numbers down the Danube, thus permitting surprise attacks at vital points), would end in the loss of the Crimea and, probably, the fall of the Caucasus into the hands of the Turco-Germans. The British, then, could no longer hold out at Bagdad. Freed by such successes from all immediate fear of Russia, the Germans could then turn in enormous strength against the Balkan front of the Allies. Under these hypothetical conditions, one may assume that the Allied army north of Salonika, demoralized by the Russian reverses, would be taken prisoners or driven into the sea.

Operations in the East.

These various operations in the East vigorously taken in hand, as the General Staff at Berlin knows so well how to do, would require four or five months for their execution. This interval of moral effect brought about by the supposed German victories, would act, as it were, as an automatic preparation for the final Teutonic offensive on the Western front. It must be remembered that during these four or five months the submarine warfare, pursued more and more ruthlessly, would considerably impede neutral navigation and decimate the tonnage of the Franco-British merchant marine. The food problems and the war expenditure of the allies would be enormously increased. Even if their pressure has forced the Kaiser to evacuate a considerable portion of France and Belgium, the importance of this retreat would be only relative, for it would be temporary. Following our thesis, then, if Russia were beaten, the army of Salonika driven into the sea, and the food crisis of the West intensified, the moral depression and discouragement among the soldiers and civilians of France would be most profound. Under the given material and psychological conditions, the concentration of all the Pan-German forces on the Western front would probably permit them to break through. This would spell ruin for France and for England as well, and assure that decisive victory which would mean the mastery of Europe.

If this theatrical German plan is to be accomplished in 1917, however, the general technical situation in Europe must remain as it stands at present. No new power capable of making itself felt on the battlefield must come to the support of the allies. It is necessary, then, that the scheme be carried out in 1917, before the Russian revolution, which is essentially favorable to the allies, has time to repair the damage done by the former regime, and before the United States, realizing that it is to their vital interest to take part directly and without delay in the war on the Continent, are ready to do so effectively.

Tactics of Berlin.

The tactics of Berlin, after being forced to a diplomatic rupture with Washington, consist in doing everything to avoid actual blows with the United States, while keeping up a vigorous submarine campaign, and in making frantic efforts to effect a miscarriage of American military preparation—especially as regards sending reinforcements to Europe. In pursuance of this scheme, Berlin instructed Vienna to send Washington a dilatory answer concerning submarine warfare, in order to avoid a diplomatic break and thus gain time. This procedure was specifically intended to make America believe that Austria-Hungary can act independently of Germany. And so, by virtue of this delusion, William II veils the existence of that Pan-Germany whose reality, for the sake of his plans, must not be revealed until the latest possible moment.

Warning to America.

If the program for 1917, which we have good reason to attribute to the Germans, were substantially carried out (and, after all, this is not impossible), in six to eight months the United States would find themselves face to face with a Germany controlling the resources, not only of the present-day Pan-Germany, but of all Europe. And, Americans, do not think your turn would be long coming. Do not take it for granted that the German people, worn out by the endless horrors of war, would cry to their masters, 'Peace at any price!'

The German people, as I know them, filled with enthusiasm by a victory that would be without parallel in the history of the world, maddened by incalculable plunder, would follow the lead of their Emperor more blindly than ever. The pride and ambition of the Kaiser and his General Staff are so prodigious that, unless all signs fail, they would give the United States no chance to organize against a Prussianized Europe.

In eight or ten months, after new advances had been made to Japan, who would be isolated by the defeat of her allies in Europe, and with the aid of the German-Mexicans and German-Americans, whose mission, as everyone knows, is to paralyze by every possible means the military organization of the United States, it would be possible to look for ruthless action against America by the Pan-Germanized forces of Europe.

The prediction of such extraordinary eventualities will no doubt seem fantastic and unprobable to many of my American readers. I beg them, nevertheless, to consider them seriously. As a matter of fact, if we consider what has been achieved by the Germans since August, 1914, the events which I have forecast are much less amazing than those indicated by me in 1901, when, in my book, "L'Europe et la Question d' Autriche au Seuil du XXe Siecle," I unmasked the Pan-German plot, which was then looked on as a mere phan-

WILDWOOD BY THE SEA AND WILDWOOD CREST

Large, safe, able powerboats carry anglers daily out to sea to the "Five-Fathom Banks," the finest fishing grounds north of Florida, for bluefish, seabass, croakers, porgies, weakfish and tautog.

Even the novice with a hook and line can land the 40 to 80 pound channel bass or "red drum" from the surf without the use of a boat.

Devotees of still-water fishing take from the sounds mammoth strings of kingfish, flounders, perch and weakfish, as well as myriads of delicious crabs.

The great abundance of fresh sea food caught here daily makes living much cheaper than at resorts where Nature has not provided such a plentiful supply.

tasmagoria—although as a matter of fact it was so real that it now stands almost completely fulfilled.

You Americans, then, should learn your lesson from the past. Your own best interest lays on you the obligation to face facts which may at present seem improbable, and to prepare yourselves without losing a day for meeting the gravest perils. As the situation now stands, a delay in making a decision may involve disastrous results. For instance, the three weeks of parleying indulged in by the allies before deciding to send troops to Serbia were of the utmost significance. Those three lost weeks simply prevented the allies from achieving victory, and resulted in an unthinkable prolongation of the war.

The surest, the most economical way for Americans to avoid excessive risks is to prepare at once for the severest kind of struggle, on the hypothesis that the allies may sustain grave reverses. Everything favors concerted action by the United States and the allies. Their material and moral interests are identical, and, in doing away with autocracy, Russia removed the well-justified distrust felt in the United States for the land of the Czars. As we have seen, a German victory over Russia, involving the fall of Salonika and, later, the breaking of the western front, would be unquestionably the most dangerous eventuality imaginable for the future security of the United States. American interest, therefore, demands not only that support should be given France and Great Britain, but that the United States should hasten to help the Russians, who will probably be called on first to meet the onslaught.

Co-Operation With Japan.

On reflection, perhaps, Americans may even find it worth while to give further thought to an idea which, a few months ago, would have seemed preposterous to them. Since President Wilson cherishes the ideal of the brotherhood of nations—a noble conception, but one which can be realized only after Prussian militarism is ground in the dust, after the Hapsburgs and the Hohenzollerns have gone the way of the Romanoffs—why should not this world-crisis provide an opportunity for intimate co-operation between the United States and Japan?

Even if Americans were to admit the necessity of so doing, it will be long before they are in the position to throw into the European conflict those reinforcements which, by exercising a decisive influence, would hasten the end of the mad slaughter. At the present moment Japan alone, outside of Europe, has at her disposal a trained army capable of taking the field at once. Everything considered, President Wilson might well decide that the interests of humanity called for the intervention of Japan in Europe. If he succeeded in convincing Tokyo of this, he would stand out as the great, decisive figure of the war. From the technical point of view, it is certain that victory for the allies calls for a simultaneous concentric attack on all the fronts of pan-Germany. For that reason, Japanese troops on the Russian line, at Bagdad, Alexandretta, and Salonika, would furnish the Eastern poshition of the allies with the supplementary strength that they need to achieve decisive results and so hasten the end of the whole war.

By way of conclusion, let me again urge my point that the line of action morally and materially most profitable to the United States is that which, by achieving the total destruction of Pan-Germany and Prussian militarism, will terminate the horrible carnage once for all. This is the moral pointed by the past. If the allies had undertaken the Saloniki-Belgrade expedition in the beginning of 1915, the war would have ended a year ago. If you, Americans, had cast your lot with us a year ago, it would be ending about now. If you act today, with all your energies, and especially if you compass the Japanese intervention, you will save the lives of millions of men who, without your military and diplomatic support, will surely be sacrificed.

The real problem for America is clearly to discern pan-Germany lurking beneath the Quadruple Alliance of the Central Powers, and to decide to strike this Pan-Germany quick and hard. This is the one and only way to foil the odious Prussian militarism which threatens the liberty of the world.

WICKERSHAM SAYS CENSORSHIP PLAN IS UNCONSTITUTIONAL

to the British public in his newspapers, in the face of Government, press and popular disapproval, that by telling the truth he showed the incompetence of the men in power.

The publication of the report of the commission headed by Lord Cromer, which revealed the shocking mismanagement of the Gallipoli campaign is an example of wholesome publicity. The people are entitled to know when their servants abuse their trust.

If this censorship bill should be carried by Congress with the muzzle-clause so earnestly required by the administration, the American people will be kept in absolute ignorance of what the United States Government is doing in the present war. It is imbecilic to expect a great nation like ours to accept the underlying theory of this censorship idea, which is that the administrative officers of the United States Government are infallible.

People Must Know All.

It has been said in support of the proposed censorship, that the tremendous responsibility resting upon the Cabinet leaders of this war exposes them to errors, and so that such mistakes of executive acts may not through criticism in the press cause national unrest, the press muzzle is necessary. We must not forget, however, while we admit that error is more than possible, that there is a sovereign intelligence in the great national American mind that should be utilized for the support of these possible errors which our overburdened administrative officers may make.

By all means, let the American people assist them. Let the American people who are to pay for their patriotic devotion to a great cause decide whether those they have employed for political service are serving the peaple as well as they should be served.

The question has naturally arisen why Congress, representing the national principles of liberty and free speech, should have wasted so much time and allowed so much Americanism to evaporate, in its discussions of this proposition to stifle outside of the legislative halls opinion so freely exercised within them.

My own impression of the reasons for all this is that we have a body of men in Congress who have been used to small business, to small affairs. We have in our Congress today inferior national intelligence and political fear.

The few leaders who have stood out before the country in discussions of extraordinary legislative plans have not been strong enough to stem the tide of political timidity. The defeat of the censorship bill is largely the fear of newspaper influence affecting re-election.

But what can we expect, with a leader in the Senate at the head of the Foreign Relations Committee who is pro-German, and a gentleman from North Carolina, the so-called leader of the House of Representatives, who opposed the President in his effort to lead America to join hands with France and England in "making the world safe for democracy"' It will creep into his brains no matter how he tried to keep it out. We have a Congress with bulk, but without leadership. Largely small men, used to dealing with small people. The nation will not be long content with such. Great issues demand larger capacity. Men who need no censorship to forestall criticism of their acts will be sought and found to lead in the legislature and administrative fields if America is to play her part in this great struggle in a manner becoming her traditions.

INDICATIONS POINT TO A NEW RETIREMENT BY THE GERMANS, SIMONDS SAYS

Reports of Burning of Villages and the Destruction of Lens and St. Quentin Evidence That Teutons Again Plan to Withdraw—Movement May Be Early but Policy Is for Delay.

By Frank H. Simonds.

On Sept. 24 last year, three months after the beginning of the battle of the Somme, I pointed out in a Sunday article the possibility of a German retreat in consequence of allied progress in that battle. At that time I indicated that there were two possibilities of retreat—a limited retreat on a front between Arras and Soissons to avoid the perils incident to allied progress on the immediate front of the Somme, and a more extensive retreat to the French frontier.

Contrary to general expectations, there was no retreat last year. Detailed information which is now coming to hand and information which I obtained while I was with the British army in France point to the fact that had there not been an unexpectedly early onset of bad weather last year the German line had become so shaky that a retreat would have been necessary.

As it turned out, the bad weather, which began last year a month earlier than usual, enabled the Germans to stand in their lines on the Somme until March. Their retreat then was a retreat consequent to the allied progress of the previous summer, but they were able to give it something of the character of a voluntary and strategic withdrawal, as they would not have been able to, had it occurred during the progress of the battle of the Somme.

> *IT seems to me inevitable that some time between now and next spring the Germans will have to go back to the Franco-Belgian frontier, and there are a great many indications, both in recent days and in all German military preparation and comment, which point to a recognition of this fact on the part of the Germans.
> Unless all signs fail, the Germans no longer expect a military decision. They hope that their armies can check and hold off allied attack and keep it away from Germany until their submarine campaign shall bring their enemies to terms or until the unrest and economic exhaustion of their enemies shall compel them to discuss terms of peace. They mean to hold as much of France as they can against such a time.
> FRANK H. SIMONDS.

It is now perfectly clear that the allied progress at the Somme had, by the first of October, 1916, made the German lines untenable. A deep wedge had been driven between Arras and Noyon, and the position of the Germans in the famous Noyon salient had become perilous in the extreme. Making a virtue of necessity in retiring, the Germans devastated the country over which they withdrew, with the obvious expectation of preventing an allied offensive for many months. They evidently believced that it had been the purpose of the allies to attack when the weather became good again from the positions from which the British were attacking when bad weather terminated the battle of the Somme.

Failed to Delay Attack.

We now see clearly that the allies, whether or not they had intended to continue on the Somme line, had certainly begun many months before to prepare for attack north and south of the old Somme front and before Arras and Soissons. Therefore, the German retreat did not materially slow up the allied attack, and, instead of several months of pause after they had reached their new front, the Germans were attacked by the British on April 9 and by the French on April 16; that is, three and four weeks, respectively, after their great retreat began.

There has now been advanced the interesting theory that the Germans had never intended to stand on the line that they are now maintaining between Arras and Rheims, and that they were pinned down by the unexpectedly prompt attack of the allies and forced to fight on a line they had not intended to defend. This seems to me an extreme theory.

Every indication that we yet have rather points an expectation of the Germans to occupy right through the summer the whole line in which they stood before the British attack on April 9.

On the other hand, we are beginning to have much more credible reports of a preparation by the Germans to withdraw again. Accounts of burning villages become frequent; the destruction of the cities of Lens and St. Quentin is complete, and there are multiplying evidences which may be indicative of a new German retreat on a wide front.

Strategy of Delay.

It seems to me from such information as I can gather that German strategy was based on fighting a delaying and defensive battle on the western front, holding the lines as long as it was possible without running any great risk of disaster, for two reasons: First, to give the submarines as long a time to operate as possible, and, second, to preserve the illusion of successful resistance for their own people and for the world up to the time when the end of the present campaign may pave the way for a new peace proposal.

It is clear, however, that German calculations were materially upset by the completeness of the British success on the Vimy Ridge and along the Scarpe during Easter week. If you compare the progress of the British before Arras with their progress at the Somme last year it becomes clear that in a single week the British this year burst through all the permanent line of German trenches on a front of at least a dozen miles.

At the Somme, on the contrary, they were unable to pierce all the German lines at a single thrust, that is, all the permanent outer crust, and instead they had methodically to burst their way through one line after another, and they were not actually through the whole first system of German defenses at the Somme until October, whereas by April 16 the British advance had forced its way through the four lines which constituted the main German defense and were pushing out toward reserve or "switch" lines in the rear

A Worthy Gain.

The result of this original British success has been shown in the German tactics. At the Somme there was very little German counter attacking. On the contrary, as the British pushed through one line of trenches after another, the Germans constructed new lines of trenches in the rear. When the battle began the country behind their regular system was practically open. By the time the British had penetrated their original line there were many other systems all the way back to and behind Bapaume.

But in the Battle of Arras the British penetration was immediate and complete, and as the German "switch" lines were unfinished and relatively weak the Germans were compelled to throw in their reserves at once and by sheer mass bring the British advance to a pause while they completed other reserve lines.

Reserves Cut Into.

It is clear that the Germans have used up a very large portion of that strategic reserve which they had organized behind the French and British fronts for an offensive of their own.

It is clear that notwithstanding the fact that they employed vast masses of men, the best troops that they have, they have not succeeded in holding down the British advance, and, this advance has already begun to push forward again toward that "switch" line running from Drocourt to Queant which covers the break in the German line made by the British.

In the same fashion, after having actually been checked along the Soissons-Rheims front, the French are beginning to push forward again and have completely cleaned up the first and most of the second German lines on this front.

In any event, it is already time to consider the possibilities of a Ger-

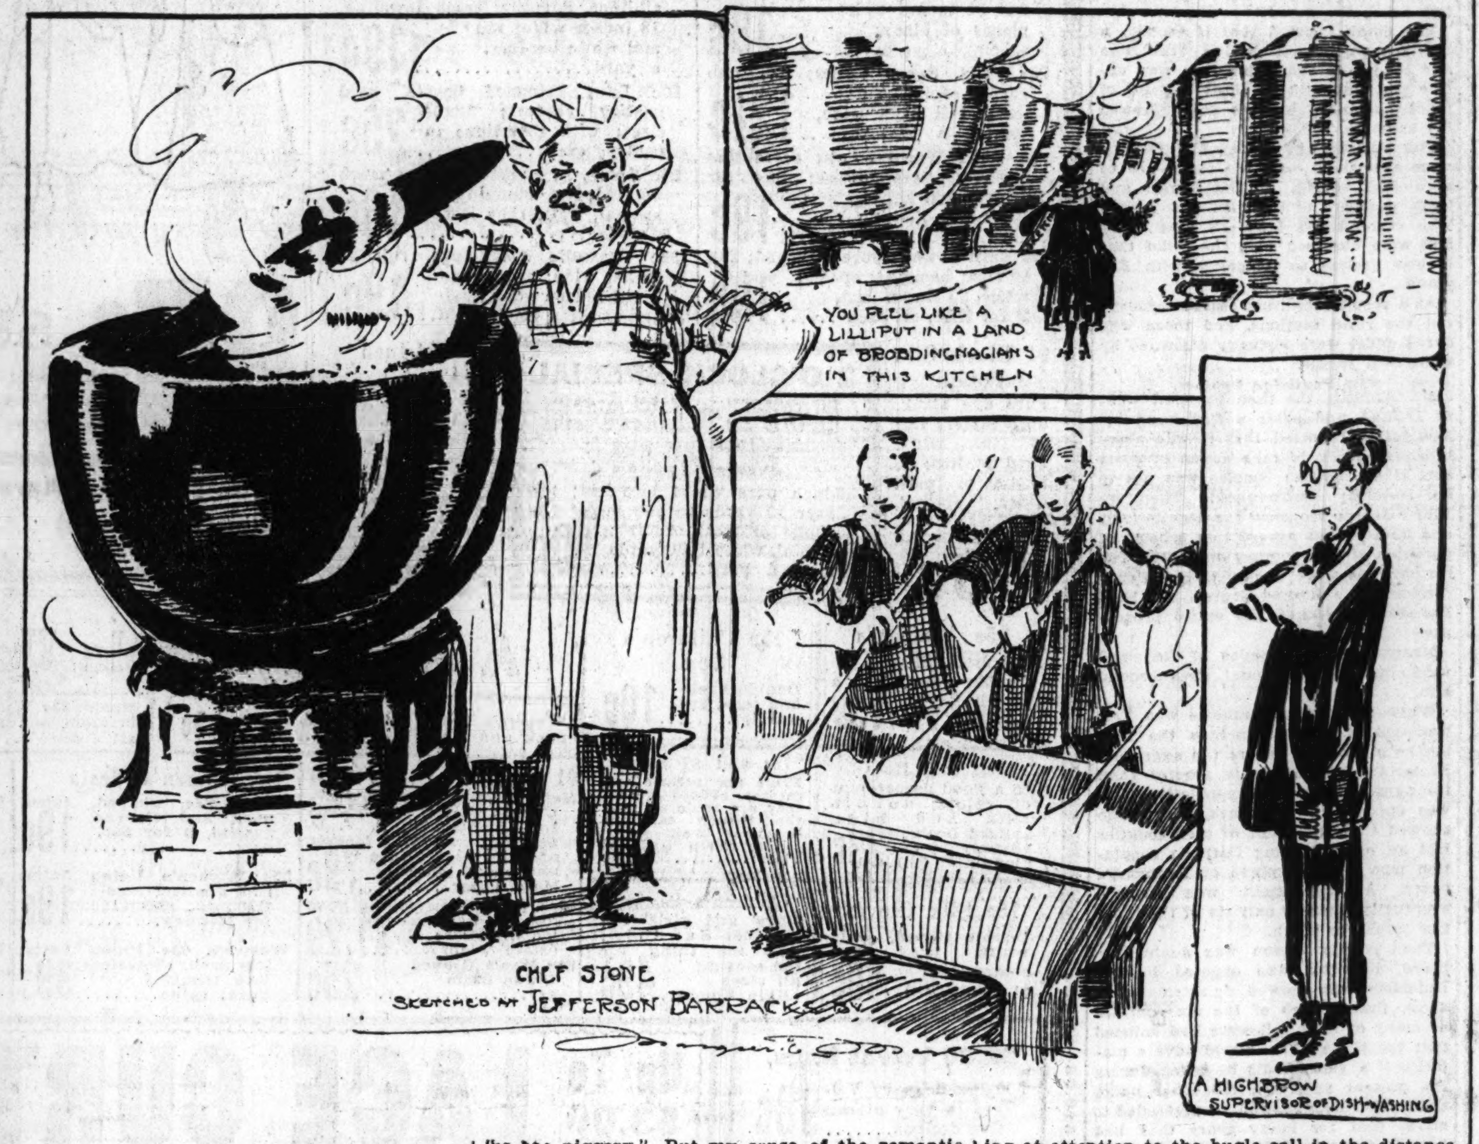
Marguerite Martyn Finds Kitchen at Jefferson Barracks Run on Too Big a Scale for Women to Take Men's Places There

Novelist Wells' Theory That They Could Feed Armies Upset



YOU FEEL LIKE A LILLIPUT IN A LAND OF BROBDINGNAGIANS IN THIS KITCHEN
CHEF STONE
SKETCHED AT JEFFERSON BARRACKS BY A HIGHBROW SUPERVISOR OF DISH-WASHING

Giant Cauldrons Too Huge for Gentler Sex to Handle, and Everywhere There Is Evidence That Brawn and Muscle Are Needed—Amazing Efficiency Coupled With Complete Prevention of Waste.

By Marguerite Martyn.

H. G. WELLS, in his widely popular novel, "Mr. Britling Sees It Through," advances the theory that women, if placed in control of the commissary and culinary branches of the army, would prove more satisfactory and efficient than men.

In a letter from the suppositious son of the suppositious Mr. Britling, written from a supposed British army camp, many instances of waste, mismanagement and bad sanitation are presented in support of the argument. Offered with the author's reputation as a sociologist and in his fascinating style, they are apt to be convincing. And if the reader is a woman possessed of the urge to serve her country, she is apt to feel that she is being defrauded of another right.

I may have felt that way myself before I was permitted to inspect with my own eyes an army kitchen. Now I am convinced that Mr. Wells' fiction in this case is not based securely on fact. That he ought to come over to St. Louis, behold the kitchen at Jefferson Barracks and revise his opinion of domestic economy, masculine gender.

When Capt. McCammon forsook his detail as adjutant, near the Commandant's desk, to be my escort over the domestic domains of the great recruiting depot, I wondered if I was not imposing too much upon gallantry. But when, as we went along, it was borne in upon me the importance and the astounding dimensions of the department that comes under the head of commissary, and the Captain told me that in a former rank he had had to do with building up the system here, I could well understand a willingness to show it off.

First, he showed me the new swimming pool, down near the river bank, at the end of the long stairway. It is to be finished by the middle of June. It seemed as spacious to me as any of the natatoria for which St. Louis is famous. And the Captain was proud of the fact that it had been built of reinforced concrete, with extra fine drainage facilities and filter, dressing rooms and partly roofed over, so that there is shade, the labor done by the soldiers, all within an appropriation of $2500.

A Model Dairy and a Piggery Features of Barracks Life

Then I must see the model dairy. It is a concrete building, with lots of sunlight let in. It has iron-railed stalls, modern milking machines and other appliances and the floor is made sweet and clean with plenty of running water. The 40 cows were abroad in the meadow; only a disgruntled, pedigreed bull, locked up at home, gave us a resentful greeting.

"At the end of Lovers' Land," said the Captain, "is the piggery." But my sense of the romantic or of the consistent was offended and I offered to take his word for it that the post is rearing 200 pigs. Anyway, it was nearing noon and we were getting an occasional most appetizing whiff on the breeze from the direction of the mess hall.

And it was in the kitchen I was made to see conclusively that Mr. Wells is all wrong about women superceding men as army cooks.

Why, well-equipped with all my due share of the curiosity attributed to the female of the species, I could not have had so much as a glimpse of what was going on in those big iron kettles if there had not been strong masculine arms to lift the heavy lids. I could not have begun to stir the hash with the paddles provided for the purpose, for they are about the size and are wielded much the same as oars, except that plying them through sticky potatoes requires probably more muscle than plying them through water.

I could not have attempted to serve the soup or the gravy, for that is done with ladles holding a gallon on the end of handles six feet long. Indeed, I felt like a Lilliput among Brobdingnagians in that kitchen.

There were kettles there which made the jars utilized by Morgania in the fairy tale shrink to the most conservative proportions and there were enough of them to serve up all eight of the scalded 40 thieves individually.

There were tall, shiny coffee urns, that reflected such a Wonderland that Alice would have been content to stay on this side of the looking glass. I can draw with a pencil more illuminatingly than with words a picture of how this giant kitchen made me feel.

Statistics Showing How Cooking Is Done on Wholesale Scale

Or, it is possible, some figures would be more convincing.

There was being prepared for dinner split pea soup, roast beef, baked potatoes and good gravy, bread butter and coffee; for supper bakes hash, macaroni with rich cheese sauce, syrup, bread and coffee.

In the kettles were cooking 380 gallons of soup. In the coffee urns 500 gallons were boiling; 5400 pounds of bread were being sliced, 600 pounds of potatoes were being prepared, 2800 pounds of meat were being cooked for the two meals.

A large-sized dishpan was overflowing with chopped onions for the hash, 16 pans, 3 feet square and 8 inches deep, waited to receive the hash when it had been mixed in a receptacle which looked not unlike a wooden rowboat. And the rowing of it was much the same, except that the oarsmen stood outside and rowed inside.

Believe me, I felt humble enough by the time I met the chef. I imagine the Captain himself felt his more exalted title for the time being, somewhat minimized in the presence of this martinet of the kitchen. Gallant as any West Pointer ever at headquarters building was Chef Stone as he offered me a taste of macaroni or hash and no less courtly when he acknowledged my praise.

I have written of the quantities of food. I wish there were figures for measuring qualities, for words and pictures are inadequate to describe the excellence of Chef Stone's hash and macaroni.

At the head of his comamnd of 20 cooks, standing at attention to the bugle call in the distance, the chef was even more radiant and imposing. And the cooks were only lesser officers among a seemingly innumerable regiment of privates, each in position, armed with trays loaded with food, awaiting the order to go "over the top" into the mess hall to meet the assault of an army 1600 strong. Five thousand men are being fed daily, in detachments of 1600 at a time, at this great recruiting post. The normal capacity is 2000 men. A new mess hall is about to be completed which will seat 3500 men and the barracks are being enlarged to temporarily house between 8000 and 9000.

Supervisor of Dishwashers Hopes to Win a Commission Soon

I was wondering if the more or less menial domestic tasks required of them were not discouraging to the ideals of bravery which inspire men to enlist in the army. The Captain suggested that I ask one of them about it. A man in a bespattered suit of overalls, standing idle for the moment, seemed a good subject, for he looked like an idealist, a thinker at least, with his broad, high forehead and shell-rimmed spectacles.

"Did you enlist with this end in view?" I asked, indicating the kitchen.

"Oh, no! I enlisted for a commission," he replied. "I believe I can pass the intellectual examination. I have had two years in the University of Missouri, have served on the editorial staff of a Kansas City and a Denver newspaper and did social service work for Montgomery, Ward & Co., in Chicago.

"I am a supervisor of dishwashing here," he continued, without a shadow of apology in his voice. "And I am very well satisfied. There are several other college men on mess hall detail. We are all well satisfied. We did not expect a picnic when we went into the army. We have encountered plenty of rough work, but never have we encountered any unfairness or injustice. We are well taken care of. The hours of work are reasonable and well regulated and we feel we are getting on the right side rather than the wrong side of Uncle Sam."

Another incident to show that men and boys acquire a different attitude as soldiers to the domestic service they scorn as beneath them when they are home among their women folk was when mess kits were dealt out to a detachment about to entrain for "somewhere in the United States."

Interest and curiosity almost deferential accompanied each man's examination of the homely little outfit of frying pan, water bottle, tin cup and cutlery.

Groups gathered together in earnest discussion of the possibilities of these utensils, playing and experimenting with them like so many girls with their first set of dishes. A leaflet giving minute instructions for 'such individual cookery as may be necessary for a soldier when thrown upon his own resources' was distributed.

These were received with gravest interest and attention, too, by man and boy. But we, their sisters, must not smile even behind our hands when we remember how at home they used to

Situation in Ireland as Observed by a Post-Dispatch Man on Three Weeks' Tour

Two Concrete Reasons Why the Ulsterites Oppose Home Rule; Fear of Being Overtaxed by the "Poverty Stricken" Population of the South, and Hatred of Catholic Church and Fear of Its Clergy—South Is Against Partition for Reasons Almost the Reverse.

THE Post-Dispatch prints herewith the first of a series of articles on the situation in Ireland, written by a special correspondent who spent three weeks in investigating conditions there. He talked with men of many shades of political opinion, and the result of his observations is fully and frankly told. Other articles will follow from day to day.

By JOHN KIRBY.

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DUBLIN, April 30.

THERE are more cross-currents of opinion in the Irish question than there are cross-currents of water in the whirlpool at the base of Niagara Falls. As far as the details are concerned, the politics of the Balkan states and those of the Central American republics are as clear as the alphabet when compared to those of Ireland.

These are impressions frequently reached by those who attempt to make a superficial examination of the Irish question. Most Americans find it impossible to explain. Most Englishmen are frankly disgusted with the entire question, because they are unable to find any premises upon which to base deductions.

A Post-Dispatch correspondent has just made a three-weeks' trip through the country—from "Rebel Cork to Orange Belfast"—in an attempt to find answers to some of the questions which are being asked constantly in America.

By putting aside all of the deep religious prejudices, racial antipathies and historical animosities with which the atmosphere is surcharged, it is possible to reach a general estimate of the present-day difficulties and to uncover the concrete reason why Home Rule has not been accepted.

There are exactly two concrete reasons why the people of Ulster went the limit and defied the Government to enforce the law.

1. Commercial investments representing approximately $400,000,000 have been established in Belfast and vicinity through hard work and thrift. The people who own these properties and those who work for them are obsessed with the fear that an Irish Parliament would overtax them in the interest of the South and eventually destroy their properties and their livelihoods.
2. The keenest kind of hatred for the Catholic Church and a genuine fear that the Catholic clergy will take charge of the schools and force their religion upon the children of Ulster in the ensuing generations.

These are based upon dozens of other considerations which operate indirectly upon the situation as it is today.

The most potent reasons why the other three provinces of Ireland are opposed to partition—that is, the establishment of one Parliament for the South and a distinct government for the North—are also two-fold:

1. The best informed politicians fear that the country cannot be financed without Ulster's taxation.
2. The Catholic clergy is unwilling to allow the Catholic children of the North to fall under the domination of the Protestant sects.

There is also in the South a keen feeling that Ireland should be governed as an entity, because it is a separate and distinct race from both England and the people of Ulster. They believe that the Ulstermen are merely interlopers who should not be allowed to splice the country into two governments.

Might Be Settled If Ulster Were Guaranteed Against Overtaxation

The best information available tends to establish the fact that a settlement can be made if the British Government will give Ulster guarantees that her commerce will not be overtaxed and her children's education will not be controlled by the Catholic Church. This does not mean Ulster will submit willingly. The province will make a show of fighting, just as Carson's army did three years ago, but there will be no actual fighting if the British Government announces that it is determined to settle the question and will use any means at its disposal to carry out the statute.

The arsenal of munitions which was purchased in Germany for the use of Carson's Covenanters is intact at Belfast, and the "volunteers" will arm if threats are made, at least for the purpose of trying to delay action. The Post-Dispatch has been unable to find any evidence, however, that they will really oppose the imperial Government, any more than they would have done in 1914, if the Government had acted.

In the event that such a solution is found it will mean that conscription may be put into effect immediately, and that within a short time 250,000 of the best fighting men in the world can be prepared for the front.

In the event that some such action is not taken conscription will not succeed and the Sinn Fein movement will be given such impetus that the Nationalist party will lose its prestige because of the failure of the Home Rule agitation.

At present it is a case of 3,000,000-odd Catholics against 1,000,000-odd Protestants.

Home Rule Legislation and the Story of Its Development.

It is extremely difficult for any foreigner to comprehend causes for the present situation without a short review of the chronology of the Home Rule legislation and the peculiar political offshoots which have been developed because of its failure.

In 1912, 1913 and 1914 the Home Rule Bill was forced through Parliament against the veto of the House of Lords, and it became law by virtue of the British system which provided that a bill which passes three times, even though not sanctioned by the Upper House becomes effective if signed by the King.

During the same years the Carson Volunteers were organized and drilled for the announced purpose of defeating enforcement of the act.

When the bill was about to become law and the Carson Volunteers were openly parading through the streets of Belfast, the War Office "requested" the commanders of the Irish garrison at the Curragh to take up positions in certain sections of the North, which might be used as rallying points. It appears that the commanding officers were given an option of taking "leave" or of carrying out the instructions. Enough of them took leave to satisfy the War Office that their sympathies were with the Carson Volunteers, and the Ministry decided to attempt a compromise rather than incur a possible religious war.

One of the strangest things about this entire episode is the fact that politicians of the Nationalist party, which represents the South, consider it one of the most adroit political plays ever conceived. They do not believe that Carson's men would have fought, but that Carson knew the Government with which he was dealing and knew just how far he could go.

When the situation became acute the King convened the famous Buckingham Palace conference, where Redmond and Devlin, the Nationalist leaders, patched up a qualified agreement with Asquith, Craig, Carson and Law whereby a scheme would be evolved so that each county could vote itself in or out of the Irish Parliament.

During the same period the Nationalist Volunteers began to orga-

[illegible]. This organization was composed of approximately 150,000 men from the South. Redmond at first attempted to dissuade them from organizing, but finally took partial charge when he found that it was possible to disband them.

The European war broke out and a partial truce was agreed upon by the various leaders. In September, following the opening of hostilities, the King signed a statute with the understanding that it should be allowed to be nonoperative until six months after the signing of peace.

Redmond then agreed to organize the National Volunteers for the protection of Ireland during the war, and eventually to send them to Flanders. This offer was refused.

In May, 1913, Carson was appointed Attorney-General, against the protests of the South, who looked upon the appointment as a direct slap at them.

In the meantime the Southern Nationalist Volunteers, emulating the example set by Ulster Volunteers, attempted to run a ship of munitions into the country. There was a fight with the garrison and police of Dublin. A number of persons were shot, and the rabid element found their opportunity to start dissension throughout the South. They found it relatively easy to stir the people up by pointing to what they called the broken promises of the Government. They alleged that the leaders of the Nationalist party had "sold them out."

At this period the Sinn Fein movement got its real impetus. The situation became more and more involved As the machination of the vocal pyortion of the Sinn Fein attacked Redmond more and more fiercely, the Nationalists leaders gradually lost control of the situation.

The Easter Rebellion.

The rebellion of Easter, 1916, was the culminating episode. The Nationalist leaders informed the Government that the revolt was led by men who were without balance, and that they should be dealt leniently with because they represented an infinitesimal portion of the country.

The advice was not heeded. The military authorities crushed it with military precision, and for every sentence imposed they created an additional number of enemies through the country.

The South insisted that if Carson, a brilliant man, organized a revolution and landed in the Cabinet, it was unfair and impolitic to shoot a band of poorly balanced persons who followed his example.

The ancient antipathies and hatreds were stirred up with the assistance of a limited section of the clergy and large numbers of old men and women who remembered Ireland's past feuds and were obsessed with the belief that it was useless to temporize with England.

As a result recruiting ceased throughout the rural sections, and those who dared enlist were virtually disowned by their own people.

The Partition Project.

Mr. Asquith, the then Premier, went to Ireland and after a first-hand investigation reported that it was absolutely necssary to take action of some sort if the British Empire was not to be seriously embarrassed. Therefore Lloyd George reopened the negotiations, and both parties agreed to a scheme of partition of a temporary character. The Nationalists were willing to make concessions of a limited degree, but Lord Lansdowne blocked the entire procedure.

Meanwhile the enemies of Redmond were building additional fires around him.

When the partition scheme was first proposed it was to include the nine northern counties, where the aggregate Protestant population is greater than the aggregate Catholic population. This was opposed by the Nationalists, who showed that three out of nine counties had an overwhelming Catholic population who were members of Redmond's party. An agreement was reached eventually whereby only six of the counties would be taken.

Then county option was again proposed, but this was opposed by the Unionists, who showed, or attempted to show, that in two of the six counties so many of their followers had enlisted that the Nationalists would have a majority if a vote should be taken during the present year. On the other hand, the Nationalists showed, or pretended to show, that for many years they had been in control of the two counties.

In the event that a county option were put through at this time it is undoubted that at least five counties out of Ulster would remain with the South and that the vote in three other Northern counties would be extremely close; only one county is safely Unionist by a strong majority.

As a result of this condition county option, along with an out and out scheme of partition, is being opposed on every side. At the rate the controversy is now raging it will be impossible to get voluntary agreement of any sort in the near future.

If the ordinary American tourist, on leaving Dublin, should fall asleep on the train he would be justified on awakening in Belfast in assuming that he was in an altogether different country. Belfast is as different from Dublin and the other cities as Paris is from London.

Belfast teems with industry. In Dublin there are virtually no factories and little business. The people of the two cities look, act, think, work and talk on different lines; Dublin is as leisurely as an American city in the far South; Belfast moves as rapidly as an American city on the northern seaboard.

The people of Dublin care nothing about business, while those of Belfast give virtually all of their thought and time to money making. They are active and prosperous. They take extreme pride in the development of the city. On all sides new buildings have sprung up annually. In Dublin a new building is a curiosity.

The people of Belfast rarely go to Dublin, because they have no business to attend to there, while those of the southern city rarely if ever go north because they despise the very atmosphere.

Racial Characteristics Differ.

In order to grasp the real reasons for the present situation it is necessary to understand the racial characteristics of the two peoples. The southern Irishman considers himself a poetical Celt and looks down upon the commercial Saxon of the north. They rarely intermarry or have social intercourse of any sort.

There is a hard and fast line drawn against Catholics in Belfast. Individually they are friendly enough to all outward appearances; collectively they hate each other.

It is extremely difficult for an American to grasp the keen religious and racial antipathies that exist between the two peoples. The southern Catholic feels that the Scotchmen of the north are virtually without understanding because it is impossible to interest them in anything except business.

The extreme religious antipathy of Belfast does not exist in Dublin. At the Ulster Club, the best organization in Belfast, Catholics are not wanted and they are rarely if ever admitted to membership.

In Dublin, at the Kildare Club, similar in social status to the Ulster, this keen feeling does not exist. Catholics and Protestants mix freely.

The simplest manner of describing the political lines of Ireland is by calling the Nationalists, who want Home Rule, Catholic, and the Unionists, who oppose it, Protestant.

This line cannot always be followed.

June Sale of Cut Glass

Every piece of Cut Glass in this sale is offered at prices that will indeed surprise you. We have arranged five groups and in each we illustrate an example of the remarkable values—this particular group contains many pieces priced 25% to 33% less than their real value. A few are exactly one-half price.

Group No. 1

1000 Pieces at $1.00 Each

The Vase illustrated is 10 inches high, cut on a light-weight blank, in a daisy and butterfly design. In addition this group contains Vases, Bowls, Celery Trays, Baskets, Compotes, Oil and Vinegar Bottles, Nappies, Marmalade Jars, etc.—each.........$1.00

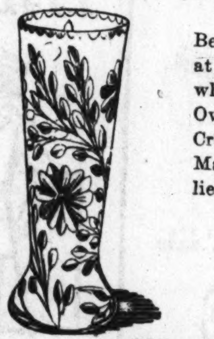
Group No. 2

300 Pieces, Each $1.95

The Sugar and Cream Set illustrated is cut on a heavy lead blank, very highly polished and is an example of the other remarkable values in the group, such as high-stem Compotes, Bowls, Vases, Relish Dishes, Cheese and Cracker Dishes and dozens of other beautiful pieces, all cut on heavy blanks and priced, each $1.95

Group No. 3

200 Pieces, Priced at $2.95 and $3.95 Each



We illustrate a pretty 8-inch Berry Bowl, with a floral cutting at $2.95 to represent this group, which consists of Fern Dishes, Oval Orange Bowls, Sugar and Cream Sets, heavy 10-inch Vases, Mayonnaise Sets and Electroliers.

Group No. 4

Hundreds of Beautiful Pieces at $4.95 Each

The Vase we illustrate is an example of this group, it is a magnificent 12-inch hand-cut piece, with floral design. Many other pieces such as Water Sets, Orange Bowls, etc.

Group No. 5

150 Elaborate Pieces From $6.95 to $10 Each

As illustrated—a seven-piece Water Set at $7.95 (Pitcher and six Glasses). Among other pieces in this group are some of the most elaborate designs possible to produce in cut glass—large Ice Cream Trays, Baskets, 14 and 16 inch Vases, odd-shaped Bowls and receptacles for flowers.

In addition to the above we have selected from our regular stock a large variety of odd pieces of the most expensive kind—Punch Bowls, Electroliers, elaborate Compotes, Vases, Baskets, as well as Wine sets, Water Sets, etc., priced from $10 to $50. All 25% to 33% less than regular.

IRISH SITUATION AS SEEN BY A POST-DISPATCH MAN

But it is generally true. There are a number of wealthy Catholics in the country who are Unionists at heart, and there are a few Protestants who are Nationalists. Invariably these defections can be traced to business rather than religious convictions.

The southern section of Ireland is virtually all agricultural. The North has encouraged industries despite the fact that it has no raw materials with which to supply its industrial needs.

Wealth and Poverty.

The people of the northern section of the country point to the south and frankly declare that they do not intend to allow a lot of poverty-stricken farmers to take away from them in overtaxation the prosperity which they have built up with the hardest kind of labor and economy. In Belfast, there is virtually no poverty. The poverty of Dublin and Cork is appalling.

The big business men of Belfast insist that all of this poverty is due to the sloth and indolence of the Irishmen, and that their own prosperity is due to their inherent Scotch thrift. They point with keen pride to their great shipbuilding plants, their rope works, flax mills and various other classes of industry, and defy any one to give a good reason why the southern Irishman could not have built up similar properties if they had been willing to do the necessary work and saving.

They insist that the large Nationalist population of Belfast has contributed virtually no business to the city except public houses. They have no interest whatever in Gaelic folklore and poetry.

They explain and prove that the Southern lands are naturally richer than those of the North, and that the harbors are much better, but that neither class of property has been developed.

To all of this the South answers that for hundreds of years the people were oppressed by Great Britain, while those of the North were nursed. They explain in great detail how it has been impossible for the South the build industries in the past because every obstacle was thrown in the way through legislation framed in the interest of Ulster.

Don't Want Ulster "Tammanyized."

When asked the point-blank question why they were opposed to Home Rule a dozen business men of Ulster replied that they did not want to have the country "Tammanyized" by a gang of politicians who would overtax the North to pay for the Southern deficit.

They produced reports to show that Ireland's principal revenues came from Ulster, despite the fact that it represents but one-third of the country's population. The great shipbuilding companies, linen mills, rope works and other industries sell but little of their products in the South. Their markets are America and England. Some of the banks have branches in the southern cities, and the commission houses sell the agriculturists of Munster Leinster and Connaught much of their supplies.

For these reasons, purely financial, some of the smaller business men are opposed to any system of partition. The majority of the people of the North do not want partition, but they will take it in preference to Home Rule in any guise.

When religion is discussed with the people of Ulster it is almost impossible to believe that they are voicing their real convictions. They become so violent that they almost give the impression that they are not sincere, but are merely pretending.

The Post-Dispatch correspondent has talked to most of the principal men of affairs in Belfast. When religion is mentioned they fairly fume. It is frequently difficult at first to understand whether they are talking of present-day affairs or of things that happened centuries ago. Their knowledge of the details of religious wars and feuds that occurred 100 years ago or more is so great that they appear to be discussing the happenings of yesterday.

They are obsessed with the belief that the Vatican is working night and day upon gigantic plans for their destruction. Their fear is real and acute.

NEW RETIREMENT BY GERMANS INDICATED, IS SIMOND'S VIEW

man retirement. Every one knows in a general way what this retirement would mean. Actually, the French and British armies are now attacking at either side of a great salient, which is the German position in France.

A complete break through either by the British or by the French would imperil all the troops on the German line between the Scarpe and the Suippes above Rheims. No such penetration is likely, but, on the other hand, a steady wearing is going on which is reducing one after another of the original trench lines of the Germans before the French and shortening the reserve trenches in front of the British, and it is always within the realm of possibility that there may be a penetration and within the realm of probability that the actual peril of a penetration may lead the Germans to retire.

The Next Line.

In a general way the world knows where the next German line is. From the Meuse River, which is north of Verdun, it runs behind and on the east bank of this river all the way to the vicinity of Mezieres; from Mezieres, which is covered by old French forts, it follows the Franco-Belgian frontier, including Hirson, where there are other forts, and then curves northward toward Lille, between Landrecies and Valenciennes, finally touching the forts of Lille and rejoining the present line between Lille and Armentieres.

A retreat to this line would unquestionably shorten the German front by more than 50 miles. It would straighten it, taking out the last big salient between Lille and Verdun. It would give the Germans a position of enormous

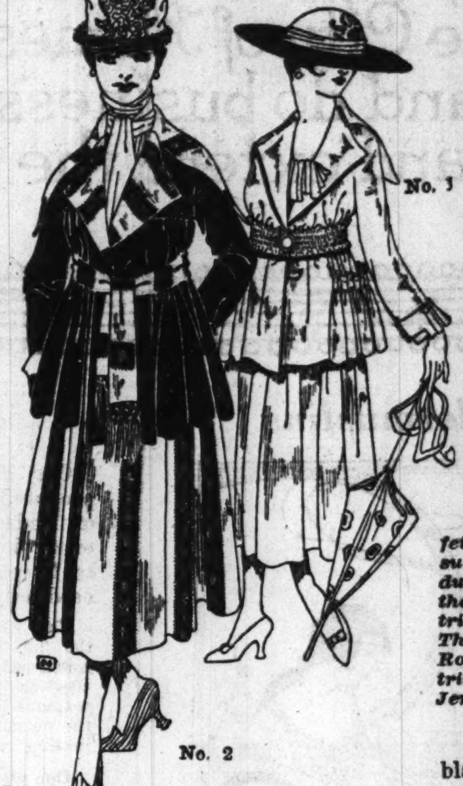
Women's and Misses'

Exquisite Silk Suits



Formerly Priced at

$35 and $45

have been added to our regular line at $24.50

Two of the models are as follows:

Model No. 1, as illustrated, is a pleated model of satin with deep revers, cuffs, collar and tie sash of Khaki Kool. The skirt of Khaki Kool is straight, with gathered back and loose detachable belt.

Model No. 2 is of changeable Pussy Willow Taffeta, and so cleverly pleated and shirred that it is suitable for the most formal occasions. The coat indulges in back pleats, and the side fullness is gained by the deep pleated pockets. The cuffs are tailored and trimmed with pleats to match the pockets and back. The skirt is full flare, with a detachable tailored belt. Rows of tiny blue buttons in the predominating shade trim these Suits. Others are lustrous satin, silk Jersey, etc.

Colors of gray, green, brown, gold, navy and black. All sizes, but not every size in every model. (Second Floor.)

Attractive Silk Suits

Additions From Higher Priced Lines Have Brought 100 Suits at This Price

$16.75

Two of the Models are as follows—

Model No. 1 (as illustrated) is fashioned of good quality silk, with the popular fitted back and tight tailored sleeves. The pockets, which form clever side tabs, are decorated with criss-cross blocks of twilled silk. The snug belt fastens with a flat hatter's bow and buckle of white pearl.

Model No. 2 is fashioned of fine taffeta with deep revers, belted back and crushed belt; has an extra satin lined collar of Khaki Kool of alternated block pattern. A striking feature of the skirt is the four-row-deep shirring about the waist. The pockets are also shirred, fastened to the belt by strips of silk.

Colors of green, gold, Copenhagen, rose and black, navy and white combinations. All sizes, but not every size in every model.

strength, almost half of it covered by the Meuse River, which is a considerable military obstacle. By such a retreat the Germans would reduce the number of troops needed to hold the line by from 150,000 to 200,000.

Nor should it be forgotten that such a retreat would leave a desert over a very wide front from Lille to Verdun, and, if it should be made in July or August, would probably preclude any offensive on the part of the allies against the new German line this year. Such a retreat would mean a withdrawal in some places for 40 miles in depth—that is, nearly twice as much as the extreme distance of the retirement this spring—and it would mean a retirement on a front at least twice as long.

British Would Be Restricted.

As far as the British are concerned, there would then be left to them only the possibility of an attack on the front from Lille to the bank of the Yser, west of Ypres, because only on this front would they be able to move out of their prepared position against a German position.

But no offensive could be made over the front before Lille because it would involve the destruction of Lille, Roubaix and Tourcoing, cities whose aggregate population is nearly 500,000 and whose destruction would be a terrible blow to France. Actually, the British would be restricted to an attack on a 15-mile front before the Lys River and the Yser River—that is, on the scene of the old battles of Ypres, where the Germans hold all the good positions and where the ground and general conditions are all to the disadvantage of the British.

On the other hand, such a retreat would surrender nine-tenths of the territory of France which they now hold, including all the coal districts; it would put in jeopardy the iron districts about Mezieres and make a French attack east of Verdun a probability for the next campaign.

The moral effect of the retreat would be great, both upon the German people and upon the French. The material value would be considerable, because Germany would lose nearly all her hold on France.

As long as the Germans hold French territory they have a hostage and a basis for bargaining, both for the return of their colonies held by the British and by the French and for a possible extension of their coloniol area as the price of a complete evacuation of France. But if the Germans are compelled to retire behind the Meuse and about Lille they will occupy hardly more than 1500 square miles of French territory, and they will then have a very little basis for bargaining with France.

Granted that the Germans were driven to the Belgian frontier this fall, my judgment is that the allied campaign of 1918 would be based upon an effort to invade Germany through Alsace-Lorraine and by forcing a crossing of the Upper Rhine to carry the war, with its destruction, into Germany itself. This, I think, must be a determining reason why the Germans will hold on as long as they can in their present position.

Conceivably, there may yet be limited retirements before there is a general withdrawal to the Meuse and Lille line. It is possible that as the French pressure on both sides of Rheims continues the Germans will withdraw behind the Aisne River from Berry-au-Bac to Vouziers, where the Aisne touches the Argonne, and then stand between it and the Argonne, southward to their present lines.

It is conceivable that they may stand on a line from Cambrai through Guise if they are turned out of the Laon-St. Quentin position. The longer they are able to stand where they are now standing the more numerous will be their secondary or "switch" lines behind their present front.

But once more it is necessary to point out that the real measure of the summer's campaign will be in casualty lists and not in territory gained or lost. The real battle is to break the man-power of Germany, and this task is imposed upon Great Britain, whose losses have still been small by comparison with those of the Germans or the French, and whose reserves in men are greater than Germany can now possess.

U. S. TRADE IN HAITI GROWING

Restoration of Order Permits People to Earn Money and Buy Goods.

PORT AU PRINCE, June 2.—Imports from the United States in Haiti in 1916 were more than 120 per cent greater than in the preceding year. In 1915 they amounted to $3,806,673 and in 1916 to $8,775,064. This gain is due largely to continued peace throughout the country, which has enabled the people to work and be paid for their labor.

LATEST SONG HIT

A popular song is a new affair just out called "Wake Up, Virginia, and Prepare" — woven around a girl whose sweetheart comes to capture her as his bride. His gun is aimed at her heart, but is loaded with orange blossoms. Rather a pretty idea. Here is part of the chorus, clipped from a copy just received:

Wake Up, Virginia, and Prepare

For Your Wedding Day

Lewis Porter. Louis Seibert.

Wake up, Vir-gin-ia, Pre-pare for your wed-ding day, For an en-e-my comes march-ing with a heart in bat-tle array;.... My lips are loaded with kiss-
-es, but the on-ly arms I bear...

Copyright 1917

Are sweet orange blossoms, Virginia,
So wake up, and prepare!

One reason for the song's popularity is that it contains no high notes, but a climax that makes it quite delightful to sing.

Sample copies of the above song have been received in some of the St. Louis 10-cent stores.—ADVERTISEMENT.

MASCAGNI'S NEW OPERA 'LODOLETTA' PRODUCED IN ROME

Is Tragic Idyl Founded Upon Oida's Story, "Two Little Wooden Shoes."

MUSIC IS VERY SIMPLE

Composer Himself Conducted It on Its First Presentation; Views of Critics.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

ROME, May 14.—Pietro Mascagni, the composer of "Cavalleria Rusticana." "Iris," "Parisana" and of "L'Amica Fritz," had a warm ovation on presenting his new opera "Lodoletta" at the historic Costanzi Theater.

"Lodoletta" is a tragic idyl, the book, by the poet Forzano, being founded upon Ouida's pathetic story, "Two Litttle Wooden Shoes." The scene is laid in Holland. Lodoletta, the heroine, is a little Dutch foundling in Paris. Time, that of Napoleon III and crinolines.

The plot is simplicity itself. Lodoletta, who has been brought up by a poor peasant called Antonio, falls in love with Flammen, a successful French painter, whom Napoleon has exiled to Holland for political reasons. She is only 16, and for a long time Flammen looks on her as a child. Her foster father dies in the first act, falling off a each tree whose blossoms he was culling as a birthday present for his beloved Lodoletta. But Flammen hires an old picture from him for gold, wherewith he buys his little favorite a pair of wooden shoes, for they are so poor hat she goes barefooted. After Antonio's death Flammen paints Lodletta's portrait, helping her to earn an honest living, but falling in loce with her, too, without knowing it, after the fashion of heroes in opera, drama and fiction. Awakening comes through the villagers, who unjustly consider Lodoletta's conduct is bad. Her eyes are opened, Flammen sees his passion when she begs him, with tears, to leave before some calamity befalls her, and he does so. Having now been pardoned by Napoleon, he returns to Paris.

Third Act in Paris.

These events brings us to the end of the second act. The third is laid in Paris, outside Flammen's villa, where a New ear's party is going on. But the painter has no wish for jollifications; he is thinking of Lodoletta, feels remorse at having left her without any help to fight her way, alone in the world, longs for her. But his friends come out, chide him for his dull spirits and drag him back to the dance. While he is in the house, poor little Lodoletta, starving and in rags, creeps into the garden, having walked all the way from Rome. She is dying of exhaustion. But she has the strength to look through the lighted windows, where she sees Flammen dancing with another woman. This, with her recent privations, kills her. Flammen, coming out later, sees the little red wooden shoe she left on the steps, hunts for her and finds her body under a tree.

Evidence of Haste.

The music is as simple as the story. In fact some of the audience on the first night thought it a little too simple. Mascagni says he composed the whole thing in 100 days, and it certainly does bear traces of undue haste, for all its quiet, youthful charm; for it is an idyl of childhood and girlhood and spring flowers and simple thoughts. His gift for pleasing and effective improvisation has served him in good stead, but has also caused him to fall to the temptation of not making the best of his opportunities. In fact, after "Parisana," its construction is rather a shock. But there are many good things in "Lodoletta," all the same. In the first act, which is the best prepared, the chorus of children have a dainty freshness which is quite appealing. The funeral motive that follows Antonio's fall is so pure and so simple that it recalls Italian compositions of the seventeenth century, while preserving the characteristics of Mascagni's good work. But the opera suffers from an excess of recitative, and the canzones are both rare and thin.

The third act contains a waltz which is sure to become popular, but it is causing much discussion among Mascagni's friends and critics, because he has strongly contrasted two forms of treatment throughout the act—the romantic and the impressionist. But here, too, his power of gettoing theatrical effect with the simplest possible means is cleverly brought out, and Lodoletta has a beautiful death song.

"A Dish of Light Farce."

To sum up, "Lodoletta" contains an admixture of closed melodies for the chorus—chiefly sung by children, very charmingly, too—and open melody for orchestration, with a great deal of recitative for the voices alone. The result is lack of unity in composition and a sense of expectation which is not always satisfied. One is too often led on to look for a melodious passage, only to be disappointed, for up comes a recitative again. But the composer has justified this methad with which he has placed just the right psychological expression in the mouth of each character and delineated the right degree of tension. He has given his many admirers a dish of light farce, warranted to cause no nightmares, to produce no tears. He himself conducted, and had many ovations.

SIX SCHOOLS TO SUPPLY 150 ARMY AVIATORS WEEKLY

First Classes to Finish Aug. 1 at Columbus and at Five Other Institutions.

TRAINING MOST INTENSIVE

College Education Required; Technical Instruction Before Ventures in the Air.

COLUMBUS, O., June 2.—Twenty-five men, trained in the theory of aviation, will be graduated from Ohio State University each week after Aug. 1. The first class has just started study of the art of flying for a course of eight weeks.

Each squad of graduates will be ordered immediately to the new Government flying field near Dayton, O., there to get an eight weeks' course in actual flying. Then they will be sent to Southern France and as they individually show merit will begin their work with the armies.

Ohio State University is one of six schools selected by the War Department for training aviators. The others are the University of Illinois, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Cornell University, Texas Agricultural College and the University of California. Identical methods of training will be employed in all the schools.

Skilled Flyer in Charge.

An army aviator, Lieut. Stratemeyer of the San Diego base, is in general charge of the first Ohio school. Delay in starting it was occasioned when Capt. Ebert, first detailed here, was killed by a fall in Columbus, N. M., several weeks ago. Lieut. Pulsifer, next selected, was ordered to France after getting the Columbus assignment. Maj. Converse, in charge of cadet work, started the first class this week, pending the arrival of the army aviator.

The Government orders the men to report here. They come from all parts of the country and if there is room in the classes, the aviator in charge has authority to accept recruits at the school. Only men of at least three years' college training—or its equivalent—are admitted. They must be physically sound and weigh less than 180 pounds, but thus far no minimum weight nor stature has been fixed.

The service is especially seeking lean, wiry men of intelligence who can think and act quickly. Action by intuition is the greatest essential, coupled with nerve, of an aviator. Intensified training in rudiments is for the purpose of developing this natural ability, found more or less prominent in men picked for the flying branch of the army. Instructions to officials of the school here are to discharge immediately any recruit who does not quickly "fit in."

The military training consists of discipline primarily. Men are quartered and live on the campus. They must be up at 6 a. m., have rooms or quarters perfectly clean at 6:30 and be ready for three-quarters of an hour setting-up exercises. A bath and inspection on appearance must be completed by 7:30, the breakfast hour. Government rations are served at the university eating house on the campus. Recitations start at 9 o'clock and run until 10:30. Then follows a half-hour of drill or other military instruction. Thirty minutes' rest is given before the noonday meal.

Recitations are resumed at 1:30 o'clock and continued for an hour. Drills then last until 4 or 4:30 o'clock. Another half hour is given for rest before the 5:30 evening meal. At 7:30 every man must be in his quarters studying. At 10 lights must be out. Hikes and plenty of outdoor exercises take the place of drills occasionally. The "hardening" of the men is expected to be accomplished in three weeks.

Intense Study at the Last.

Intense study starts then and last five weeks. All subjects are taken up in special classes each day. Prof. Magruder, instructor in gas engines, will teach the recruits the details of the operation, repairing and handling of the motors of airplanes. Prof. Henry C. Lord will have the classes in meteorology, astronomy and the theory of flying. Prof. William A. Knight will teach the "rigging," or makeup, of the aeroplane. These three, who will have assistants, are the ones who took the special course in Canada.

Many incidental subjects will be taught, including wireless telegraphy, photography, the conventional signs and signals of war, atmospheric conditions—how or why they act so-and-so—map making and reading and much other similar detail work. Map reading is studied by means of charts illuminated with small electric lights. These maps are observed from an altitude—the students sitting or standing above them. As the lights are flashed on, he must call the location instantly, so as to be able to signal the exact placement of the enemy's units. It is a part of the study in "quick observation."

By the time the eight weeks' schooling is completed, the class is expected to be ready for experiments in actual flying. Landing fields have been selected at intervals of 10 miles between Dayton and Columbus, the two points of the "school." Trips between these two points will be made after the first class gets to Dayton. Then when the eight week's course in actual flying is finished, the vaintors will be ready to go to Southern France for the finishing touches, prior to actual war service.

Army officers think the school will be continued at least two years.

"Soldiers are not so seriously needed in Europe now," said one army officer, "as are food and aviators. The aviation branch of service is of gravest importance. Men in that branch must be the pick of the land. By August 1 there will be 150 of the picked young men of the country in these schools. And by Oct. 1 the schools will contribute 150 sterling aviators a week to aid the enormously increasing flying forces of the Allies."

Corns Peel Right Off Off With "Gets-It"

2 Drops, and the Corn is a "Goner!"

When you've got to walk on the of your shoe to get away from those awful corn pains, there's only one common-sense thing to do. Put 2 or 3 drops of "Gets-It" on the corn right away. Pain and inflammation will disappear, the corn will begin to shrivel from that instant—then it loosens and falls right off.

Use "Gets-It;" Your Corns Won't Swell in Water. Besides, They'll Shrivel, Loosen and Peel Off.

There's no other corn remover in the world that acts like "Gets-It." No new discovery has been made in corn removers since "Gets-It" was born. Don't forget that fact. "Gets-It" does away forever with the use of salves that irritate, bandages that make a bundle of your toe, plasters that half do the work, knives and scissors that draw blood. Use "Gets-It"—no more digging or cutting.

"Gets-It" is sold everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent on receipt of price by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill.

Sold in St. Louis and recommended as the world's best corn remedy by Judge & Dolph Drug Co., A. P. Bentz, Kaltner Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Loeb Drug Stores.

INFERIOR FOOD IS SUPPLIED BY CITY, GRAND JURY SAYS

Supply Department Severely Criticised for Conditions at Municipal Institutions.

The April grand jury, in its final report to Circuit Judge Shields yesterday, severely criticised the Supply Department of the city for the poor quality of food served to inmates of city institutions, and commented upon the conditions at the institutions.

"We found the food at the city institutions of inferior quality, not what would be expected under normal conditions," the grand jury reported.

After stating that the condition might be due to an effort on the part of contractors to save themselves from losses on account of increased prices they were compelled to pay, the grand jury said:

"We also found a lack of inspection of the foodstuffs furnished, which foodstuffs were consumed, although of inferior quality. After the Supply Department was advised of this condition it was remedied temporarily. We believe, however, that inspections should be more critical and more frequent, especially of meat and bread."

Finding that many responsible business firms refused to bid on supplies for city institutions because of lack of definite description, the grand jury recommended that there be a revision of lists and specifications and that they be made more complete.

Conditions at the industrial farm were reported to be excellent, the grand jury announcing that it especially was impressed by the manner of housing the boys, and their use in producing garden truck, fruits and poultry.

This condition was contrasted with the condition at the workhouse, where, the grand jury reported, it found the prisoners could be better employed than in the rock quarry, which provides the only means of employment. The report contained a recommendation that a municipal farm for prisoners in the city jail and workhouse be established.

The city jail was found to be crowded and the grand jury recommended that prisoners under sentence be transferred to the penitentiary or workhouse immediately after sentence is imposed.

The only comment on conditions at the city hospital was that the interior of the building appears to be in an insanitary condition, although it is kept clean.

The report concluded with a statement that an investigation had been conducted into charges that there was fraud in the last municipal election, but that none of the witnesses had had definite knowledge of frauds. A recommendation that the investigation be continued by the next grand jury was made.

CLASS OF 668 IS LARGEST IN HISTORY OF MISSOURI U.

Baccaulaurate Address Will Be Delivered Today, and Degrees Awarded on Wednesday.

COLUMBIA, Mo., June 2.—Six hundred and sixty-eight students in the University of Missouri are candidates for degrees and certificates at this year's commencement, which will be Wednesday. This is the university's seventy-fifth annual commencement, and the list of candidates for degrees and certificates is the largest in the history of the institution.

The Rev. Robert Nelson Spencer, rector of the Trinity Episcopal Church of Kansas City, will deliver the baccalaureate address tomorrow.

On Tuesday, June 5, will be the reunions of the classes of '67, '77, '92, '02, '07 and '12 at the columns on the quadrangle. Tuesday night a reception for the graduating class, the visiting alumni and guests of the university will be given at the Missouri Union.

On Wednesday, June 6, President A. Ross Hill will give the commencement address and the degrees, certificates, honors and scholarships will be conferred. Following the graduation exercises the class day exercises of the senior class will be held at the columns.

'TRENCH SALAD' ADDED TO RATION

Beets, Carrots and Turnips Grated to Make Dish.

LONDON, June 2.—Troops at the front are soon to be provided with an additional ration known as trench salad. It is a special "trial issue" of fresh vegetables, including beets, carrots and turnips. A salad grater will also be supplied to enable the soldier to make his own salad on the spot.

The idea is indorsed by the medical authorities, because it is hoped the salad will reduce the number of cases of such diseases as dysentery, rheumatism and trench fever.

Million-Dollar Telegraph Office.

CHICAGO, June 2.—The Western Union Telegraph Co. is about to build what is planned to be the most complete telegraph building in the country, it was announced today. The building will be in Chicago, on La Salle street, just south of Van Buren, and will cost $1,000,000.

JEFFERSON BARRACKS KITCHEN NO PLACE FOR WOMAN COOK

look down upon anything that was "girls' work."

They have given proof enough of manhood, courage and higher patriotism. Detraction from this fact is impossible. A company of men in butcher's aprons stood at attention as we entered the meat shop and Capt. McCannon explained how this department had been put on a basis of highest efficiency by Sergt. Aaron Caplan, in charge.

"If you were to compare the books of last year with today's records you would see what I mean, said the captain. We have a contract for beef now by which we get porter house steak for 17½ cents a pound, sirloin at 15½ cents, round steak for 13 cents, and so on.

"How is the quality keeping up, Sergeant?" asked the Captain.

"We are nearing the expiration of the contract, sir, so it isn't always so good."

"It is never too late to cancel the contract if the meat does not come up to standard," declared the Captain briefly.

"Was it your ambition to be a meat expert when you enlisted?" asked the Sergeant.

"Oh, no, I enlisted to be a soldier. Making the most of his detail is the business of a soldier," he replied.

"If the Captain will spare me a moment," he said, addressing the officer, "if the Captain finds it verified that Gen. Scott is going to Russia, would the Captain recommend that I be assigned to such a detachment? I believe I might render some special service as Russian is my native language.

And the Captain promised to take the matter up.

We went on to inspect the refrigeration and through the catacombs of the building lined with stores. Only a few days' supplies are kept on hand. Uncle Sam is not a hoarder of provisions, but depends upon the fluctuating market. I kept a sharp lookout for some service woman might render to replace men if necessary, but my ambitions were getting more and more modest. Potatoes were peeled by a more than human machine. Likewise dishes were washed by machinery more thoroughly than by hand.

One man was cutting his way out slice by slice of an entombment of bread loaves with a rapidity that was awe inspiring. As to waste, if I would wait until after retreat the Captain would take me through the kitchen and meat shop again and I could pass judgment upon the factor. At 6 o'clock we found meat shop scoured, sandpapered, bright and clean, and no vistage of the waste that makes also for insanitation.

It was the same way in the kitchen. Where had been such a hive of activity, now peace, order and quiet reigned. But again figures best settle the question of extravagance in the army. And the Captain, comparing reports from various officers, was able to furnish exact figures. The exact cost of feeding each man at Jefferson Barracks that day was .3658.

TUBERCULOSIS IS GRAVE DANGER TO THE FRENCH ARMY who are either in concentration camps or in their homes.

"Of these large numbers were being returned from time to time to France, either as they became ill and in bad physical condition and were a serious burden upon their captors or when some military operations which was being contemplated had rendered it desirable to evacuate the portion of the territory they occupied.

"When we were there, about 1000 a day were being returned through Switzerland by Avion and Geneva, and these people came back in the most deplorable condition. Of the first 20,000 of these civilian prisoners returned, it was said that 5000 were suffering from tuberculosis. They returned in the middle of the year 1915, in July and August. They had been back of the German lines for about eight months and the majority of them had never had their clothes off from the time they had been taken from their homes. They had been kept in Germany and had been returned to France wearing the same clothes which they wore when they left France seven or eight months before. You can readily imagine the conditions of these people, so the estimate that 5 or 6 per cent were suffering from tuberculosis is probably very conservative.

"There are now between 350,000 and 400,000 French prisoners of war in Germany. Again it seems wholly conservative to estimate that at least 5 or 6 per cent of these are suffering from tuberculosis—the French estimates run as high as 30 to 40 per cent. This would give over 20,000 more cases, and we may safely add another 20,000 cases actually now in the active armies of France. That would be only one-half of 1 per cent of the 4,000,000 men France still has in the ranks.

"In France there are no trained nurses, and people do not employ trained nurses in their homes. They nurse their own sick, or have untrained people less efficient generally than what we call a practical nurse. There are one or two small training schools in France, but their graduates are kept in the hospitals and so there are really no competent nurses, none that we would call trained nurses at all, and that complicates matters very much, because there are no social service workers, and, in fact, the French people have no conception of what social service or public health service is.

"The number of physicians in France was always small for reasons I shall revert to later, is now smaller

FIFTY REASONS WHY VAR-NE-SIS IS WORLD'S REMEDY FOR RHEUMATISM

Group of Men and Women Who Suffered From Painful Affliction of Joints Now Enjoy Good Health

W. A. VARNEY of VAR-NE-SIS
AND A GROUP SUPPORTERS

If these testimonials were not genuine, the authorities would not allow me to publish them. Many were wheel-chair and bed invalids—W. A. VARNEY.

"I could give you a thousand reasons why Var-ne-sis has become so popular, why one man recommends it to another," said W. A. Varney, the discoverer of Var-ne-sis. "The one best reason to the one who suffers is that it gets results, it relieves the pain and stiffness; the only reason why one should take any kind of treatment.

"These 50 men and women (count them) once suffered from rheumatism. They got results by taking Var-ne-sis. See them—talk to them—and you will know why Var-ne-sis is so effective in the treatment of chronic rheumatism of the joints. To these people Var-ne-sis is synonymous with health."

H. C. Hackett, Letter Carrier, 5 Fayette St., Cambridge, Mass.—Joint stiff—painful. Had rehumatism 20 years. Thanks Var-ne-sis for recovery.

J. W. Smith, 25 Pickett St., Beverly, Mass.—Had rheumatism 40 years. Var-ne-sis made him well.

Mrs. F. B. Spencer, 91 Cabot St., Chicopee, Mass.—Unable to close hands or wear rings. Joints now normal. Var-ne-sis did it.

F. A. Bryant, South Hanson, Mass.—Had rheumatic neuritis and stiff joints. Var-ne-sis conquered it.

Mrs. M. Dodge, Rockland St., Lynn, Mass.—A terrible case of rheumatism; recovered through the use of Var-ne-sis.

Nathan Cragin, Wilton, N. H.—Had rheumatism since a boy—had to use crutches. Took Var-ne-sis, no more rheumatism.

Mrs. L. H. Smith, 52 Concord St., Concord, N. H.—Says Var-ne-sis is wonderful. "I haven't an ache or a pain." C. M. Huntington, 107 Richards Place, West Haven, Conn.—"Var-ne-sis greatest medicine in the world. I was almost helpless."

Mrs. H. Wheaton, Short Beach, Conn.—Had rheumatism 18 years. Found health in Var-ne-sis.

G. L. Downs, 1842 Congress St., Portland, Maine—Unable to dress himself. Now ready for work. Thanks Var-ne-sis.

S. G. Pitts, Harrison, Maine—"I regret I did not know of Var-ne-sis before. The relief is wonderful." E. L. Fogg, Lynn, Mass.—"Had neuritis for years. Var-ne-sis cured me." Fred Dyne, 10 Walnut St., Rochester, N. H.—"Var-ne-sis conquers rheumatism. I know. I had it."

Mrs. M. A. Ratelle, 97 Prescott St., East Boston, Mass.—Crippled with rheumatism. "Var-ne-sis cured me." F. E. Davis, 204 Merrimac St., Haverhill, Mass.—Had rheumatism for years. "Var-ne-sis gave me new life." Mrs. G. B. Parker, 78 Woodlawn St., Everett, Mass.—"It's wonderful what Var-ne-sis has done for me." Prescott Abbott, 24 Sumerset St., Brockton, Mass.—"Not a sign of rheumatism since I took Var-ne-sis."

George Clark, 30 Mystic St., Arlington, Mass.—"Rheumatic neuritis made me [illegible] Var-ne-sis made me well."

Gladys Horton, 15 Abbott St., W. Lynn. [illegible] rheumatism since 4 years old. "Var-ne-sis made me know the joy of living." B. W. Taylor, 2 Summer St., Saugus, Mass.—Rheumatism. Told he would never be better. Var-ne-sis got results. Mrs. E. Batto, 57 Hancock St., Dorchester, Mass.—"Var-ne-sis did wonders for me." J. H. Martell, Capisic St., Portland, Maine—Fought rheumatism 12 years. Var-ne-sis won. T. Nicholson, 497 Summer St., Lynn, Mass.—"Found Var-ne-sis. Rheumatism disappeared."

H. A. Powers, 234 Pleasant St., Worcester, Mass.—"Fought rheumatism since a boy—none since taking Var-ne-sis."

Mrs. M. F. Usinger, 61 Whitmore St., Hartford, Conn.—"Joints like a dry hinge. Var-ne-sis made walking a pleasure."

Mrs. A. W. Howard, West Medford, Mass.—"Var-ne-sis freed me from rheumatism. I was confined to my room." L. A. Chaffin, 764 Broadway, Chelsea, Mass.—"Had to use crutches—Var-ne-sis cured me." C. G. Anderson, 22 Central St., Lowell, Mass.—"Had sciatica since a boy—it left when I took Var-ne-sis." W. H. Wallace, Westboro, Mass.—"Was in pain day and night. Var-ne-sis brought health to me."

Joseph Adams, Winthrop, Mass.—"Had rheumatism of feet until I took Var-ne-sis."

John H. Cleaves, Harvard, Mass.—"Var-ne-sis straightened my crooked joints."

T. F. Burke, 28 School St., Boston, Mass.—"Var-ne-sis helpad me wonderfully."

J. H. Fournier, 9 Remick St., Somerville, Mass.—Unable to work for two years until he secured Var-ne-sis.

Mrs. D. A. Coyle, 287 Pleasant St., Marlboro, Mass.—"Var-ne-sis enabled me to walk." H. H. Chandler, 1A City Hall Sq., Lynn, Mass.—"Var-ne-sis gave me health after 7 years of suffering." Wm. E. Goss, 104 Olive St., New Haven, Conn.—Rheumatism 5 years. Returns to work. Yes—Var-ne-sis did it. Mrs. L. McMasters, 313 Humphreys St., Lowell, Mass.—Wheel-chair invalid. Now walking, owing to Var-ne-sis. Mrs. B. Belcher, 150 Main St., Winthrop, Mass.—"No rheumatism since I took Var-ne-sis."

Mrs. A. M. Brackett, 15 Endicott St., Winthrop, Mass.—"I shout the praise of Var-ne-sis."

Mrs. W. B. Rounsville, 11 Cook St., Lynn, Mass.—Was helpless. Now well and strong. Var-ne-sis did it.

Mrs. F. A. Cheney, Moosup, Conn.—Wheel-chair invalid from rheumatism. Took Var-ne-sis—well today.

E. J. West, 4 Sawyer St., Dorchester, Mass.—Knee, hip and ankle stiff. A well man today, thanks to Var-ne-sis. J. Venter, 784 Eastern Av., Schenectady, N. Y.—Returns to work after suffering for years—Var-ne-sis was the doctor. Milo Matteson, 702 Broadway, Mechanicsville, N. Y.—"I believe I'd be a cripple but for Var-ne-sis." Rev. Isaac LeFleur, Waterville, Maine.—"I must give credit to Var-ne-sis for my recovery." E. F. Rodgers, 12 Marshall St., Needham, Mass.—Unable to close or open hands. Stiff knees. "Var-ne-sis cured me." John Lindley, 341 No. Colony St., Wallingford, Conn.—"Never too busy to tell what Var-ne-sis has done for me." G. L. Tooker, 47 High St., New Haven, Conn.—"Var-ne-sis overcome my neuritis." A. Field, Williams Av., Hyde Park, Mass.—"My knees were bent—Var-ne-sis straightened them." Officer George B. Palmer, 23 18th St., Lowell, Mass.—"Rheumatism has to go when you take Var-ne-sis."

To the sufferer from rheumatism there is but one thing to do—take Var-ne-sis, as these people have done, and you will get results. What has been done, can be done. Send to W. A. Varney, Lynn, Mass., for the story of Var-ne-sis.

To All Upholders of the Constitution of the United States

The American Union Against Militarism at Washington has advised those who oppose the drafting of men for the killing of their fellow-men to obey the law and register, but in so doing to STATE THEIR PERSONAL OBJECTIONS TO MILITARY SERVICE AND TO HAVE SAME RECORDED ON THE REGISTRATION BLANK.

Registration does not indicate your approval of the Conscription Law. In the opinion of able lawyers, this conscription law is unconstitutional, and it is proposed that legal action be taken to test this law. Therefore, it is important that the constitutional reasons for claiming exemption from military service be recorded by the registrar on the blank before it is signed.

The following reasons are suggested:

(1) Because the Conscription Law is unconstitutional and deprives me of constitutional rights guaranteed me by the Constitution of the United States.

(2) Because it is against my religious convictions to engage in or aid in any acts of war.

(3) Because it is against my moral convictions to kill a human being under any circumstances.

The American Legal Defense League has been organized in New York City to "legally defend in the courts, Constitutional Liberties in any part of the United States." One extract from a great decision of the United States Supreme Court at the end of the Civil War is an index to the principles of those who believe that the draft law is unconstitutional.

> "The Constitution is the law for rulers and people EQUALLY IN WAR AND IN PEACE, and covers with the shield of its protection all classes of men AT ALL TIMES AND UNDER ALL CIRCUMSTANCES. No doctrine involving more pernicious consequences was ever invented than that any of its provisions can be suspended during any of the great exigencies of the Government. Such doctrine leads directly to anarchy and despotism." (Ex parte Milligan.)

We stand for the rigid maintenance of American democracy. We are upholders of the Constitution of the United States and are loyal to the great principles and traditions of human freedom to which our flag is dedicated.

It is not only proposed to test the constitutionality of the Conscription Law by legal procedure, but also to secure the repeal of all other laws that deprive us of free speech and other rights guaranteed by the Constitution. Your whole-hearted assistance is needed in this effort. There is much to be done. Get in touch with the Committee at once. We must uphold the Constitution of the United States.

than ever. There never was more than one physician to every 3000 inhabitants in France. In the United States the proportion is one physician to every 700 people. At the time we were at Havre there were only 17 doctors available for the needs of the civilian population, or about one doctor to every 8000 men, women and children.

"Now to deal with the problem I have attempted to outline, there are available in France at the present time only about 11,000 beds in the so-called sanitary stations which have been created since the war began and in the special hospitals and sanitaria for tuberculosis. It is pathetically inadequate. The best the French hope to do is to increase the number of beds to 15,000 or 16,000 before the end of this year. Then there are a few dispensaries; well-organized, well-equipped and administered—but only about a dozen in all—and a few other dispensaries which have done, and can do, comparatively little work.

"One striking lesson may be brought home by a comparison between the experience of France with England in this matter of tuberculosis. The English public health service is the best in the world, it is even more progressive than our own and far better than Germany's ever was. As a result, England was able to raise an army of 5,000,000 men, and I doubt very much if they have had 5000 cases of tuberculosis since the war began.

"Slight suspicion of it caused the rejection of a recruit and "lung trouble" was about as popular as smallpox would have been with the army doctors. At the first suspicion of tuberculosis a man was returned home for isolation and observation and the result is that England has no tuberculosis problem at all, while France has a problem of such magnitude that it threatens the future vitality of her race and the economic development of her people.

"The contrast between England and France is all the more striking and instructive in that it proves conclusively that it is not because measures for the prevention of tuberculosis are wanting or inefficient that tuberculosis has become such a serious problem in France. it is simply because the well-tried measures have not been applied both before and since the outbreak of the war in an efficient manner. In England the tuberculosis problem had been met efficiently before the war; in France, on the other hand, virtually nothing had been done.

Dr. Biggs then went on to tell me the lack of surgeons and trained nurses at the front is due partly to the enormous number of men engaged at one time which results in the wounded being sent back by the thousands after a heavy engagement, and partly to the very large number of doctors who have been killed in action. Dr. Biggs said:

"No one who has not actually been at the front can have a right conception of the work the medical units do and of the dangers they undergo. At the beginning of the war doctors, who from the military standpoint, are noncombatants, had heavier losses comparaticely than any other branch of the service. Indeed, the highest losses occurred in the medical units, then in the infantry regiments, then in the artillery and lastly of all in the Aviation Corps. That sounds entirely topsy-turvy, I know, but it was true. Aviation was the safest and the Red Cross the most dangerous of the service.

"The result has been that England and France have been virtually stripped of surgeons and doctors, thousands of skilled lives have been sacrificed because no one could imagine that doctors tending to the wounded would be shot and bayonetted and gased as they have been. Now all the competent operators are well back of the lines and the wounded are brought back by ambulance drivers, who pick them up after dark. It is dangerous work at that and one in which American youths have specially distinguished themselves.

"Then, of course, there is another phase. It is that military surgery is not the surgery of civil life. It is an entirely different thing. In ordinary practice it is quite a rare thing for a surgeon to cut off arms and legs and do important plastic work on men's faces. Chances have to be taken at base hospitals which would seem out of the question to the most progressive men in civil practice. However, thanks to early inoculations for tetanus, and to a liberal use of iodine, many lives have been saved.

"Gangrene has caused a great deal of trouble and our methods have made enormous progress, but although each surgeon does the work of 10 men, more and more are needed. Here again Americans have greatly distinguished themselves, as their technique is far superior to that of the French doctors. Wherever the Carrel treatment has been properly put into effect it has given great results; indeed, I can say altogether extraordinary results, but the difficulty is that it needs a high degree of scientific knowledge, combined with the finest technique in order to insure its success.

"It is to America that France and England must look for surgeons and trained nurses. We have about 150,000 doctors in the United States. The trouble is that so few of them speak French, and because it gives the patient confidence and enables the physician to give instructions for the proper nursing of his cases. There are already 1000 American doctors either on their way or about to start for Europe, and we ought to send many thousands more. To each I would say, learn French."

CHAPLAIN TELLS OF LAST DAYS OF PRINCE FRIEDRICH

LONDON, June 2.—An interesting account of the last days of Prince Karl Friedrich, nephew of the German Emperor, who was wounded when flying and taken prisoner by the Australians, is given in a letter received here from the Rev. Mr. Caldwell, a Baptist minister, who is official chaplain to the German prisoners in the General Hospital in France.

"If I am anything," the minister quoted the Prince as saying to him, "I am a sport. I have played tennis with Wilding and other first-class players. I shall never forget the good times I had in England when I played them all. The kindness which has surrounded me since I became a prisoner has brought back the memory of those days.

"The Australians were good to me; the officers and soldiers who attended me coming down the line were very considerate, and the whole atmosphere of this hospital is kindness. I am grateful to you and all who wish me well.

"I lie here a helpless prisoner, but I have no regrets. I did my best for my country, and I am not sorry I am finished with the war. I want to live. I am young and when the war is over I shall go back and help to build up my nation again."

Why Doctors and Eye Specialists Prescribe Bon-Opto--Strengthens Eyesight 50% in a Week's Time in many instances. Dr. Smith, an oculist, obtains remarkable results with it in 24 hours' time—Dr. Beck, an eye specialist of 20 years' experience, says it should be kept in every hospital and prescribed by every physician—says Bon-Opto daily eye baths help keep the eyes strong, keen and brilliant, even to ripe old age.

The formula of Bon-Opto is printed on the labels so that the patient may know just what he is using and the physician just what he is prescribing—ask your doctor or druggist about Bon-Opto or use Bon-Opto today and your eyes will be stronger tomorrow.

From Doctors' Reports on Patients Who Have Used Bon-Opto

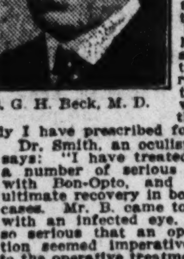
"Before resorting to the operative treatment I prescribed Bon-Opto, and in 24 hours the secretion had lessened, the inflammatory symptoms began to subside and in 7 days the eye was cured and retained its normal vision.

"Strange and amazing as it may seem, Bon-Opto had so strengthened her eyesight that she was able to dispense with her distance glasses, and her headaches and neuralgia had left her. In this instance I should say her eyesight had improved 100 per cent."—(Full report of this case and physician's name given in the accompanying article.)

Boston, Mass.—Victims of eye strain and other eye weaknesses, and those who wear glasses, will be glad to know that Doctors and Eye Specialists now agree there is a real hope and help for them. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored and many who once wore glasses say they have thrown them away. One man says, after using it: "I was almost blind. Could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without my glasses, and my eyes do not hurt any more. At night they would pain dreadfully. Now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can read even fine print without glasses." Another who used it says: "I was bothered with my eye strain caused by overworked, tired eyes, which induced fierce headaches. I have worn glasses for several years, both for distance and work, and without them I could not read my own name on an envelope or the typewriting on a machine before me. I can do both now and have discarded my long-distance glasses altogether. I can count the fluttering leaves on the trees across the street now, which for several years have looked like a dim green blur to me. I cannot express my joy at what it has done for me."

It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time, and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses.

Dr. Beck, an eye specialist of nearly 20 years' practice, says: "A patient came to me who was suffering from Blepharitis Marginalis, with all the concomitant symptoms, as morning agglutination of the lids, chronic conjunctivitis and epiphora. Her eyes when not congested had the dull, suffused expression common to such cases. Having run out of her medicine, a friend suggested Bon-Opto. She used this treatment, and not only overcame her distressing condition, but, strange and amazing as it may seem, so strengthened her eyesight that she was able to dispense with her distance glasses and her headache and neuralgia left her. In this instance I should say her eyesight was improved 100 per cent. I have since verified the efficacy of this treatment in a number of cases, and have seen the eyesight improve from 25 to 75 per cent in a remarkably short time. I can say it works more quickly than any other remedy I have prescribed for the eyes."

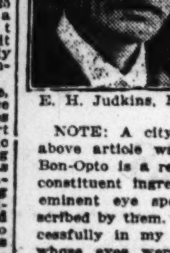


E. G. H. Beck, M. D.

Dr. Smith, an oculist of wide experience, says: "I have treated in private practice a number of serious ophthalmic diseases with Bon-Opto, and am able to report ultimate recovery in both acute and chronic cases. Mr. B. came to my office suffering with an infected eye. The condition was so serious that an operation for enucleation seemed imperative. Before resorting to the operative treatment I prescribed Bon-Opto, and in 24 hours the secretion had lessened, inflammatory symptoms began to subside, and in seven days the eye was cured and retained its normal vision. Another case of extreme convergent strabismus (cross eyes) escaped the surgeon's knife by the timely use of your collyrium. The tightened external muscles yielded to the soothing and anodyne effects of Bon-Opto. I always instill Bon-Opto after removal of foreign bodies and apply it locally to all burns, ulcers and spots on the eyeball or the lids for its therapeutic effect. By cleansing the lids of secretions and acting as a tonic for the eyeball itself the vision is rendered more acute, hence the number of cases of discarded glasses."

Dr. Connor says: "My eyes were in bad condition owing to the severe strain arising from protracted microscopical research work. Bon-Oto, used according to directions, rendered a surprising service. I found my eyes remarkably strengthened, so much so I have put aside my glasses without discomfort. Several of my colleagues have also used it, and we are agreed as to its results. In a few days, under my observation, the eyes of an astigmatic case were so improved that glasses have been discarded by the patient."

Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by the use of Bon-Opto, and if you want to strengthen your eyes, go to any drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and let it dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start, and inflammation and redness will quickly disappear. If your eyes bother you even a little it is your duty to take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have saved their sight if they had cared for their eyes in time.



E. H. Judkins, M. D.

NOTE: A city physician, to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Yes, Bon-Opto is a remarkable eye remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. I have used it very successfully in my own practice on patients whose eyes were strained through overwork or misfit glasses. I can highly recommend it in case of weak, watery, aching, smarting, itching, burning eyes, red lids, blurred vision or for eyes inflamed from exposure to smoke, sun, dust or wind. It is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." Bon-Opto is not a patent medicine or secret remedy. It is an ethical preparation, the formula being printed on the package. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It is dispensed by all good druggists in this city, including Johnson, Enderle & Pauley, Judge & Dolph, and Wolff-Wilson drug companies.—ADVERTISEMENT.

Stop Corn Pain in Two Minutes by the Clock—Easy and Simple

The magic of Ice-Mint does it. Soreness stops quickly and gradually the corn loosens and comes out. Try it. Your feet will feel cool and fine.

Thanks to a new discovery made from a Japanese product, your foot troubles can be quickly ended.

Ice-Mint, as this new preparation is called, is said to shrivel up hard corns, soft corns or corns between the toes so that they can be lifted out easily with the fingers.

Rub a little on any tender corn or callous. Instantly the soreness is removed and shortly the corn or callous will loosen so that it can be lifted right out with the fingers—root and all. No foolishness.

Ice-Mint is a clean, creamy, snow-white, non-poisonous substance and does not inflame or even irritate the most tender skin. There is no pain, smarting, or even a bit of soreness while applying Ice-Mint or afterwards. It acts so gently, so magically that you will never want to run the risk of blood poisoning by cutting a corn again.

Ask your druggist for a small jar of Ice-Mint which will cost little yet is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callous. You'll like it immensely.—ADVERTISEMENT.

An End To The Curse Of Wearing Worthless Trusses

No More Rupture Troubles
60 Days Trial To Prove It

You Don't Have to Risk a Penny

Here is something absolutely guaranteed to keep your rupture from coming out.

And you can try it sixty days—make a thorough prove-it-to-you test—without having to risk a penny.

If it cannot be made to keep your rupture from coming out or from bothering you in any way—then it won't cost you a single cent.

The Only Thing Good Enough to Stand Such a Test

You know as well as we that you can't tell anything about a truss or anything else for rupture merely by trying it on. That's the worst of going to a drug store or local truss fitter's.

A truss or so-called "appliance" may seem all right when you first put it on and afterwards prove utterly worthless.

The only way in the world you can make sure of exactly what you are getting is by a 60-days' trial—a thorough day-after-day test.

And our guaranteed rupture-holder—the famous Cluthe—is the only thing of any kind whatever for rupture that you can get on sixty days' trial, the only thing good enough to stand such a long and thorough test.

Something Nothing Else Does

The Cluthe is so utterly different from anything else for rupture that it has received eighteen separate patents.

It provides the only way ever discovered for overcoming the weakness which is the real cause of rupture.

Just how it does that—entirely automatically—is all explained in the free book.

To Save You From Operation

The Cluthe has so thoroughly proved its merits that many physicians in all parts of the world recommend it instead of advising operation. It has brought complete recovery in hundreds of cases after operation has proved a failure.

No Belts or Leg-Straps to Annoy You

That's why people who try this truss say it is as comfortable as their clothing. It is water-proof—will hold in the bath. Easily kept clean.

Get World's Greatest Rupture Book

Just write for our free book and find out everything you want to know. Full of facts never before put in print. Cloth-bound—104 pages—20 separate articles and 23 photographic illustrations. Will save you from being fooled and save you from wasting money.

Explains why elastic and spring trusses are a wicked crime—why they are the ruptured man's worst enemy—why the law should stop their sale.

Exposes the humbug "appliances," "methods," "plasters," "locks," etc.

Shows why operation is always dangerous, and why, if a man manages to get well from the operation, he often has to keep on wearing a truss.

And it tells all about the famous Cluthe Automatic Massaging Truss, how you can try it sixty days and how little it costs if you keep it.

Gives endorsements of over 5000 people.

Better write for the book today—it tells things you could never find out by going to doctors or drug stores. Simply use the coupon below or say in a letter or postal, "Send me your book."

HOPE TO COMPLETE THE LIBERTY LOAN SALE THIS WEEK

Workers to Make Effort to Dispose of Allotment of $25,000,000 Bonds.

This will be the big week in the Liberty Loan drive. St. Louis has until June 15 to dispose of its allotment of $25,000,000, but the men who are managing it expect to finish sooner than that. They plan to have the $25,000,000 sold by Monday, June 11.

This is not to be accomplished, however, without work and a lot of it. Many persons who should be buying bonds are not doing so because of misinformation of one sort or another. For one thing, many think that the money they put in the bonds will be tied up for 30 years. That is a mistake. The bonds are salable and negotiable and no doubt is felt that they can be disposed of at any time that any holder wants to convert them into money.

Another thing is the mistaken impression that the Liberty Bond issue has been oversubscribed. And still another is that the banks and trust companies and bond companies which are pushing the sale are making a profit out of the bonds. The issue has not been oversubscribed. It has not even been subscribed. And nobody is making any profit out of the sale of the bonds. The companies that are pushing the sale are contributing their services and the services of their principal officials and many of their employes to the Government.

Political Organizations to Aid.

The Democratic and Republican city organizations will help tomorrow, Tuesday and Wednesday in a house-to-house canvass. Precinct committeemen will call on everybody in their precincts and will take the names of all who want to buy bonds. The names will be turned over to the banks and trust companies, which will send bond salesmen to close the transactions. At least 1000 men connected with the political organizations will be engaged in the work.

The Missouri Bankers' Association will establish headquarters tomorrow at 510 Locust street for their Liberty Loan Organization, which will be operated through a chairman appointed in each county. W. F. Keyser of Sedalia, secretary, is in charge.

Every member of the Central Butter, Egg and Poultry Exchange has subscribed for $50 Liberty Bonds, and some members took as high as $1000 worth.

"St. Louis to the front with men and dollars," is the title of a one-reel motion picture filmed yesterday at the Chamber of Commerce, Union Depot and Forest Park. More than 100 persons took part in various scenes showing the response being given in St. Louis to the bond issue. Among those appearing on the film are Rolla Wells, Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank; W. R. Compton, J. Lionberger Davis, Richard S. Hawes and James E. Smith.

Chairman Signs Application.

The bond salesmen reported a single sale of $220,000 to one individual yesterday. They are arranging to place tables and booths in the large retail stores, and furnish a salesman to stay there all day answering questions concerning the bonds and taking subscriptions.

McAdoo Congratulates St. Louis on Liberty Bond Organization

WILLIAM G. McADOO, secretary of the treasury, sent the following letter to the Chamber of Commerce, congratulating St. Louis on the splendid organization created for the sale of Liberty Bonds:

Paul V. Bunn, Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce.

Dear Sir:

I have read with deep interest details of the campaign in Saint Louis in behalf of the Liberty Loan. Your plans appear to be unusually comprehensive and I want to congratulate you and your associates on the work already done and that contemplated. I think that the people of the country are becoming aroused to the necessity of investing in Liberty Bonds, but the thing most needed now is organization and this appears to be well under way in Saint Louis. I earnestly hope that your efforts will be successful and that the people of Saint Louis will respond nobly. Very sincerely yours,

W. G. McADOO,
Secretary U. S. Treasury.

Social Economy School Closing.

The commencement exercises of the Missouri School of Social Economy, which is a part of the State University, will be held tomorrow evening at 2221 Locust street. The address to the seven graduates and the audience will be delivered by Dr. George B. Mangold, head of the school, his subject being "The Social Worker as a Factor in Social Progress." Diplomas will be presented by Mrs. W. E. Fischel.

"DENATURED" BULL FIGHTS UNPOPULAR WITH MEXICANS

Carranza Refuses to Allow Animals to Be Killed, Even at a Red Cross Benefit.

MEXICO CITY, June 2.—Regulation bull fights now are prohibited in Mexico by decrees of President Carranza, but, recently, contests in which the bull is not killed, known as "novilladas," have been sanctioned. These have not been particularly popular with the bull-fight enthusiasts, who regard them much in the same light that baseball fanatics in the United States would regard a ball game in which no batter was allowed to do anything but bunt.

A delegation of society women interested in Red Cross work called on Gen. Carranza recently and requested that he sanction a contest for the benefit of the Red Cross, in which the bull would be killed. They explained that it was feared that if only the denatured performance were advertised the receipts of the benefit performance would not gratly swell the treasury of the Red Cross.

Gen. Carranza declined to comply with the request.

DETACHABLE MOTOR ON BARGE

Device Used to Haul Coal From Mines to London.

LONDON, June 2.—The first stage of a striking experiment in inland water transport was completed with the arrival in London the other day of two barges laden with coal from collieries in the north of England. The barges were propelled for 160 miles by a detachable motor.

The new device consists of a four-cylinder 17-horsepower marine engine, capable of hauling two boats with a load of 100 tons. It is mounted on the top of the cabin, and controlled from the helm. Petrol is employed for starting, and paraffin when running. The engine and attachments can be transshipped from one barge to another in a few minutes, and it stated that its use means economy in time and money.

CHALONER SAYS HE IS SANE

New York Millionaire Petitions Court to Adjudge Him So.

NEW YORK, June 2.—John Armstrong Chaloner today petitioned the Supreme Court of New York to adjudge him sane and competent to manage his "own person and property." Chaloner is still regarded as an insane man in the State of New York, having escaped from Bloomingdale Asylum in 1900. The courts of Virginia have declared him sane.

The petition shows that Chaloner values his estate at considerably more than a million dollars. Chaloner's plan to reestablish a $100,000 trust fund to help needy artists yesterday received the legal sanction of the Supreme Court.

Folly to Let a Man Drink, Says Druggist Brown, of Cleveland, Who Gives a Home Remedy

A New Treatment Given Without the Consent or Knowledge of the Drinker.

Cleveland, Ohio.—A woman who lets a man drink is foolish, says Druggist Brown, for no man who drinks even a little bit is safe. A woman can break the drink habit in a few weeks for half what a man spends on liquor in the same time, and the drinker need never know she did it. For the sake and safety of both stop the drink habit in its beginning. Let the first whiff of liquor on his breath be your danger signal, but even if he is rum-soaked through and through do not despair: he can be saved and it is your duty to save him. Druggist Brown knows the awful curse of strong drink, because he himself has been a victim. A loving sister rescued him from the brink of a drunkard's grave and kept her secret 10 years, then she told him how she did it. She saved him from the demon drink, rescued him from his own depraved self by means of a secret remedy, the formula of an old German chemist. To save other families from the curse of drink and to help other victims out of the murk and mire he now makes the formula public. Any druggist can help you if you long to save a loved one. Just ask your druggist for prepared tescum powders and drop a powder twice a day in tea, coffee, milk or any other drink. Liquor soon ceases to taste the same, the craving for it vanishes, and, lo, one more drunkard is saved without knowing why he lost the taste for strong drink.

One woman who used this prescription on her husband says: "It is going on the fourth week since he has touched a drop of anything in the form of liquor or used tobacco of any kind. He seems already like a different man. Tescum has gained a wonderful enthusiast in me. I regard it as a Godsend. Just think, I have never seen my husband sober for more than 48 hours in years and now it is going on one month since he had his last drink."

Another one gratefully writes: "I have used tescum powders on my husband and find it one of the greatest cures in this world. He hasn't taken a drink for almost five weeks and says he never will. My home does not seem like the same place and life seems worth living. I hope thousands gain what I have. This has been a good new year for me without drink in my home."

Note: Prepared tescum, referred to above, should not be given except where it is desired to destroy all taste for alcoholic drinks. Women who approve of moderate drinking and believe moderate drinkers safe should give tescum only when they see, as most do in time, that the danger line is plainly near. Since this formula has been published, Johnson-Enderle-Pauley, Wolff-Wilson, and other druggists have filled it repeatedly.—ADVERTISEMENT.

SOUTHERN WOMAN MAGAZINE ISSUED HERE THIS MONTH

Articles by Five St. Louisans in First Number Since Removal From Nashville.

R. L. BURCH IS PUBLISHER

Thomas H. West, in Article, Tells "How We Fought in the Sixties."

The first issue of the Southern Woman's Magazine to appear since the recent removal of the magazine from Nashville, Tenn., to St. Louis, is the June number, which has just been published. Robert F. Burch is publisher of the magazine, and Anne Rankin is editor. The publication office is at Ninth and Walnut streets.

Besides attractive fiction and pictorial features, the magazine contains articles by five St. Louisans. Mrs. Frank V. Hammar, chairman of the St. Louis Chapter of the American Red Cross, furnishes an illustrated article on "American Red Cross, the Humanitarian Arm of Our Government." She tells of the work done in the Red Cross by others than physicians and nurses, who are most commonly associated in the public mind with the Red Cross.

She emphasizes the idea of service, in all branches of the Red Cross work, and says organizers will soon go through every state, forming chapters in all the larger places, and branches in towns and villages.

Article by Thomas H. West.

Thomas H. West, St. Louis banker, writes on "How We Fought in the Sixties." He tells his experience, as a youthful member of the Twenty-first Tennessee Cavalry, under the command of Gen. Forrest, one of the most noted military leaders of the Confederacy. He describes Gen. Forrest as "a natural-born soldier, an ideal cavalry officer, second to none that fought on either side. No man dared disobey his commands. His presence was an inspiration. He generally led the charge; and his favorite way was to charge, and continue to charge—press the enemy, and when an advantage was gained use it—follow it up until victory was complete. History now claims one of the causes of our defeat was the small number of cavalry soldiers. I believe it, and believe Forrest, with double the army, could have prolonged the war."

"The Spirit of St. Louis" is the title of an illustrated article by Walter B. Stevens, who reviews the city's history and tells of its present financial and industrial position.

Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust Co., writes on "Financing War." He holds that, because of the establishment of the Federal reserve banking system and because of the Aldrich-Vreeland act, the United States is now in a better position to finance a war than any nation has ever been. He praises Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo as "the right man in the right place during a crisis." He predicts that the loans made to the allies will be paid after peace comes, though the payment may not be made on the day the loans first mature.

Charles Nagel Contributor.

Charles Nagel's contribution is entitled "The Spirit of Self-Sacrifice—the Soul of Our New Day." His remarks are prefatory to a poem, "Mary," by Irene McLeod, which was recently printed in the Yale Review, and which he obtained permission to reproduce.

Besides the articles by St. Louisans there is a local interest in an allustrated article by Emerson Hough on "A Forgotten Hero," Capt. Meriwether Lewis of the Lewis and Clark expedition of 1805-6.

ARMY STUDIES CIRCUS METHODS

Army officers have made a study of the loading and transportation methods used by the Carl Hagenbeck-Wallace circus which will appear in St. Louis in the week beginning June 11. It is expected that this observation will be of value to the Government when it becomes necessary to move large bodies of troops across the country.

Especial attention is being paid to the cooking and commissary arrangements which provide for the serving of more than 3000 meals daily. The loading of wagons and other equipment on freight cars also has furnished valuable suggestions to the army observers.

BRITISH SUBMARINE SAT FOR HOURS ON U-BOAT TO DROWN IT

Dived to Rest and Landed on German Craft at Sea Bottom, Smashing Conning Tower.

LONDON, June 2.—The report published in the Rheinische Westfalische Zeitung of Essen that a German submarine, while submerged, rammed a British submarine in the channel on April 19, and that the two parted after finding it impossible to fight effectively, has been gossiped about here for some time, the British submarine having returned undamaged.

This was the second incident of the kind this spring. In the previous case a British submarine dived for a rest on the bottom of the sea and landed squarely on top of a German submarine already at rest, smashing in the German's conning tower. The British craft, undamaged, remained on the helpless German U-boat for several hours in order to make certain that it was put out of commission. The British boat finally rose to the surface and dropped a number of bombs to clinch the fate of the Germans.

SALAZAR TO SING 'AIDA' TENOR ROLE TUESDAY NIGHT

Costa Rican Artist to Appear in Initial Production at Municipal Open-Air Theater.

DRESS REHEARSAL TODAY

Famous Opera to Run First Four Nights, With Operatic Concert to End Engagement.

Manuel Salazar, Costa Rican tenor, will sing the role of Radames in the first performance of "Aida" in the new municipal open-air theater in Forest Park Tuesday night, it was announced yesterday. Delegates to the advertising convention will attend this performance, which will mark the opening of the new theater.

Salazar made his first St. Louis appearance in February, 1916, when he sang the roles of Radames with the San Carlo Opera Company at the Odeon. He scored a remarkable success on this first appearance, by the robust quality of his voice and by his virile performance of the role, which offers a fine opportunity in acting. He repeated this success in other roles on following nights, and in his appearance here with the same company last winter.

Mme. Rappold Sings Wednesday

Beyond the announcement of Salazar's appearance on the initial night, and the announcement that Mme. Marie Rappold of the Metropolitan Opera Company will sing the title role Wednesday night, the assignments of the principals on the four nights of the opera have not been announced.

The cast, with alternates in the leading roles, is as follows:

Aida, Marie Rappold and Francesca Peralta! Amneris, Cyrena Van Gordon and Margaret Jarman; Radames, Manual Salazar and Romeo Boscacci; Amonasro, Louis Greidler and Roberto Viglione; Ramfis, Virgilio Lazzar and Carl Cochems; the King, Constantin Nicolay; Messenger, F. Finzi; a Priestess, Marie Sundelius and Elda Vettori.

Fulgenzio Guerrieri is conductor, Ernest Knoch chorus director and concert conductor, Armando Agnini stage director and Ester Zanini Bonfiglio is premier danseuse and ballet mistress.

Dress Rehearsal Today.

The first dress rehearsal of principals, chorus and ballet, with the orchestra, on the open-air stage, is scheduled for 10:30 this morning. After the rehearsal a barbecue luncheon will be served to all the performers.

A box office at the main entrance to the new theater will be open all day today. The scale of seat prices ranges from 25 cents to $2.

The bill for the first four nights will be "Aida," and Saturday night an operatic concert will be given. In case rain prevents any performance, announcement will be made as to the subsequent schedule.

TUBERCULOSIS SOCIETY ENTERTAINMENT JUNE 8

Ball Game Will Be Preceded by Military Pageant, Cabaret and Other Events.

Robison Field will be turned over to the St. Louis Tuberculosis Society June 8 for an entertainment for the benefit of the society. One of the principal events of the day will be a baseball game between the Cardinals and the Boston club. The game will begin at 4 p. m. and will be preceded by a military pageant, with competitive drills and dress parade, band concert, cabaret and the finish of the boys' marathon race.

Advance sales of tickets indicate an attendance of 15,000. All of the proceeds will go into the treasury of the Tuberculosis Society to carry on its work of relief and prevention of tuberculosis.

Fifty boys have entered the marathon race, which will be under the direction of Tom Watts of the Missouri Athletic Association. Seven silver loving cups have been presented as prizes by the St. Louis newspapers, the Chamber of Commerce, Advertising Club of St. Louis, the Cardinals, Western Association of the Amateur Athletic Union, Triple A Association and the St. Louis Tuberculosis Society.

Society girls and women will sell score cards in the stands and on the grounds. There will be a coupon on each score card entitling the holder to one of 8000 prizes to be distributed. The prizes include automobiles, live puppies, foodstuffs, wearing apparel, jewelry, hardware and coal.

The entertainment will begin at 2 p. m. The following committees are in charge of the event: General Arrangements—Capt. J. Ferd Oberwinder, Capt. Hugh McKittrick Jones, Charles P. Pettus, A. W. Jones Jr. Entertainment—Mrs. Horace S. Rumsey. Marathon—Mrs. J. M. Michaels. Concessions—Mrs. Alvin Bauman. Headquarters—Mrs. William Dee Becker. Score Cards—Mrs. Nat S. Brown. Presents—Mrs. H. A. NEW BRAND OF WHITLOCK'S NAME

"Frandt Chitlock" in Geneva Paper—One at Berne Gets It "Whitlock Brand."

BERNE, Switzerland, June 2.—The difficulty of spelling American names is almost as great for the average Swiss paper as it is for an American paper to spell correctly a Russian name.

When Brand Whitlock, the American Minister to Belgium, came out recently on his way to Havre, the Journal de Geneve referred to him flatteringly as "Sir Frandt Chitlock." The mistake was called to the attention of the Bund of Berne, which in its next issue rectified the "ridiculous misspelling of the name of the American Minister to Belgium, Whitlock Brand."

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

GOVERNOR ORDERS AN INQUIRY INTO GRAFT CHARGES

Directs Attorney-General to Co-operate With Circuit Attorney in Police Salary Bill Case and Investigate Any Other Suspicious Legislative Actions.

McALLISTER READY TO GIVE ASSISTANCE

Says He Will Come to St. Louis as Soon as Possible to Confer With McDaniel, Who Requested Aid of State Official.

Gov. Gardner, at the request of Circuit-Attorney McDaniel, yesterday directed Attorney-General McAllister to begin a State-wide investigation of charges of graft in the last Missouri Legislature.

The Attorney-General was instructed to co-operate with the Circuit-Attorney in the St. Louis Grand Jury inquiry into the attempted raising of a $15,585 slush fund to promote the passage of the police salary increase bill, which already has resulted in the indictment of Representative Frank H. Farris of Rolla, Democratic floor leader in the last House, on a charge of conspiring to commit a felony, and to investigate any showing of graft in connection with any other legislation.

The Governor's Letter.

The Governor's letter to the Attorney-General was made public by Xenophon P. Wilfley, chairman of the Board of Election Commissioners. It follows:

I am just in receipt of a communication from the Hon. Lawrence McDaniel, Circuit Attorney of St. Louis, requesting that I direct the Attorney General to at once co-operate with him in conducting an investigation before the Grand Jury of the city of St. Louis which convenes Monday, June 4.

The Circuit Attorney advises me that he is making this request under the provisions of section 967, Revised statutes of Missouri, 1909, and he further states that he makes the request of me as Governor in order that it may be definitely determined whether or not any one is guilty of crime in any part of this state in connection with the police salary increase bill.

Pursuant to this request and under the authority vested in me under the statutes I direct that you arrange to co-operate with the Circuit Attorney of the City of St. Louis and be in St. Louis as soon as convenient for you to do so.

If in your investigation you find crimes and offenses against the State were committed outside the jurisdiction of the city of St. Louis in connection with the police fund or other legislative enactments, I hereby direct you to proceed with investigations in those jurisdictions where such crimes have been committed to the full extent of the authority of your office.

Ready to Begin Inquiry.

The Attorney-General told a Post-Dispatch reporter over the telephone that he had talked with the Governor, and that he would proceed with the investigation, but that he did not know how soon he could begin.

"There are many matters in my office that require attention," he said, "and I do not know just when I can get to St. Louis, but it will be as soon as . If I find evidence of violations of the law in any jurisdiction outside of St. Louis I shall ask the Circuit Judge in that jurisdiction to call a grand jury. It is not obligatory on a Judge to comply with such a request. The law requires that a grand jury be called in each jurisdiction at least once a year, but the calling of a special grand jury rests solely with the Judge."

Although the Circuit Attorney has given no indication of the evidence in his possession, it is understood that it places the jurisdiction for prosecution in Jefferson City.

Text of Letter to Governor.

The text of the Circuit Attorney's letter to the Governor follows:

The April term Grand Jury for the city of St. Louis this morning made its final report. Since the seventeenth of May this Grand Jury and the Circuit Attorney's office have been constantly engaged in investigating the raising and handling of money in the Police Department for the passage of the bill increasing the pay of the police officers in this city. The report of the Grand Jury, will of course, speak for itself.

The June term grand jury will be empanelled Monday, June 4, and it is my purpose to continue the investigation with that grand jury. There are many features of the matter that remain to be investigated. It is my intention to go to the bottom of the whole matter.

During the course of the investigation up to this time I have come into possession of information which, of course, I am not at liberty to disclose, because of the

$4000 INSURANCE FOR EVERY U. S. FIGHTER IS PROPOSED

Plan Is to Provide Free Policies for Soldiers and Sailors in Lieu of Pension.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—Plans for issuing $4000 free Government insurance on the life of every American soldier and sailor during the war in lieu of pension arrangements, will be taken up next week by the Council of National Defense. A report prepared by Assistant Secretary Sweet of the Commerce Department, urges that the insurance be provided before troops are sent to France.

The plan as prepared provide for a flat insurance of $4000 on the life of every officer and private in the military and naval service, to be paid to his beneficiaries without premiums. A Government insurance bureau would handle the whole subject and there would be provision for a system of insurance by which officers and men desiring to do so could take out amounts higher than the $4000 free policy by paying premiums at peace rates.

SUN SPOTS CAUSED RECENT TORNADOES, ASTRONOMER SAYS

Brother Hubert Predicts Another Storm Period Between June 14 and 22.

Brother Hubert of Christian Brothers' College, astronomer and student of sun spots, said last night that sun spots had caused the tornadoes of the past week in Illinois, Missouri and Oklahoma, and that another storm and tornado period, from the same cause may be expected between June 14 and June 22.

July 23, last, in the midst of a severe drouth, Brother Hubert predicted, from his observation of the sun spots, that rain would come within 36 hours. It did not come, and the only explanation the scientist was able to make was that "All signs fail in a dry season.'

Brother Hubert said he predicted the recent tornado period in talks with his pupils. The sun spots which heralded that period have dispersed, he said, but another group of spots has begun to form, and this indicates that the sun is preparing to give off great quantities of electric energy. He believes the coming storm period will be longer in duration than the recent one, but says the storms may not be so violent.

WOMAN KNITS IN COURT AS ACCOUNTING SUIT PROGRESSES

Mrs. Edward J. Walsh Perseveres in Patriotic Work While Watching Husband's Litigation.

Mrs. Edward J. Walsh of 4349 Westminster place, has taken her knitting to court for several days past. While the suit of her husband and his mother, Mrs. Julia Maffitt Walsh of 4341 Westminster place, against his uncle, Julius S. Walsh, the banker, and others, for an accounting of the affairs of the Mississippi Glass Co., has been on trial before Judge Garesche, she has knitted garments for soldiers.

Mrs. Edward J. Walsh was formerly Miss Winifred Erwin and is the daughter of Col. J. B. Erwin, one of the commanders of the recent expeditionary force in Mexico. Others who have been regular attendants in court are the two daughters of Julius S. Walsh, Mrs. William C. Maffitt and Mrs. Charles L. Palms of Detroit, and his daughters-in-law, Mrs. Julius S. Walsh Jr., and Mrs. Chouteau Walsh. The hearing will continue tomorrow.

Edward J. Walsh and his mother, it was testified yesterday, received $243,000 each in dividends since they inherited their stock in 1901. They recently sold their holdings for $500,000. The present suit involves $400,000.

BENSON TO QUIT SOCIALISTS IF THEY OPPOSE CONSCRIPTION

Former Candidate for President Demands Party Repudiate Anti-Draft Resolution.

YONKERS, N. Y., June 2.—Allan L. Benson, who was candidate for President of the United States on the Socialist ticket at the last election, announced at his home here that he will resign from the party unless it repudiates the anti-draft resolutions adopted at the St. Louis Convention, April 7.

Benson was one of 60 who signed a minority report at the convention protesting aganst the wording of the resolution urging Socialists to meet conscription with "mass action." A referendum of the party now is being taken on the majority report.

DISCHARGE FOR 75 RESERVE MEN

Cards for Draft Registration Fail to Show "Proper Spirit."

FORT SHERIDAN, ILL., June 2.—Discharge of about 75 candidates for commissions from the reserve officers' training camp here was recommended today because their captains did not believe they showed, in making out cards for draft registration, proper spirit for officers of the United States army.

Exemptions were claimed on grounds that the men were married, were physically disabled or were under military age. The Captain of one company told the men one by one that unless they were willing to serve as privates they were not wanted as commissioned officers.

London Dinner to Admiral Sims.

LONDON, June 2.—The Savage Club gave a dinner tonight in honor of Vice Admiral William S. Sims, of the United States navy, who is in general command of the United States destroyer squadron in British waters. Many naval, military and literary men were present.

HOUSE FOOD BILL, SHARPLY AMENDED, PASSED BY SENATE

Storing of Foodstuffs, Fuel and Other Necessaries Is Drastically Restricted.

CHECK ON SPECULATION

Inquisitorial Power Given Secretary of Agriculture on Food Resouces Is Curtailed.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—The first of the administration food bills, already passed by the House, passed the Senate late today without a record vote. Numerous amendments were attached to the measure, which provides for a food survey and crop stimulation, and it was sent to conference, where the differences will be thrashed out while the two houses are considering the second administration measure, providing for food control and price fixing.

The bill as finally accepted by the Senate provides for a comprehensive survey of food resources, and for the stimulation of agriculture, and restricts drastically the storing of foodstuffs, fuel and other necessaries and speculation in futures. The restrictive provisions were added by the Senate. The bill carries a total appropriation of approximately $11,000,000, compared with $14,770,000 as it passed the House.

Hoading or storage of food, fuel or other necessaries of life in order to limit the supply or affect prices would be made a felony under the Senate hoarding amendment, but farmers who hold their own products would be excepted. The amendment restricting future trading provides:

Restraint of Speculation.

"If at any time during the pendency of the existing war between the United States and the German empire, the President of the United States shall find that dealings in futures in or about any grain exchange, unduly or unreasonably raise or enhance the price of wheat or other food cereals, to the injury of the people of the United States, he may at once request the traders in such exchange to discontinue for a time specified by him all dealings in futures.

"In case such request of the President is not promptly complied with, then he is hereby empowered to order such dealings in futures, as last aforesaid, to be entirely suspended and discontinued for such limited time as he may direct, and if such order is not promptly complied with he may, by proclamation, declare such exchange closed and thereafter it shall be unlawful to utilize or permit to be utilized, such building or room as a grain exchange or for any person being a trader in grain on such exchange to engage in the business as theretofore conducted on or at such closed exchange.

"Any person violating any of the provisions of this act shall be punished by a fine of not less than $500 or by imprisonment for not more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment."

The Senate also voted to curtail the inquisitorial power given the Secretary of Agriculture in the investigation of food resources. The House bill would compel the attendance of witnesses and the submission of books and other records, under heavy penalty.

The Senate Agriculture Committee amended the provision so as to give the Secretary general authorization to investigate the food situation, making it the "duty of any person, when requested by the Secretary, to answer all questions necessary to carry into effect the provision of this section."

The House appropriation of $2,522,000 to pay for the survey was acecpted unchanged.

The section authorizing the Government to sell seeds to the farmers also was amended so as to provide that sales be made for cash only. The power to compel persons having seeds at their disposal to furnish them to the Government was greatly curtailed and the appropriation carried for the work was reduced to $2,500,000.

The House appropriation for eradication of livestock diseases was eliminated and an appropriation of $880,000 was added to stimulate livestock production.

TWO MISSOURI AMBULANCE COMPANIES TO FORT RILEY

War Department Orders Kansas City and St. Joseph Contingents There for Special Training.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 2.—The Governor's office received instructions from Secretary of War Baker tonight to have Ambulance Company No. 1 of Kansas City and Field Hospital Company No. 1 of St. Joseph of the Missouri National Guard report to Fort Riley for special training at once.

Naval Hospital Treats 1500 Men.

NORFOLK, Va., June 2.—More than 1500 men are being treated at the Naval Hospital here for various diseases and ailments, Government officials stated today. Some have measles and mumps and some have meningitis. Most of them are young men, enlisted since war was declared. The hospital ship Solace landed several hundred at the hospital last month.

EXPLOSION IN MINE NEAR HERRIN, ILL., KILLS NINE MEN

Two Others Badly Injured in Rend Workings—Five Bodies Recovered.

HERRIN, Ill June 2.—Nine men were killed and two perhaps fatally injured in an explosion tonight in the Rend mine, about four miles northwest of here. The bodies of five of the miners had been recovered late tonight and both injured men were brought to the hospital here. Officials of the W. P. Rend Coal Co., owner of the mine were unable to say what caused the explosion. The 11 men were the only ones in the mine at the time it occurred.

The explosion caused a fire in the mine and all of the bodies were badly burned. Other employes of the company forming a relief crew were unable to enter the mine for nearly an hour after the explosion because of the flames.

GERMANY OFFERS SALUTE OF 21 GUNS TO APPEASE SPAIN

Alternative to Explanations of Sinking of the Patricio Suggested, Havas Dispatch From Madrid Says.

PARIS, June 2.—The reply of Germany to Spain regarding the gun-fire attack by a U-boat on the Spanish steamer Patricio, says a Havas dispatch from Madrid, is understood to be extremely cordial. The note declares the submarine simply wanted to stop her.

The German Government expresses regret over the death of the engineer on the Patricoio, and offers indemnity.

If the explanations should be deemed insufficient, the note says, Germany is disposed to do honor to the Spanish flag and as soon as possible her warships will fire a salute of 21 guns.

SINN FEINERS TO SIT IN IRISH CONVENTION OF 107 MEMBERS

Believed That the Government Will Grant Amnesty to Revolutionists Now in Prison.

LONDON, June 2.—The Daily Chronicle's parliamentary correspondent says it has been definitely settled that the forthcoming Irish convention will consist of 107 members, of whom 15 will be nominated by the crown. It was hoped that the number would not exceed 60, but it transpired that every County Council in Ireland wished to have its own delegate.

There will be very few members of Parliament in the convention. The Sinn Feiners will be represented.

There is reason to believe that the Government is about to grant amnesty to all Sinn Feiners who are now in prison, an act that would help to create a favorable atmosphere for the convention.

BERLIN EXPERTS UNABLE TO OPEN BELGIAN BANK SAFES

German Governor General Tries to Obtain Entente Scrip, Titles and Money in Them.

GENEVA SWITZERLAND, June 2.—The correspondent in Belgium of the Lausanne Gazette writes that Gen. Von Falkenhausen, the new Governor-General of Belgium, has demanded all the scrip, titles and money deposited in the Belgian banks belonging to the entente allies, and amounting to many millions of francs.

The Belgian bankers and the Belgian firms who constructed the bank safes refused to open them. Thereupon, according to the correspondent, Gen. Von Falkenhausen sent to Berlin for expert safe-breakers who went to Brussels, but failed to open the safes.

The Gazette's correspondent suggested, "why not give up all the goods as, in North and South America, there are plenty of German bonds and script to cover many times this loss to the allies in Belgium."

BOY PUTS PATRIOTISM FIRST

CEDAR RAPIDS, Io., June 2.—The case of a railroad man's son, who places duty to his country above paternal love, came to light here today when Federal authorities arrested the boy's father and seven other men on information supplied by the boy regarding the alleged anti-conscription activities of the prisoners.

Pending instructions from Washington the officers who made the arrests declined to reveal the names of the prisoners. They did say, however, that the railroad man had confessed distributing anti-draft literature, a quantity of which was found in his home.

STRANGE WORKING PARTIES BEHIND GERMAN LINES

British Prisoners, Under Guard, Reported to Be Laboring Near Front Trenches.

MORE OPEN FIGHTING

Three English Patrols Get Lost Behind Enemy Lines; Escape by Hiding in Crater.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Associated Press.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, via London, June 2.—While overcast skies have limited the aerial offensive, British pilots continue to bring in accounts of German airplanes breaking to pieces in the air shortly after being attacked. Once shot out of control, the German planes have lost their wings, tails and other gear to such an extent that when they crash to the ground very little wreckage can be seen.

A day or two ago a British pilot flew at an enemy machine head on, maneuvering just in time to avoid a collision. One of the wings of the British plane scraped one of the German wings, whereupon the latter began to fall. The British pilot dived after him and was startled to see the German's damaged wings fly completely off, while the tail dragged as if its back was broken.

Whether the faultiness in so many German machines is due to the speed with which the Germans have to turn them out or to the lack of suitable material is a matter of no concern on this side of the line.

Floating Clouds as Screens.

Recent attempts by the Germans to use floating clouds as screens for airplane raids have led to some rather spectacular sky bombardments from anti-aircraft guns. These guns have occasionally driven the raiders from cover and forced them to turn back over their own line. German aviators seem especially trained in the defensive use of clouds, for during air battles, if a bit of passing vapor is available they invariably dive or sidestep into it. This is only another demonstration of the German passion for digging in, such as first brought the world war to trench fighting. The Germans dig in on the land, in the air and under the sea.

The artillery activity appears gradually to be growing in intensity along most of the British front, with raids and counter raids going on first in one sector and then in another. These raids are the means that the armies have of keeping in touch with the enemy and harassing him. First introduced in the British armies by the Canadians, raids were taken up by the French and Germans. The last named were never very successful at the art, however, although recently captured Germans asserted their company commanders promised them iron crosses and long leaves of absence if they brought back even one British prisoner in a raid.

Strange working parties recently have been seen just behind the German front line. They labor under the eyes of German guards with bayonets fixed. The workers are clad in a sort of gray uniform, but wear straw hats, derbies or civilian caps such as often are given to prisoners of war. It has been reported many times lately that the Germans are deliberately working British prisoners in very close proximity to the front line.

Hid in Shell Hole.

Three British soldiers who had been given up as lost returned to their lines yesterday after three days' behind the German outposts without food. The trio became lost on patrol duty and discovered they were inside the German lines. They hid in a shell hole during the daytime and tried for three successive nights to return to the British lines before they finally succeeded.

Such experiences are possible nowadays with a ragged and irregular front line for outpost positions as they exist in the battle area east of Arras. The fighting there is more difficult in some ways than when the armies were in fixed trench positions. Then each side became accustomed to the other's trench habits and the slightest unfamiliar move by day or night had an easily defined significance. East of Arras at present there are only short stretches of trenches with posts between them, but each shell hole is a potential strong point and may hold a nest of machine guns. A chain of connected shell craters makes a first-class trench position under the new order of things.

DOG WRECKS RAIL MOTOR CAR

A railroad gasoline motor car, used by Edward Butler of Alton, superintendent of construction for the Illinois Terminal Railroad, was derailed yesterday in Edwardsville, for the second time in two weeks, by striking a dog. Butler insisted it was the same dog. It escaped injury. Butler was bruised in the first derailment and was knocked unconscious in the second.

Germans Try to Escape Internment.

NEW YORK, June 2.—Two Germans, interned in the Immigration Station on Ellis Island, escaped today by jumping into the water and swimming for the mainland. One of them, William Schulze, a young sailor from one of the seized German ships in New York Harbor, was caught. The other, named Steinhard, got away.

SECOND SERIES OF CAMPS FOR OFFICERS ANNOUNCED

Will Be Held From Aug. 26 to Nov. 7, Locations Being Favorable for Uninterrupted Work—Men of 31 and Up to 44 Preferred,

WASHINGTON, June 2.—A second series of officers' training camps will be held between Aug. 27 and Nov. 26, in eight locations, to develop officers for the second increment of 500,000 men to be called into service by the selective draft, Adjutant-General McCain announced today.

In general, qualifications for admission to these camps will be the same as for the first series, but a strong effort will be made to obtain men above 31 years of age and the number admitted to training will be smaller than in the present camps.

Applications must be sent to the commanding Generals of the department in which the applicant lives, between June 15 and July 15. Citizens between the ages of 20 years and 9 months and 44 years are eligible.

All training camps selected for the second course are located in the southern part of the country, where the weather will be good through the fall. The camp sites chosen and the areas from which applicants will be assigned are as follows.

Camps and Their Districts.

Fort Myer, Va.—Vermont, Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, and the District of Columbia.

Fort McPherson, Ga.—New York City and contiguous territory included in Congressional Districts to 26 inclusive; Alabama, Georgia and Florida.

Fort Oglethorpe, Ga.—The greater part of New York State, including Congressional districts 27 to 43; the northern part of Pennsylvania, including Congressional districts 10, 11, 14, 15, 16, 21, 25 and 28; Tennessee, North Carolina and South Carolina.

Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.—The southern part of Pennsylvania, including part of Congressional district 28; Ohio, West Virginia, Indiana and Kentucky.

Fort Logan H. Roots, Ark., "or other place to be designated"—Wisconsin, Michigan, Mississippi, Louisiana and Arkansas.

Fort Leon Springs, Tex.—Illinois, Texas, Arizona, New Mexico and Oklahoma.

Fort Riley, Kan.—Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and Colorado.

The Presidio, San Francisco—Utah, Wyoming, Montana, Idaho, Nevada, Oregon, Washington and California.

Linda Vista, Cal., and Columbia, S. C., have been selected as sites for cantonments in which forces of the war army will be trained. Ten sites are yet to be chosen.

Men Over 31 Preferred.

The announcement of the camps says:

"The second series of officers' training camps will be held with the definite mission of producing line officers, capable of filling all places in the grades above Lieutenant, and many of the places in the Lieutenant grades of the second 500,000 troops.

"The minimum age limit for all is 20 years and nine months. However, in order to attain the experienced class of men desired, preference will be given to men over 31 yars of age. It will be difficult for men under that age to qualify, except in rare instances where the applicant has pre-eminent qualifications or unusual military experience. Men certified as acceptable for the first series of camps, which are now in operation, must renew their applications if they were not directed to attend the first series of camps.

"Applications must be made between June 15 and July 15. All applications received after July 15 will be returned. The application must be accompanied with the names of three responsible citizens who know the applicant."

PRINCE UDINE AND MARCONI WARMLY RECEIVED BY HOUSE

Scientist on Italian Mission in First Public Speech, Eulogizes American Inventiveness.

WASHINGTON, N., June 2.—Prince Udine and William Marconi of the Italian war mission, addressed the House today, renewing Italy's assurances of gratification upon America's entrance into the war, and predicting that American industry and resourcefulness would be the deciding factor in the struggle with German autocracy.

The visitors were given an enthusiastic reception by the representatives, prolonged applause following their appearance.

Signor Marconi, appearing in public for the first time since the mission's arrival, paid a tribute to American inventiveness

GERMANY SAID TO BE SEEKING A VENEZUELAN BASE

U. S. Forwards Report to Southern Government—Confirmation of Overtures.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—Reports have reached the Government from a source described as reliable, that Germany is attempting to get control of the Island of Margarita, off the coast of Venezuela, for use as a submarine base. The State Department has forwarded the information received to Venezuela for the consideration of Venezuela officials.

The exact nature of the advices is withheld, but officials permitted it to become known today that the report had caused some concern here. They indicated that they had positive confirmation of overtures designed to secure control of the island, but that they were uncertain whether the effort had met with any degree of success.

Officials do not believe the Government of Venezuela would be party to any such alienation of territory. Venezuela is one of the South American Governments that have joined in protesting against submarine warfare as conducted by Germany.

It has been known by the American Government for weeks, however, that German influences actively have been at work in Venezuela and that indirect if not direct means have been used by agents of the German Emperor to get popular and official sympathy.

It is pointed out that the cession in this case even though temporary would be a clear violation of the Monroe Doctrine and would undoubtedly call for energetic and prompt opposition by this Government.

Margarita is off the northern coast of Venezuela, near the southeastern corner of the Caribbean Sea and within striking distance of the Panama Canal. It is about 500 miles from Culebra and 1000 from Colon. Its adjacent waters including the Gulf of Cariaco would make it admirably adapted as a naval base.

BRAZIL WILL USE GERMAN SHIPS

President's Decree Adds Tonnage of 240,779 to Trade.

RIO JANEIRO, June 2.—President Braz today signed a decree providing for the utilization by Brazil of the German ships in Brazilian ports and the German crews are being interned on Fleurs Island. The President today gave a special audience to the American Ambassador, Edwin V. Morgan.

Forty-six German merchant ships were laid up in Brazilian ports early in the war. The vessels aggregate 240,779 tons, of which the largest is the Hamburg-American liner Bluecher of 12,350 tons. Thirty-three of the vessels are of more than 4000 tons each.

Admen accommodations will be sought through the Post-Dispatch Want Columns. List your vacancies.

AVIATORS AGAIN RAID COAST BASES

British Drop Several Tons of Bombs at Ostend, Zeebrugge and Bruges and Continue Activity in Northern France.

Berlin Reports Taking of Portuguese Prisoners on English Front — French Trenches Captured.

Italians Advance Their Line 400 Yards on a Front of Mile and Quarter on Trieste Road.

LONDON, June 2.—The announcement today of another British air raid on the German bases in Belgium was the only important development reported from any of the war capitals. The statement on the raid says:

"An airplane attack was made upon the enemy airdome at St. Denis Westrem yesterday morning and last night naval airplanes and seaplanes attacked the German bases at Zeebruegge, Ostend and Bruges, dropping several tons of explosives."

Tonight's report from British headquarters in France says:

"An enemy party which attacked one of our posts last night south of Oppy was repulsed with loss. Artillery activity continued during the day on both sides at different points along our front.

"Our airplanes were active again yesterday, much valuable work being accomplished. In the air fighting one German machine was brought down; six others were driven down out of control. Three of our airplanes are missing."

Berlin Tells of Taking Portugese Prisoners on British Front.

BERLIN, Via London, June 2.—Today's official statement says:

"The artillery fighting in the Wytchaete bend increased as it did on the preceding days. On the Arras front, the fighting was intense, especially near Lens, and on the north bank of the river Scarpe. During reconnoitering engagements our thrusting detachments captured a number of prisoners, some of whom were Portuguese.

"Near Allemant, northeast of Seissons a Hanoverian regiment and a Westphalian regiment effectively supported by detachments of experienced storming troops and artillery, mine throwers and airmen, carried out an attack with complete success. By a suprise assault the French position was captured over a front of about 1000 metres and held against repeated counter attacks. Three officers and 178 men were taken prisoners and numerous machine guns and mine throwers were captured.

"In the Month of May 237 officers, including one general and 12,500 rank and file were taken prisoner. Three guns, 211 machine guns, 434 quick-loading guns and 18 mine throwers were brought in as booty on the west front."

Eight German Companies Perished in Tunnel in Hillside.

By Associated Press.

GRAND HEADQUARTERS OF THE FRENCH ARMIES IN FRANCE, June 2.—The Germans have sacrificed hundreds of killed and thousands of wounded in their vain efforts to regain the range of hills comprising Mont Carnillet, the Casque, the Teton and Mont Haut, to the east of Rheims. Since May 20 their fruitless assaults have numbered 16.

The last important assault was carried out on the night of May 30, and for this selected German regiments were especially trained behind their own lines, before they were thrown against the French lines. But they only met with disaster. On this occasion the first and second assaulting waves were everywhere annihilated before they were half way to the French positions. A few men in the waves that followed obtained a footing in the French lines, and the fircest bayonet duel ensued, in which all the Germans' assaulting forces were killed except in one trench, where a German detachment held out until daybreak. These men were then wiped out in the course of a French counter attack.

A visit to Mont Carnillet demonstrates the importance the Germans attached to this place and the extraordinary preparations made to hold it in order to preserve the observatories from which the Germans were able to watch the French artillery. Inside the hill the Germans had excavated a tunnel with three exits on the northern slopes. There was space sufficient to hold three battalions with 10 days' rations, and big ammunition depots. Above the tunnel were many deep shelters and machine gun emplacements and pits for grenadiers.

The existence of this tunnel was unknown until the French offensive on April 17, when, after the first French waves passed, the German occupants sortied and fired upon them from the rear. On May 20, after terrific artillery preparation with 16-inch and gas shells, the French made a second attempt and won the crest and the northern slopes of Mont Carnillet. The French awaited a counter attack from the garrison of the tunnel similar to that of the 12th, but none occurred.

A German officer, captured near one of the ventilation shafts of the tunnel, also expressed astonishment at the absence of reaction by his comrades. He was caught while endeavoring to call the garrison out. Later it was found that the entire garrison had perished. It comprised six companies of the 476th German Infantry Regiment, two machine gun companies, two sections of pioneers, an ambulance unit and signal detachment, besides a number of artillery officers.

Since this French success the German artillery has been greatly hampered owing to lack of observation facilities.

Italians Advance Line 400 Yards on Mile and Quarter Front.

ROME, June 2.—Italian forces on the Julian front yesterday advanced for a distance of 400 yards along a one and one-quarter mile front to the south of Castagnavizza, on the road to Trieste, says the official statement issued today by the War Department. Italian aviators also dropped bombs in the district northeast of Trieste.

Russian Warships Destroy 147 Turkish Sailing Ships.

PETROGRAD, June 2.—An official statement issued tonight says:

"During a cruise on May 29 near the Anatolian coast our ships destroyed munitions depots and a factory in the region of Tschekirogly. They afterwards destroyed at Samsun a steam mill, a barracks and artillery depots. At Oveni they destroyed the barracks, a mill and a quay. At Ordeh (Ordu) our ships destroyed an observation post, the port administration buildings, the headquarters of the enemy rear guard, the army postoffice and barracks and various depots.

"Our ships also destroyed 147 sailing ships laden with supplies and brought back to Trebizond two schooners."

French Submarine in Adriatic Sinks Big U-Boat.

ROME, June 2.—The French submarine Circe has torpedoed and sunk a large enemy submarine which was coming out from Cattaro, escorted by a torpedo boat.

Although attacked by airplanes, the Circe returned undamaged to its base.

FINDS WIFE IS ALIVE AFTER HE ARRANGES FOR FUNERAL

Man Told She Is Dead When He Calls at City Hospital, but It Was Mistake in Name.

Relatives of Mrs. Nannie Hodges, 51 years old, of 2347 South Tenth street, who was reported to them to have died Friday at the City Hospital, learned yesterday, after making arrangements for her funeral, that she was alive. Another woman of the same surname, who was also a patient in the same ward, was the one who died after a fall. The error in notification was caused by the similarity of names.

When Mrs. Nannie Hodges' husband, Melvin, called at the hospital Friday and asked the attendant at the door for permission to see his wife, he was told that she had died. The mistake was not discovered until he and other relatives viewed the body at an undertaking establishment.

HALF-HOLIDAY FOR SCHOOLS

Cardinals and Giants to Play for Benefit of Teachers.

School children will have a half-holiday tomorrow afternoon, when the baseball game for the benefit of the Teachers' Benevolent Annuity Association will be played at National League Park. The game will be between the Cardinals and the New York Giants, and will be a regular game in the Giants' series here.

The game will begin at 3 o'clock, and for an hour before the game the crowd will be entertained by drills, dances and the singing of patriotic songs, accompanied by a band. There has been a large advance sale of tickets.

ROSCH PORTRAIT.

MRS. LUCILLLE M. STEWART.

DIVORCED GUARD CAPTAIN AND WIFE REMARRIED AT CLAYTON

Met at Bridge Where Soldier Was on Duty, and Decided Separation Was Mistake.

Capt. George W. Stewart of Company A, First Missouri Infantry, and Mrs. Lucille M. Stewart, who divorced him last January, were remarried at Clayton yesterday.

The first marriage was June 29, 1912. After getting her divorce Mrs. Stewart did not see the Captain again until recently, when she went to Washington avenue station to meet a train. Company A is assigned to bridge duty there, and they met. Their conversation was friendly and other meetings followed. They concluded that their divorce was a mistake and that the best way to rectify it was to get married again. rectify it was to get married again. She is 23. Capt. Stewart is 36.

SLACKERS IN REGISTRATION TO SERVE IN JAIL, THEN IN ARMY

Attorney-General Gregory Announces That No Man Can Successfully Evade Draft Law.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—In an official announcement today Attorney-General Gregory renewed attention to the provision of the army draft law, which provides that no man can choose imprisonment as a substitute for registration, but will suffer the first and be compelled to do the latter if he resists.

"It has come to the notice of the department," said the Attorney-General, " that certain disloyal citizens who are themselves beyond the conscription age are suggesting to the young men of the country that it is better to suffer imprisonment under the terms of the conscription act than to register, with the likelihood of being enlisted and compelled to serve at the front. Attention is called to the fact that under Section 5 of this act, parties convicted on the charge of evading registration are not only punished for the crime committed but are thereunder duly registered with all the liability for military service resulting therefrom."

18 REPORTED HURT IN TORNADO

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., June 2.—Reports reaching here late today from Hayti and Turrell, south of here in Missouri, were that 18 persons were injured in the vicinity of the two towns by last night's tornado.

Communication to the district was hampered and only meager advices were available.

ALLIED OFFENSIVE HAS BEEN STOPPED, KAISER DECLARES

Advises Empress That Hindenburg Has Reported That Great Effort Has Failed.

WIRES EMPEROR CHARLES

Congratulates Austrian Ruler on Tenacious Fighting of the Isonzo Army.

BERLIN, via London, June 2.—The French and British offensive on the western front has come to a definite conclusion, according to a report from Field Marshal von Hindenburg to Emperor William. Official announcement is made that the Emperor has sent the following telegram to the Empress at Hamburg Castle:

"According to a report from Field Marshal von Hindenburg, the great British and French spring offensive has come to a certain conclusion. Prepared since autumn and announced since winter, the attack of the British and French armies, supported by powerful masses of artillery and technical resources of all kinds, has failed after seven weeks of hard struggle. God's aid has granted our incomparable troops superhuman force to accomplish these excellent acts and endure successfully the mightiest battles ever seen in the history of war. All our heroes by their deeds command the respect and gratitude which every German feels. The Lord be praised, glory for His help, and thanks for such magnificent people in arms."

Wires Emperor Charles.

Emperor William also has sent a telegram of congratulations to Emperor Charles on the Austrian resistance to the Italian attack on the Isonzo front, saying:

"In a tenacious struggle the Isonzo army defied the mighty and stubborn enemy and caused him to fail. I congratulate you and your brave troops on this great success. God will be with us further."

The Emperor has sent the following telegram to the Crown Prince in France:

"On my visit to the front I only had an opportunity to address deputations of the armies, which under your command, have in the last two months frustrated the great French attempts to break through on the Aisne, and in Champagne. I charge you to express the thanks of myself and the fatherland to all the leaders and troops, who in these difficult weeks, exerted all their energies and ability and risked their blood and lives, and by whose iron determination the enemy's assaults were shattered.

"The German fatherland is proud of its brave sons and full of confidence that new fighting will also bring new victories."

Message to Bavarian Prince.

The Emperor has telegraphed the Crown Prince of Bavaria as follows:

'On the battlefield of Arras the troops from all parts of Germany, under your command have in the fierce battles of the last two monhs brought England's warlike intentions at this point to naught. Iron determination and firm will to victory spoke from the eyes of those whom I saw in my visit. A similar feeling fills the entire army.

"With me, the German fatherland thanks its sons for their loyal devotion to our great German cause. Make it known to all the leaders and troops that my thanks are coupled with confidence that with God's help they will be victorious also in the fighting in the future."

DR. J. T. WELCH OF SALEM APPOINTED PRISON PHYSICIAN

JEFFERSON CITY, June 2.—The appointment by Gov. Gardner of Dr. James T. Welch of Salem, a brother of State Senator Lee Welch of Mountain View, to the position of physician at the State Penitentiary, was made public today in the office of the Secretary of State. Although it is dated March 16, it was not sent to the Secretary of State's office until today.

Senator Welch early in the last session of the Legislature was allied with the Senate combine which for a time threatened to defeat all of the Gardner administration bills. He was one of the first of the combine members to break away, joining with Senator Bates of Jasper County in an insurgent movement which broke the combine's power. Senator Bates obtained the appointment of Judge David E. Blair of Joplin as a member of the Missouri Public Service Commission.

POLICEMAN FREES 6 IN ICEBOX

Saloon Robbers Who Locked Men Up Get $55.

A policeman entered Sam Levy's saloon, 4148 Easton avenue, at 10:45 last night. There wasn't anyone in sight. He heard a noise from the icebox, and when he opened the door Levy and five customers walked out.

About five minutes before, they explained, two men with revolvers had entered the saloon. While one lined them up against the wall, the other took $55 from the cash register, and locked them in the icebox.

177 Deaths; 214 Births Last Week.

Seventeen deaths from acute contagious diseases were included in the total mortality of 177, in the seven days ending yesterday. Five deaths were caused by diphtheria, and four each of scarlatina and cerebro-spinal fever. There were 30 fatalities from pneumonia, 5 homicides and 1 suicide. Births for the week were 214.

704 SHIPS OF 2,039,000 TONNAGE BUILDING IN U. S.

Figures Nearly Double Those of Year Ago—Goethals Orders Lumber for 100 Vessels.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—In response to the Senate's resolution of inquiry, Secretary Redfield notified Congress today that on May 1 there were under construction in the United States 537 steel vessels with tonnage of 2,039,000 and 167 wooden vessels, aggregating 214,700 tons. The figures are nearly double those of a year ago.

Lumber for 100 wooden ships has been ordered from members of the Southern Pine Association by Major-General George W. Goethals, general manager of the Shipping Board's emergency fleet corporation. The price is $35 a thousand feet at the mills.

"The contracts for these ships have not yet been let," said Gen. Goethals, "but should be expected to be awarded within the next 60 days. As soon as the contracts are let notification will be forwarded to mills to begin on the timbers and to ship to points where the vessels will be built."

Contracts for about 60 wooden ships and half as many steel vessels already have been awarded. Gen. Goethals expects within 18 months to turn out at least 3,000,000 tons of steel vessels, and as many wooden ships as the country can build.

law forbidding the divulgence of testimony before grand juries.

I am convinced, however, that there is sufficient evidence to warrant an investigation to ascertain whether or not crimes and offenses against the State have been committed outside the jurisdiction of the city of St. Louis in connection with the police fund matter; the jurisdiction of this office, so far as indictments are concerned, being limited to the city of St. Louis.

In order that I may lawfully give to the Attorney-General of the State the information now in my possession concerning these matters outside the jurisdiction of St. Louis, I most respectfully request that you direct the Attorney-General at once to co-operate with me in this investigation under the provisions of 967, Revised Statutes of Mo. of 1909.

I make this request so that it may be definitely determined whether or not any one is guilty of a crime in any part of this State in connection with the police salary increase bill.

"Discloses Grave Situation."

The grand jury report, to which the Circuit Attorney referred in his letter, contains the statement that evidence before it "discloses a grave and alarming situation in the police affairs of this city."

"The grand jury has devoted practically all its time since May 17 investigating the passage of a bill in the Missouri Legislature increasing the pay of police officers in the City of St. Louis," the grand jury says in its report to Judge Shields.

"This is the most important matter presented to us for consideration, important because it concerns the people of the entire State with reference to a matter of legislation of vital importance to the people.

"People through their representatives enact the laws, and the laws enacted should be the expression of the voice of the people, and should be free from all suspicion of improper and corrupt influences, for upon this depends the existence of Government.

"We are strongly impressed with the idea that this matter of legislation should be thoroughly investigated, for enough testimony has been preesnted to us to convince this body that the passage of it was obtained in a manner and by means that should be condemned by all law-abiding citizens.

"It is a sad commentary upon the conditions prevailing amongst police officers of the City of St. Louis when policemen who are especially charged with the enforcement of the law become themselves, either ignorantly or purposely, the instrumentalities for prostituting the very sources and fountain of law.

Many Witnesses Called.

"This investigation was commenced and has been conducted in a vigorous, painstaking and thorough manner. A large number of witnesses were called and subjected to a searching examination. Everyone who knew or was supposed to know anything about this matter was called before us.

"The evidence before the grand jury discloses a grave and alarming situation in the police affairs of this city, and we recommend that the next grand jury take this matter up without delay and give it a thorough and painstaking investigation. The matter is one which should be vigorously probed and those responsible for this condition punished."

With its report the grand jury formally returned into court indictments, which were voted and made public 10 days ago, against Representative Farris; John J. Mackay, a Rolla spectacle vendor, and Patrolman Ray Cummins, secretary of the Police Relief Association. They are charged with having entered into a conspiracy to commit a felony in connection with the passage of the police salary increase bill.

The indictments allege that there was a conspiracy to collect $15,585 from policemen to pay for the passage of the bill. They name five policemen who were asked to contribute $8 each. In each indictment Police Sergeant Stephen Collins is named as a party to the conspiracy. Collins testified before the grand jury and was not indicted. It is understood he will be a witness for the State.

Lawson Gets Mine Position.

DENVER, Colo., June 2.—John R. Lawson, miners' leader, has become labor agent for the Victor-American Fuel Co. Lawson was convicted of first degree murder in connection with the death of John Nimmo as a result of strike disorders, but later released on bond. The Attorney-General recently filed a confession of error in the case conceding Lawson's right to a new trial.

PRESIDENT FAVORS RETENTION OF CLASSICAL EDUCATION

Roosevelt and Taft Also Advise Against Elimination as Advocated by Rockefeller Board Member.

PRINCETON, N. J., June 2.—President Wilson and former Presidents Roosevelt and Taft, in statements prepared by them and read today at a conference under the auspices of Princeton University, favor retention of classical education.

The purpose of the conference was to combat life and trend towards the elimination of classical studies from school and college curricula as favored by Abraham Flexner of the General Educational Board under the Rockefeller Foundation. President Wilson wrote:

"What yau cannot find a substitute for, is the classics as literature; and there can be no first-hand contact with that literature if you will not master the grammar and the syntax which convey its subtle power.

"Your enlightenment depends upon the company you keep. You do not know the world until you know the men who have possessed it and tried its wares before you were given your brief run upon it."

Mr. Taft wrote that in addition to the mental discipline which study of the classics affords they are most helpful in the matter of correct English style.

Roosevelt wrote that a cultural education must include the classics. "Every liberal course," he said, "should also include a wide sweep of general history, for a liberal scholar should certainly have vividly in mind the tremendous drama of man's progress through the ages.

16 CHICAGO EGG MEN INDICTED

Are Charged With Attempts to Create Monopolies.

CHICAGO, June 2.—Indictments against 25 individuals and firms charging attempts to create monopolies in eggs in the Chicago market, were returned before Judge Landis in the United States Court today.

The egg men, operating in the Chicago Butter and Egg Board, are charged with violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. Sixteen individuals and nine firms are named.

CONTRACTORS DECIDE AGAINST RECOGNITION OF LABOR UNION

Propose to Conduct Building Construction as Open Shop—Announce Some Increases, but Men Stay Out.

The General Contractors' Association yesterday decided not to recognize the International Hod Carriers and Common Laborers' Union and to work on the "open shop" principle. Several hundred members of the union are on strike for 40 cents an hour and an 8-hour day.

The laborers have been getting 30 cents an hour, with a nine-hour day. Contractors offered 35 cents an hour on a nine-hour day, with six days a week. Contractors yesterday fixed the scale for common laborers at 33 1-3 cents an hour and nine hours a day. Concrete workers are to get 45 cents an hour, an advance of 5 cents, and eight hours a day. Union concrete workers demanded 50 cents an hour.

F. G. Boyd, secretary of the Building Industries Association, said the contractors would try to import laborers if they cannot get enough men here to replace strikers. Failing in this, he predicted a general tieup of the local building industry.

BELLBOY SHOT IN A QUARREL

Bartender Fires on Him After Argument About Pay for Drinks.

William Quinn, 21 years old, a bellboy, of 4370 Lee avenue, was shot in the neck last night by Henry Niemann, 42, of 4013 Lincoln avenue, bartender in a saloon at 3962 Lee avenue

There was a quarrel over Quinn's refusal to pay for drinks.

Changes Name to That of Aunt.

Frank August Waldemar, 25 years old, 2341 South Third street, a glassblower, yesterday in Judge Grimm's court had his name changed to Frank Rapp, which is the name of his aunt, with whom he has lived since he was 2 years old. He said that for years he has been known as Rapp and that he wanted to avoid confusion when he registers under the conscription act Tuesday.

We have been appointed sole Distributors of the "Nationally-Priced" Gulbransen-Dickinson Player Pianos

We're going to sell—among others—the wonderful "Gulbransen-made" Player Piano at $375. It's the easy-to-play instrument; the Player that's always ready to play, always "on the job," for fun, frolic, recreation, diversion or sympathy—the thoroughly companionable music-maker—the Player you MIGHT AS WELL BUY, because it gives you a fine Piano, PLUS ability to PLAY IT, at the price of an ordinary upright Piano.

Why Us?

Why did the Gulbransen-Dickinson Co. select Kieselhorst's, from all the Piano men in St. Louis, as their Distributors?

Because Kieselhorst's are recognized as Piano and Player Piano Specialists and Experts.

Because Kieselhorst's sell many more Player Pianos than other stores. Because we are familiar with Player construction, and capable of giving the buying Public prompt, intelligent Player service.

Test It 30 Days

Try it yourself! Try it! Come and investigate this Gulbransen-made Player Piano before you buy ANY Piano or Player Piano—yes, before you buy ANY MUSICAL INSTRUMENT.

This Gulbransen-made Player is the flower of long research by a great Player Expert—A. G. Gulbransen. It is the product of the largest exclusive Player Piano factory in the world. The Gulbransen-Dickinson Co.—its makers—are as big a power in the Player business as Henry Ford is in the automobile business. Thanks to superior organization, big output, and bold, keen generalship in distributing, they—and we—are able to sell you a Player Piano at $375 that would have to be sold for at least fifty per cent more if it were manufactured and marketed in the old, slow, expensive, narrow-minded way.

Why can Overland, Dodge, Ford, Maxwell and half a dozen other big manufacturers sell you a dependable automobile for less than a small assembler would ask for the same car? You know the answer! And that same answer explains why the Gulbransen-Dickinson Co.—and we—can do it in the Player business!

Listen: Come to our store and play this Gulbransen-made Player YOURSELF. That's all we ask.

ADVERTISING MEN OPEN CONVENTION THIS AFTERNOON

Senator Hiram Johnson to Be Principal Speaker at Inspirational Meeting.

AERIAL FLIGHT OFF

Hundreds of Delegates Arrive; Will Fill Pulpits of 18 Churches Today.

The thirteenth annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World will open at 3 o'clock this afternoon with an inspirational meeting in the quadrangle of Washington University. United State Senator Hiram Johnson of California will be the chief speaker. The convention will end Thursday afternoon, with an address by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo at the Jefferson Theater.

Several hundred delegates arrived yesterday and last night, and registered at the headquarters in Hotel Jefferson. Herbert S. Houston of New York, president of the organization, was among the early arrivals. He is chairman of the National Advertisers' Advisory Board, which is co-operating with the Government in the sale of the Liberty bonds.

Plans for an aeroplane flight from Chicago to St. Louis, in connection with the coming of the Chicago delegation, were abandoned yesterday because of unsettled wind condition.

Delegates to Fill Pulpits.

The pulpits of 18 St. Louis churches will be filled this morning by delegates to the convention, most of them clergymen of note, who are here to attend the church advertising and religious press departmental sessions of the convention.

This afternoon's meeting will be open to the public. Of the 12,500 seats in the University quadrangle 6000 have been reserved for the delegates, the Advertising Club of St. Louis and the Women's Advertising Club of St. Louis, and the remaining 6500 seats will be open to the public. The 500 seats on the platform will be occupied by officials of the advertising organization, city officials, and the Pageant Choral Society. The delegates' seats will be reserved until 3 o'clock only. Four hundred Boy Scouts will act as ushers.

The delegates and others wearing badges and holding tickets will enter the main archway of the University. Those to be seated on the platform will enter the south entrance of the Administration Building. The general public will enter at the north entrance of the same building, reached from the Limit avenue station on the University car line.

Speakers for Meeting.

Besides Senator Johnson, the speakers will include Gov. Gardner, Mayor Kiel or Acting Mayor Aloe, Chancellor Hall of the University, and Herbert S. Houston, President of the Associated Advertising Clubs. Dr. John L. Tierney, attired in mail as "Saint Louis," will recite an ode writtten by Roy B. Simpson. Bishop Tuttle will pronounce the invocation, and the Rev. Father B. J. Otting, President of St. Louis University, will pronounce the benediction.

A band concert will be given tonight in Advertising Plaza, on Twelfth street, from Washington avenue to Market street. The plaza will be illuminated, to and including the City Hall.

Not only the plaza, but the downtown district, has been decorated in the national colors, and the colors of the advertising organizations, which are blue and white. The "Truth" emblem of the Associated Clubs has been florally worked out in the sunken garden of Lucas Square, north of the Central Library, and in the lawn west of the City Hall. Thousands of plants were used in this decoration, which was the work of John Moritz, chief park gardener.

The general sessions will begin at the Jefferson Theater at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning, and the departmental sessions at 2 o'clock p. m. in different meeting places in the City Hall, Municipal Courts Building, Public Library, and the Parish house of Christ Church Cathedral. Tuesday and Wednesday there will be the morning sessions in the theater, and on those afternoons there will be joint open sessions in the theater, and some of the departmentals in their various meeting places. Thursday there will be morning and afternoon general sessions, ending with Secretary McAdoo's address.

Louis W. Hill to Be Here.

Among the speakers at the different sessions of the convention will be Louis W. Hill, president of the Great Northern Railroad; Murray Allison of London, editor of Land and Water News; Hugh Chalmers of Detroit and John H. Willys of Toledo, heads of large motor car concerns, and W. L. Saunders of New York, vice president of the Ingersoll-Rand Co. and vice chairman of the United States Naval Consulting Board.

The sessions of the convention will be open to St. Louis business men who register at the headquarters, in Hotel Jefferson, and pay the registration fee of $2.50.

The parade tomorrow night, starting at 7:30, will form at Twenty-second and Market streets and will move on Jefferson avenue, Washington avenue, Broadway, Market street, Sixth street, Locust street and Twelfth street to the Municipal Courts building. The parade will include many elaborate floats and the marching clubs of the visiting delegations.

Moving pictures of all possible phases of the convention, including the arrival of delegates and the outdoor gatherings, will be taken by the film producers here as delegates to the departmental gathering of the Advertising Film Producers' Association.

Visiting Ministers in Local Pulpits This Morning.

The list of visiting ministers and other delegates to the convention, who will speak in St. Louis churches this morning, is as follows:

Dr. Christian F. Reisner, Grace Methodist Church, New York, Centenary M. E. Church, Sixteenth and Pine street.

BRITISH CABINET MEMBER REACHES RUSSIAN CAPITAL

Arthur Henderson Received by Ministers—Workmen Take Control at Kronstadt.

PETROGRAD, June 2.—Arthur Henderson, member of the British War Council and Minister without portfolio, has arrived here. He was met at the station by Minister of Foreign Affairs Tereschtenko and later was introduced to the other ministers.

Countess Panin, well known for her organization of popular philanthropics, has been offered the post of Assistant Minister in the new Department of Public Welfare.

A. I. Kenevaloff, who resigned yesterday as minister of commerce and trade, is quoted today by the official news agency as saying in explaining the motives for his resignation that the present Government should make way for a homogeneous Socialist Government. No successor has been named.

A decision of the Workmen's and Soldiers' delegates to assume control of Kronstadt, the great fortress which defends Petrograd, was reached by a vote of 210 to 40, with eight of the delegates abstaining from voting.

It was announced by the Workmen's and Soldiers' delegates that henceforth the relations of Kronstadt and Petrograd and the remainder of Russia will be only through the intermediary of the Petrograd branch of the delegates. The local Workmen's and Soldiers' council at Kronstadt announces that it has taken in its hands the effective power of Kronstadt and that it has removed all the Government's representatives.

A delegation from the Kronstadt council has arrived here and has been received by a committee from the Petrograd council. Although declaring themselves in agreement with the Petrograd body, the report of the Kronstadt delegation indicates that they do not fully comprehend the relations between the Government and the Petrograd council.

N. Tcheidse, president of the Petrograd council, and four of his fellow delegates are going to Kronstadt Sunday to investigate the circumstances connected with the declaration of the Kronstadt delegates, taking over control of the fortress.

Fraternization between Russian soldiers and troops of the central Powers along the Eastern front was by no means as general as alleged, declared A. F. Kerensky, the Russian Minister of war and Marine, in a speech delivered at Kiev, in which he told of his recent visit to the battle front.

Referring to the proposed constituent assembly in Russia, M. Kerensky said it could not be convoked before November, as it would be impossible to take the population from work in the fields in order to hold an election.

Clerks in a majority of the retail dry goods stores and haberdasheries are on strike demanding 50 per cent back pay for the last year and a minimum of 100 rubles ($50) a month for the future. The clerks also demand that those recruited for the army must be paid 50 per cent of their salaries if married and 25 per cent if single, for the time they are in military service. In event of the liquidation of their employers' business, the clerks demand that they be paid for six months in advance.

TAX ON ADS URGED INSTEAD OF RAISE IN POSTAL RATES

Publishers Confer With Senators Who Are Redrafting War Tax Bill.

NOT TRYING TO DODGE

Maintain Postal Raise Would Be Ruinous—Bill Goes to Senate This Week

WASHINGTON, June 2.—War taxation of publishers' advertising receipts, rather than increase of their postage rates, was vigorously urged today by representatives of national publishing interests at an informal conference with Senators who are redrafting the war tax bill.

Newspaper, magazine, trade, religiouss, farm and many other publishing interests, joined in the plea which will be reported to the Finance Committee Monday when it resumes revision of the House war tax measure. A confidential draft of committee changes is being printed, and the committee plans to decide how publications shall be taxed, to place the bill in final form, and to report it to the Senate before the end of next week.

Sentor Simmons, chairman of the Finance Committee; Senator Penrose, senior Republican member, and Senator Smoot, received the publishers' representatives today to thresh out the whole question of war taxes upon publications having the second-class, or cent-a-pound mailing rate. The publishers were asked to suggest a taxation plan and the unanimous recommendation of levying upon advertising receipts was the result after an hour's discussion. The increased postage rates would put many publishers out of business and could not be passed along, the committee was told, while a tax on advertising receipts could be met by increased advertising rates.

The Administration's Plan.

The plan proposed by Senator Hardwick and indorsed by the postoffice department, to leave present postage rates on news portions of publications and heavily increase that on the advertising carried, was condemned by the publishers as more detrimental to their interests than the House zone system, already rejected by the committee.

In asking the publishers' views, Senator Simmons made it clear that the committee was determined to levy war taxes of some sort upon publishers. He suggested a combination postage and advertising tax, but the publishers protested against any change whatever in mail rates.

Senator Simmons pointed out that letter rates are to be increased one-half, postcard rates doubled and parcel post shipments taxed, adding that there was a strong sentiment in Congress against excepting second class mail entirely from the increase.

"Newspapers are not desirous of escaping a tax," the committee was told by Elbert H. Baker of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, chairman of the Legislative Committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association. "But we would rather have a direct tax on advertising than any change in the postage rate. All of us prefer to have the postage question to be handled separately."

"This seems the psychological time, however," Senator Simmons interjected, "for publishers to accept a postage raise that is inevitable. The increase might be less now than when conditions are changed."

"It is not wise or American to increase second-class postage," said Allan H. Richardson of New York, representing the American Periodical Publishers' Association. "It is not justified even by war conditions and would be most unsatisfactory."

Representing trade and business publications, J. B. Baldwin of New York, said while publications make comparatively small use of the mails and while an advertising tax would impose a heavier burden than a postage tax, publishers of that class, in behalf of the general publishing situation, would rather accept tax on advertising.

Weekly Publishers Also Agree.

John Schleicher of New York, and other representatives of weekly magazines having wide circulation, said their publications also prefer an advertising tax.

"It is the fairest that can be devised for all publications," said Mr. Schleicher. "Many publishers do not use the mails. Many large daily newspapers use them little, but have enormous advertising incomes. An advertising tax would hit everybody."

Hopewell Rogers of the Chicago Daily News said an advertising tax would affect publishers of afternoon and mornins newspapers differently, but that "no matter what tax is levied, some will have an advantage over competitors."

AMERICANS NOT DETAINED, SAYS A GERMAN OFFICIAL

They Are Free to Depart and Must Conform Only to Fixed Regulations, He Declares.

BERLIN, via London, June 2.—The German Government's desire to facilitate the departure of Americans wishing to leave Germany was reiterated today by Baron von Dem Bussche-Haddenhausen, under secretary for foreign affairs, in a statement to the Associated Press.

"Rumors that we are intentionally detaining citizens of your country are wholly without foundation," said the Baron. "As has been explained repeatedly, citizens of all neutral and hostile countries desiring to leave Germany must conform to fixed military passports and regulations, restrictions which also rigidly apply to our own citizens desiring to cross the frontiers or leave on vacation trips. It is quite plain that the routine ceremonies involved in the issuance of such passports not only are time-consuming, but frequently are attended by petty annoyances which are apt to be misinterpreted

"Not only are Americans perfectly free to leave Germany, but they will be accorded the same official accommodations that we extend to subjects of other countries as well as to our own people.

"The fact that Americans constantly are leaving Germany would seem to indicate that we are not making attempts to detain them unduly or to show intentional discrimination. We trust the same accommodating attitude is being assumed toward our citizens in the United States."

NEW THOUGHT LEADER TO SPEAK

Joseph Perry Green, of Portland, Ore., field secretary for the New Thought Alliance, will deliver a series of addreses at the Sheldon Memorial, 3648 Washington boulevard, beginning tonight and continuing each night during the week. The subject of tonight's address will be "Individual and National Prosperity." The general theme of "The Basic Law of Accumulation" will be discussed during the succeeding lectures.

The International New Thought Congress will be held in St. Louis next September.

W. C. T. U. Federation Meeting.

The monthly district meeting of the W. C. T. U. Federation will be held tomorrow evening at the headquarters, 1109 Walton avenue. Mrs. Ross Hayes Schachner will preside.

REGISTRATION DAY WON'T BE HOLIDAY IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Board Revokes Order After Parade Is Abandoned—Police List 70,000 Subject to Draft.

Tuesday, which is Registration Day under the selective conscription act, will not be a holiday in the public schools. This was decided yesterday at a special meeting of the Board of Education, at which the previous announcement of a holiday was revoked. The action was taken because of the abandonment, by a Civic Committee, of plans for a patriotic parade Tuesday afternoon. It was found that so many stores and industrial establishments would remain open that the desired number of marchers could not be counted on.

Policemen yesterday turned in at the Election Board's office about 70,000 cards bearing the names of men within the legal age limit of 21 to 30 inclusive, who are required to register. These names were obtained in a house-to-house canvass Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

In addition to the cards received from the police, the Election Board has about 180 cards filled out by men who expect to be out of the city Tuesday, and more than 2000 received from St. Louisans who registered in other places.

Clerks in the board's office will work today, classifying the cards, first by wards and precincts, and then in alphabetical order. The cards will then be sent to the precinct registration headquarters, for the use of the registrars Tuesday.

Those named in the cards who fail to appear for registration will be sought by policemen, and if necessary, another general police canvas will be made. The police will be authorized to require any man to produce his certificate of registration.

NEW FIFTH REGIMENT NEAR THE MINIMUM PEACE STRENGTH

Last Night's Rally Brought It Up to 764—Maximum Peace Enlistment, 1348, Next Goal.

The new Fifth Regiment, National Guard of Missouri, reached an enrollment of 764 men, within 27 of minimum peace strength, at last night's rally at the First Regiment Armory. After reaching minimum peace strength, 791, the regiment will have as its goal maximum peace strength, 1348, and later war strength, 2002.

The Rev. Dr. John W. Day, of the Unitarian Church of the Messiah; Maj. Leo Rassieur, former commander-in-chief of the G. A. R.; Postmaster Selph, and former Judge Selden P. Spencer, were the speakers at the rally. Dr. Day said pacifists are fools, and that while one might turn his own cheek to an assailant's blow, he had no right to turn the cheek of his family or his country. Spencer, estimating that every fifth man registered Tuesday would be drafted into the army, suggested as an amended slogan, "Fill the Fifth, by the fifth, so as not to be the fifth."

BELLEVILLE SOCIALISTS MAKE PROTEST AGAINST CONSCRIPTION

National Secretary in Speech Refers to Law as "Most Infamous Ever Enacted."

Belleville Socialists held an anti-war meeting at the Lyric Theater last night, in which Adolph Geimer of Chicago, formerly of Belleville, who is national secretary of the Socialist party, denounced the selective conscription law as "the most infamous law ever enacted." He said Congress had submitted supinely to the dictates of President Wilson and the demands of capitalists, in passing this law.

Geimer said, in his introduction, that he would exercise his constitutional right of free speech, although he was informed that secret service men were present. He gave no advice to his hearers as to their course of conduct on registration day.

Holy Rosary Parish Carnival.

A carnival will be held on the grounds of the Holy Rosary Church, Newstead and San Francisco avenues, July 12, 13 and 14, to raise funds to assist the building of a new church on the same spot as the old one. A series of entertainments by women of the parish are to be held for the same purpose.

SEARCH CONTINUES FOR THE KIDNAPED SON OF BANKER

J. H. Keet of Springfield Won't Verify Report He Has Paid $6000 Ransom.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., June 2.—The search continued unrelenting here today for Lloyd Keet, the 14-months-old son of J. Holland Keet, wealthy banker. Missing since Wednesday night, when, it was said, he was taken from the family home here while his father and mother were attending a dance at the Country Club, not the slightest trace of him has been found and no clew has been obtained.

Keet, believing that publicity already had injured his chances of paying whatever sum of ransom money might be demanded by the abductors, refused tonight to discuss the efforts he and his friends were making to solve the mystery. The latest gossip was that the father already had paid the sum asked by the kidnapers and that the boy was to be returned tomorrow after the abducters had had sufficient time to leave Springfield. But that met with denial and could not be confirmed.

Keet today repeated that he would pay gladly the $6000 believed to have been demanded for the return of his son. He appears to believe implicitly that the boy was kidnaped and that he will be returned safely, provided the abductors can exchange the boy for the ransom asked.

"I will keep faith with the kidnapers if they only will get him back," the banker said.

Mrs. Keet is not so certain that the boy will come home safely. She hoped that a woman might be a member of the abduction band, because a woman would know how to keep him better than would a man.

The search has assumed the proportions of a nation-wide inquiry. Photographs and descriptions of the boy are being sent throughout the country.

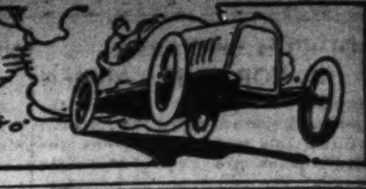
AUTOMOBILE NEWS



PRICE MAY ADVANCE; NOW BELOW MARKET

Due to the radical increase in the cost of raw materials, according to C. B. Voorhis, general sales manager of the Nash Motors Co., that company cannot guarantee to maintain the present price of the Jeffery Six for long—certainly not after their stock of materials, which were bought over a year ago at much lower price levels, is exhausted.

"Forty-four motor car manufacturers," says Mr. Voorhis, "have raised their price within the past few months and now with the contemplated Government war tax, and in the face of constantly rising prices of parts and materials, it is probable that more price advances will follow soon.

"Because we actually build 93 per cent of the Jeffery Six in our own factory, we are practically independent of parts makers. So far, because we must buy our raw materials far in advance and in huge quantities, we have been protected on the material side, too. That is why, notwithstanding the fact that practically every automobile manufacturer has been forced to make raises of from $75 to $200, we are still able to sell the Jeffery Six at the price fixed during 1916.

"At the time the present price, $1465, was fixed, the Jeffery Six was considerably underpriced as compared with other cars in its class. Now, after the deluge of price-raising announcements, it is $150 to $200 underpriced."

DROVE CARS HOME.

H. J. Mertens of the firm of Speckhals & Mertens, Morrison, Mo., visited the Superior Motor Car Co. last week, to drive home two Inter-States and one Lexington, and placed an order for five Inter-States for immediate delivery. HORSEPOWER RATING PLAN IS MISLEADING

The meaning of the term horsepower in motor car specifications is often a misunderstood term," says J. C. Barcus of the St. Louis Grant Motor Co., 3950 Olive street, St. Louis. This is due in a large meaure to the standard, known as the A. L. A. M. rating, which is adopted by most States as a basis for determining horse power. This rating does not attempt to give the exact power for it takes into consideration only the bore and the number of cylinders, eliminating entirely the length of the stroke of the engine, which is equally important with the bore in developing power.

"For instance, the Grant Six by the A. L. A. M. rating is given only 21.6 h. p., while on block test the motor developes 35 h. p. and the brake test of the complete car shows 33 h. p. Thus, while the weight of the car is 110 pounds to the A. L. A. M. horse power, it is but slightly over 70 pounds to the actual horse power.

McADOO STARTS KING ON GRUELLING TEST

Two thousand seven hundred and thirty-five miles in seven days and nights of continuous motor running, without mechanical adjustments or repair, except that due to a collision, is the Northwest record established by a seven-passenger, eight-cylinder stock King motor car.

The car's motor never faltered from the time that W. G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury, gave the boys the word "Go!" at the St. Paul Hotel in Minneapolis.

The conditions of the test were specifically designated to approximate those under which the owner operates his car.

Through rain, sunshine and shadow, night and day for 168 hours, this King eight touring car, with driver and observer and sometimes passengers, swept forward.

During the seven days and nights of running the motor was not stopped once. Nor was any adjustment made upon it, except the change of a fan due to a collision.

BRANDLE TO SELL THE CHEVROLET LINE

The Chevrolet Motor Co. has announced the consummation of a deal in which the Brandle Motors Co., one of the best known automobile concerns in St. Louis, has become distributor of Chevrolet cars in St. Louis, St. Louis County and East St. Louis. The deal was completed last week and become effective June 1.

The Brandle company already has moved from its former location at 3003 Locust street and now occupies the entire Chevrolet building at Locust, Lindell Cutoff and Ollive street, where for the past year or more the Chevrolet company, under the supervision of James D. Cathey, has maintained its city sales department.

This three-story building, comrpising in all more than 30,000 square feet of floor space, was constructed especially for the Chevrolet company and gives the Brandle company one of the most elaborately complete retail automobile sales rooms in the country.

An unusual distinction is enjoyed by the Brandle Motors Co., in that since its beginning but one motor car manufacturer has been represented by it. Entering the automobile field two years ago the Brandle organization introduced Westcott cars to St. Louisans. Since that time more than 200 cars have been sold to local motorists and in becoming Chevrolet distributor the Westcott line still will be represented by them.

Brandle service has been responsible for no small part of this company's unusual growth, and in the company's new home provision has been made for a service department for Chevrolet and Westcott owners which is complete in every detail. E. D. Howe has been made service superintendent and has under his direction a corps of expert mechanics divided into two shifts for day and night service.

A large part of the ground floor of the building is devoted to a used-car department, under the management of Z. V. Wakefield, where all cars taken in through Chevrolet and Westcott sales will be thoroughly overhauled and disposed of under a unique selling plan.

Studebaker

The Studebaker Car

Economy is a Factor

ECONOMY is simply wise buying.

It does not mean unnecessary sacrifice.

Economy is the very opposite of hoarding.

For the very term "economy" presupposes the purchase of necessities, of conveniences, of those things that make for business and personal efficiency.

Automobiles are necessities with many of us—professional men find them well-nigh indispensable.

Salesmen in various lines of business often find their efficiency greatly enhanced by the use of a motor car.

To the family it means health, strength and added vigor—it means increased happiness.

Anything that means all this is an economy.

Therefore, the question is one of what automobile to buy.

Studebaker is the largest producer of fine automobiles in the world.

Studebaker's great resources, Studebaker's great volume enable Studebaker to produce a better car at a lower price.

For this reason Studebaker cars are probably the greatest values on the automobile market today, dollar for dollar of their prices.

The Studebaker FOUR is the only 40 Horse Power, Four Cylinder, Seven Passenger car selling for less than $1,000.

The Studebaker SIX is the only 50 Horse Power, Six Cylinder, Seven Passenger car selling for less than $1,500

In ratio to power Studebaker cars are very economical in their consumption of gasoline.

In ratio to weight and carrying capacity, they are very economical in tires—Studebaker owners frequently get from 8,000 to 10,000 miles on a single set of tires.

Studied accessibility reduces adjustment and repair costs to a minimum.

Studebaker's nation-wide organization of thirty-two direct branches and 6,500 dealers, assures your permanent service satisfaction.

Therefore, economy being a factor—if you want to buy wisely and well, it will pay you to investigate Studebaker before you decide what car to buy.

GOODRICH PREPARED FOR THE ADMEN

Among the many firms that are making special preparations for the Admen's convention this week in St. Louis, the Goodrich plans are among the most elaborate. The salesroom is being rearranged to give space to a special exhibit brought from the factory of life size, hand-colored photographs showing the transition of the crude rubber into the many and varied products of the Goodrich factories.

The Goodrich touring bureau expects many calls from tourists for road information this week. This feature of the Goodrich service has been a great boon to motorists, as it covers the entire United States with road maps and complete touring information. Several members of the factory advertising staff, headed by E. C. Tibbetts, advertising manager, will be in attendance at the convention.

NEW PREMIER DEALER.

The distribution of the Premier in St. Louis and the surrounding territory has been taken over by a new organization, which will be known as the Hudson-Reed Motor Co. A salesroom and service station has been established at 3040 Locust street. Demonstrators were received last week.

The new organization is headed by L. T. Hudson and F. C. Reed, both having in the past been connected with the Hudson sales force in St. Louis.

Mr. Hudson, however, recently took charge of the Premier sales for the Gillham-Pierce Motor Co., who were the former Premier distributers in St. Louis. Mr. Reed and Mr. Hudson, accompanied by Mr. A. G. Dale, district salesmanager, left last night for the Premier factory at Indianapolis to complete the details of the organization.

VELIE IN SNOW FIGHT.

The Velie Six has again demonstrated its sturdiness of construction and its power in one of the most difficult tests, and under adverse conditions by the honor of being the first car to gain entrance to the Yosemite Valley in California, over the Wawona road, and incidentally winning a gold loving cup offered by local automobile enthusiasts

NEW LOCAL COMPANY TO SELL MITCHELL

A new company has been formed in St. Louis, known as the Mitchell Automobile Co. of Missouri. Wesley A. Stanger is president. Mr. Stanger came to St. Louis about six months ago with the Ben-Hur agency. He is an experienced automobile man and a former newspaper man. The new company has the distribution of the Mitchell lines in St. Louis, Arkansas, part of Illinois, Kentucky and Missouri.

The salesroom is located at 3308 Lindell boulevard, and 3309 Olive street, which is one of the handsomest, if it is not the handsomest, automobile salesroom in the country. A service station for Mitchells and a secondhand sales department are being erected at Pine and Channing avenues. The salesroom is to be known as the Mitchell salon.

The Mitchell lines consists of 12 body types in two models, and is manufactured in its entirety at the Mitchell plant.

OVER-SIZE CORD TIRES.

Combining all the merits of the best cord tire construction with the advantages of oversize, the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. has announced the production of a new and distinctive equipment—the Firestone Super-Size Cord tire.

It is the result of three years of experimenting and testing by a score of tire engineers, builders, testers and chemists.

The principal advantages of a cord tire are its superior resilience and wearing qualities. It absorbs road shocks, instead of fighting them and because its fabric is not interwoven but made up of thousands of strong, heavy cords imbedded in tough, pliable rubber, the cord tire has less internal friction.

The oversize fabric tire was also designed for exceptionally hard service, because of its extraordinary size, is extra strong and has easier riding qualities. Firestone has combined the best cord tire merits with the advantages of oversize construction in the new Super-Size Cord.

DROVE 433 MILES ON EXPOSED TUBE

A. A. Schneiderhahn and G. J. Timmermann of the Sterns Tire & Tube Co., of Iowa, started on a trip last Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock in a Paige roadster from Dubuque, Iowa, for a trip to St. Louis. A Sternwear inner tube was in the left front tire, exposed to view through four holes, or perforations, 2½ inches in diameter, cut in the casing. The start of the trip was officially witnessed by the secretary of the Dubuque Automobile Club. m

At Hannibal, heavy rains began which continued throughout Wednesday, and the distance from Hannibal to St. Louis, 142 miles, was made over very bad roads and through creeks and deep mud holes. From Troy to St. Charles the drive was through a terrific storm. The Paige arrived in St. Louis at 6:30 p. m. Wednesday, with the Sternwear tube in exactly the same condition as at the start, there having been no reinflation required, and no deflation had occurred. The tube had not been touched from the start to the finish of the trip. The tube, therefore, made the trip of 433 miles from Dubuque to St. Louis.

NEW OLDS MODEL.

The new Oldsmobile "8" model 44 has been received by the De Luxe Auto Co., 3104 Locust street.

In the new model the lines have been improved, giving a decided stream line effect, yet still retaining the radiator and hood design, which will at once identify it as an Oldsmobile.

Although the De Luxe company has experienced great difficulty in receiving shipments from the factory, they are now in a position to make delivery on the seven-passenger models.

Maxwell's Great Engine Cuts Your Gasoline Bill in Half

Thousands of Maxwell owners run their cars for $6 to $8 a month—the Maxwell sets the pace for the world in upkeep economy.

Mechanical efficiency—that's the fixed, unswerving purpose of the Maxwell organization, from the President down to the youngest and newest apprentice.

The real motor car—the real Maxwell—is on the inside, where you can't see it.

Motor car value depends on the hidden machinery not on a glossy body, rich upholstery, handsome lamps,

—not on gimcracks and novelties which are only too often dangled before the public, for much the same reason that a fisherman decorates his hook with gay feathers and bright metal ornaments.

The Maxwell has one chassis model—one stable, time-tried model, —never tinkered with by the fellow with an untested idea to exploit,

—but a model that has been developed, refined, perfected, year by year—soberly, painstakingly, scientifically.

The Maxwell Mechanically Right

The Maxwell Motor Company waited four years to make that statement.

Starting on sound, scientific principles—the company spent four years in bringing its car to mechanical perfection.

The goal is won—undisputed facts prove it.

For example, a Maxwell stock car—with an engine identically like your Maxwell will have—covered 22,022 miles in 44 days and nights, without the motor ever stopping.

That car traveled at 25 miles an hour,

—made 22 miles per gallon of gasoline,

—and scored a record never equalled by any other vehicle built by human hands.

Proof of Maxwell Economy

Thousands of witnesses spring up all over the land to testify to that.

—a veritable army of enthusiastic Maxwell owners who report —that they get upwards of thirty miles per gallon of gasoline—some even forty,

—and that they run their cars at a monthly expense of $6 to $8.

Mrs. Miriam Thayer Seeley, Professor in the Oregon Agricultural College, drove her Maxwell across the continent and back—9,700 miles over every conceivable variety of road—on an expense bill of $8.19 a month for gasoline, oil and repairs.

The Maxwell costs $665 f. o. b. Detroit —and that small price is distributed over many years

—for you get many, not merely one or two, years of service out of a Maxwell.

How The Maxwell Machine Excels

The engine is a marvel, sturdy, durable, simple, dependable, with power to spare.

The transmission is simple, smooth, self-lubricating, scientific, trouble-proof.

The Maxwell clutch runs in oil—is wear-proof—more efficient than the clutch in any car made, no matter what price or class.

Maxwell axles are designed—forged, heat-treated and built complete in our own factories. They have stood up in service under four years of the severest road tests possible to give them by more than 200,000 owners.

The Maxwell Proves Itself

We stake our reputation that the Maxwell will more than make good on all we have told about it.

All we ask of you is that you will let us prove it.

Come in to our sales rooms and let the car demonstrate itself to you.

It won't take you long to realize that we have not said enough in praise of the Maxwell.

Roadster, $650; Touring Car, $665; Cabriolet, $865; Town Car, $915; Sedan, $985; completely equipped, including electric starter and lights. All prices f. o. b. Detroit.

The St. Louis Grant Motor Co. announces the appointment of C. H. Nelson as dealer at Pittsfield, Mo. His first cars were shipped by boat last week.

AUTO NOTES and GOSSIP.

Employes of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co. at Akron, O., raised the largest flag in Ohio Thursday. The flag was 50x75 feet. About 25,000 people crowded the Goodrich field, and 100,000 more crowded the route of a parade which was given, which was three miles long. Many Akron organizations joined the parade.

The Automobile Club of St. Louis is advising its members that it will defend them against unjust charges of speeding, either in St. Louis or St Louis County, but with no intention of defending them against just charges.

Bernard A. Purcell, who for a number of years has been connected with the sales department of the Dorris Motor Car Co., has been called to the colors. He will be in the Quartermaster's Department of the Officers' Reserve Corps and will report at San Antonio at Fort Sam Houston, Monday morning. He will probably command a truck train.

Frank L. Bartlett has been appointed general sales manager of the country sales department of Harry Newman, Inc., Kissel Kar distributers, and W. H. Broadwell will be traveling representative in Central Illinois.

The King Motors Corporation, now located at 2818 Locust street, expects to move into its permanent home in the new building at the northeast corner of Leffingwell and Locust streets, about June 15.

MACMULLEN TO BE HUDSON MANAGER

It was announced last week that B. J. MacMullen had been elected vice president of the Hudson-Phillips Motor Car Co. and would become general manager of the company's business.

Mr. MacMullen comes to St. Louis with more than 10 years' experience as manager of various wholesale and retail motor car establishments on the Pacific Coast and the Middle West. During this time he was connected with the sales departments of the Chalmers, Overland and White.

Through his experience he has learned the value of service in the motor car business. He has plans for many unique innovations, which will be adopted as soon as the details can be worked out.

SHOWS "ALL-YEAR" CAR

The versatility of the all-year models which have been perfected by the Kissel Motor Car Co. is shown by Harry Newman, Inc., the local Kissel Kar distributers. Sitting side by side on the sales floor are a luxurious town car and distinctive touring car with a victoria top

Both cars are the same model, one being equipped for winter driving and the other for summer. The victoria is upholstered in a light-colored whipcord in the tonneau and leather in the front seat. The town car top replaces the victoria top, giving its owner his choice of either car as the weather demands.

This is but one of the many adaptations made by the Kissel people of their all-year idea, which has often been said to have added six months to the motorist's calendar. The other combinations are a roadster with a coupe top and a touring car with a sedan top.

FACTORY BACKS CAR.

"One of the most important things to consider in the selection of a motor car is the factory that stands sponsor for it," says J. A. Davie of the Davie Motor Car Co., local distributors for the Stephens Six.

"The reputation of the Moline Plow Co. for putting value into their products is maintained in the Stephens Six, a car bearing the name of the president of this great manufacturing concern.

"That the factory is absolutely sure that every car is right before it leaves the factory is shown by the fact that there has been practically no need for a service station since taking on this line in St. Louis. It is a tribute to the thoroughness and ability of the Moline Plow Co. as manufacturers."

WAR HELPS LIGHT TRUCK

C. I. Albach, local manager of the Motor Truck Sales Co., has just returned from a trip to the Smith Form-A-Truck factory in Chicago and is quite enthusiastic over the outlook.

"Whatever economy is to be practiced by the nation in these trying times is bound to react favorably upon the light truck business," said Mr. Albach. "The used pleasure car will be in great demand to meet the hauling problems of the country, and these power plants attached to the Smith Form-A-Truck will mean cheaper, more efficient and more economical means of transportation. Quick action is America's watchword, and the Smith Form-A-Truck is the medium by which the greater number of the hauling problems of the nation can be solved."

THE MOTOR CAR WAR.

"The automobile is properly to be classed with the telephone, telegraph, typewriter, railroad and electric light as one of the obvious requirements of modern life," says J. E. Newell, Dort distributor in St. Louis.

"This fact, undeniable as it is in time of peace, is accentuated many fold in time of war. To perfect the efficiency of man power, in civil pursuits as in military life, we must have organization against waste—and the most expensive waste is wasted time.

"The Happy Medium"

THERE is so much of the time when the touring car is a larger car than you need and a two-passenger roadster would be too small, that the LEXINGTON Minute-Man Clubster is the happy medium.

The Clubster seats four adult passengers comfortably yet when only two or three are riding it does not have that partially occupied appearance which a larger car inevitably has.

The LEXINGTON Clubster is a smart-looking, sociable car. Because it is a LEXINGTON and equipped with a Moore Multiple Exhaust System it has the "pep" and responsiveness which only LEXINGTON can have. The Moore Multiple Exhaust System gives 22.8% more usable power with less gasoline, reduces carbon and ignition troubles to a minimum, and saves wear and tear on engine and car.

Like all LEXINGTON models the Clubster is particularly suitable for women drivers. No other car steers so easily, or gives such a complete feeling of absolute control and dependability.

The LEXINGTON four-passenger Clubster is the season's most pleasing car of this type. From every standpoint, power, beauty, comfort, and economy, it is an ideal car.

See it and you will admit it.

THERE MUST ALWAYS BE A "BEST"

THE policy of the Hood Tire Company is to make absolutely the best tire possible.

There are dozens of other tires on the market—all good—but not one that stands out alone—far ahead of all other tires as the Hood.

The Hood Tire costs more—it should be better than the majority of tires. But you get that extra value—plus, out of a Hood Tire. There is more rubber, more plies of fabric, a stronger fabric, an exacting scientific adjustment of the various materials in the building of the tire.

There are also a number of other refinements in the making of these quality tires all of which are designed to give a longer life, a mileage hitherto unatainable with any other tire, a greater factor of safety and a real economy because it is the "best."

Hood Tires will always remain the "best"; improvements will be added from time to time as our and other experts discover them, keeping the Hood always in the forefront and always the quality tire. Try these quality tires on your car now—let them show their real value to you.

CARDINALS EXPAND NEW YORK SINGLES INTO 2 HOME RUNS

Misplays by Huggins' Men, Plus Timely Slugging by the Giants, Beat Lumbago Bill Doak 5-1.

M'GRAW'S PRUSSIANS GROWL LIKE BEAR-CATS

Herzog, Heine Zim and Fletcher Keep Up Constant Gas Attack on Umpires and Rival Players.

That Prussian army, commanded by the good old Irishman, John J. McGraw, better known to baseball fans as the Giants of New York City, at present intrenched at the top of the National League race, scored another victory on the Robison Field salient yesterday, beating the Cardinals, 5 to 1. Only a fair Saturday crowd, estimated at 4200, witnessed the wreck.

The Giants showed yesterday why they are leading in the National League race. The Cardinals scored their run in the third inning and although the "Prussians" were ahead at the time, they started bawling each other and also Umpire Rigler just because they were scored upon. "Choke 'Em" Charley Herzog started after Dave Robertson after Jack Smith had doubled. Robertson was slow in fielding the ball to the infield and Herzog yelled. Then Umpire Rigler missed what the Giants thought was a strike on Fred Smith. It would have been the third one and retired the side had it been called the way the men of McGraw thought it should be.

On the next pitch Fred Smith singled, scoring Jack Smith. Then the Giants warmed up. They rode Rigler from then until the game ended. There were only three players, Holke, Kauff and Robertson, who did not have something to say to Rigler each time they passed him. It's the old bull-dozing stuff, but it still helps win games.

Giants Attack in First.

Led by "Rube" Benton, who pitched one of his good games, holding the Cardinals to three hits, all of them coming in the first three rounds, by "Von Hindenburg" Zimmerman and by "von Moltke" Fletcher, the Giants got after "Spitter" Bill Doak in the opening drive.

George Burns, one of the anti-alien, named McGraw minions, started by coaxing a pass out of Doak. He reached second when Field Commander Herzog sacrificed, took third on a wild pitch and scored when Zimmerman banged a single over second.

Another tally was added in the second. Benjamin Kauff, a reformed Federal, singled and stole, beating a good throw from Snyder. Holke's infield out placed Kauff on third. Then a person named McCarty rammed the first ball through Hornsby for a single, scoring Kauff.

Single Becomes a Home Run.

After that the heavy guns of the New York artillery rested for a few frames. But they broke loose in the sixth, when two of the main Prussian divisions, Zimmerman and Fletcher, took away whatever chance Huggins' men had of victory. On his second trip to the plate, Zim had been robbed of a hit by Gonzales. This time he took no chances and whaled the ball to the right field fence for two bases.

Fletcher followed with what should have been an ordinary single to center field. But Jack Smith played the hop badly and the sphere rolled to the fence and netted Fletcher a circuit drive, he scoring right on the heels of the "Great Heine" who slowed up to a walk after rounding third.

Not to be outdone by Smith, Cruise did everything but get in front of Dave Robertson's single in the eighth, with the result that it kept going till it hit up against the left field wall, giving Dave a home run and the Giants their fifth tally of the contest.

Although Hornsby returned to the lineup, the Cardinals were crippled by the absence of Bruno Betzel and Jack Miller, both of whom are suffering from bad hands, which will keep them out a few days.

For the third game of the series this afternoon, Huggins will use Leon K. Ames. The veteran probably will draw Ferdinand M. Schupp, the real 42-centimeter gun among the Giant flingers.

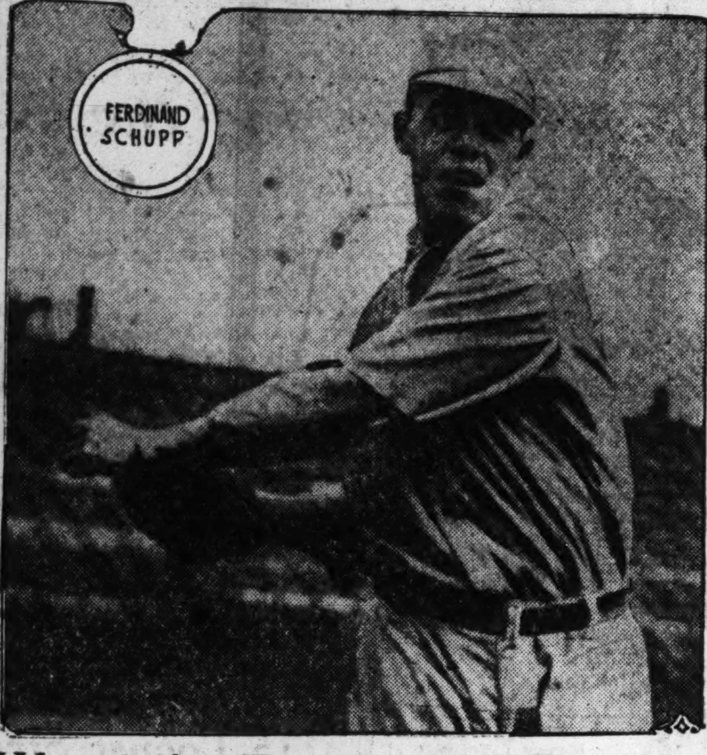
Alexander and Johnson Outdone by This New York Left-Hander



World's Pitching Marks All Shattered by Schupp

Famous 42-Centimeter Port-Firer of McGraw's Prussians Has Allowed Only .61 of a Run for Each Nine Innings Pitched Since Last Sept. 2.

JOHN J. McGRAW, formerly the "Little Napoleon," but now the "Little Kaiser" of the National League world, who is conducting his Prussians through a fierce campaign at the St. Louis salient of the Western front, has not yet brought into action the biggest gun of all—his 42-centimeter port-firer, Ferdinand Schupp.

Thus far Schupp has smashed all opposition flatter than a French joke at a German banquet.

This Schupp person, who was born on Jan. 16, 1892, and is therefore liable to draft under the U. S. conscription act, has developed into a real terror, after a none too good start. Right now Schupp is the "king" of the moundmen, Grover Alexander and Walter Johnson included.

Should Uncle Sam decide that Schupp can do more good in France, hurling hand grenades at the Germans than in pitching ball, it will be a death blow to the Giants. Schupp this year has won six games and lost none. He was held to a draw in 14 rounds by the Superbas.

The young southpaw came into his own after being carried by McGraw for three and a half years, during which time he did little more than warm the bench and occasionally face the enemy after one of the regulars had been pounded.

Schupp "Arrived" in 1916.

But since September, 1916, Schupp has made good with a vengeance. In all, he has pitched 132 innings and in that time he has yielded just nine earned runs, an average of 0.61 per nine-inning contest. A record of this kind has never before been heard of, in the National League. It surpasses anything, even Dutch Leonard and Grover Alexander have ever been able to do.

In 1914, Leonard led the flingers in the American League, giving 1.01 earned runs per game, while Alexander allowed 1.22 in 1915 and 1.55 in 1916. All of these records are surpassed by Schupp, since last September.

On April 25, of this year, Grover Alexander, who is generally rated as the greatest hurler, was sent against the Giants. In that contest Alex lasted just seven innings during which time he was found for nine earned runs, as many as Schupp has yielded in 132 innings.

Alexander's record, great as it is, suffers by comparison with that of Schupp. In the same time since early last September Schupp has allowed 0.61 earned runs a game and Alexander 2.16 in 163 innings. Alexander has worked in only 31 more innings than the southpaw, who has taken the crown of "king" away from him.

Three Runs His Limit.

Since Schupp became a regular, he has twirled six shutout games, three in which his foes scored only one marker, while four times he has held them to two runs. The highest number of runs tallied off him in a single game is three and this feat was accomplished only once. The Cubs were the lucky team, turnig the trick on May 23.

Although a left-hander, Schupp is not the "wild man of Borneo" that southpaws usually are, as he has passed only 29 batters since he started hurling regularly. The hits off him total 63, while he has whiffed 78 batters. In the same time Alex has yielded 140 hits, passed 26 batsmen and struck out 86.

The new leader of the pitchers started his baseball career with the semi-pros in Louisville in 1911. The next year he was given a brief tryout by Cincinnati, but sent to Decatur, from which club the Giants obtained him, in 1913.

In 1915, he pitched 55 innings, the first time his name got into the record books, and he yielded 5.07 earned runs a game, which placed him last in the National League. The next season he topped 'em all with 0.90.

The grand totals for Schupp and Alexander in games pitched since last September:

NAME	R.	ER.	H.	B.B.	SO.	INN.
Schupp	14	9	63	29	78	132
Alexander	56	39	140	26	86	163

Average earned runs per game off Schupp 0.61, off Alexander 2.16. Schupp, games won 12, lost 1, tied 1; Alexander, games won 14, lost 5.

Kansas City Net Stars to Attend Women's Tourney

Missouri State "Patriotic" Event Is Scheduled to Take Place Here June 18.

Despite the fact that no title will attach to victory in the women's State "Patriotic" tournament, scheduled to begin on the Triple A courts Monday, June 18, the ladies in charge of the event are confident they will obtain the entries of several Kansas City players of prominence, including Mrs. Y. Y. Yager, State title holder, Miss Marjorie Hires and others.

Members of the Triple A tennis committee who are working to make the event a success are in correspondence with the Kansas City experts. All of St. Louis' best players will take part. The entry fees will be turned over to the Red Cross association.

No trophies will be given contestants, these being replaced by certificates.

Triple A's club tennis championship tournament will begin next Saturday. The opening schedule for yesterday had to be deferred because of court conditions.

The St. Louis Tennis Association interclub series will be begun this week. The schedule will be announced Tuesday. Eleven clubs will enter teams, each team playing the 10 other clubs that make up the association. Fifty-five matches will be scheduled, each team playing 10 matches.

CENTURY CLUB STAGES SPRING REGATTA TODAY

The annual spring regatta of the Century Boat Club will be held on the river this afternoon, all of them being mile races, straightaway. Five events are on the program. They are as follows: Senior pair; senior four; barge race, between Green and White; barge race between single and married men, and a war canoe race.

MRS. RAY DEFEATS MISS SEMPLE FOR STATE GOLF TITLE

Bellerive Representative Wins, 3 Up and 2, in Final at Westwood.

NEITHER PLAYER ON GAME

But the Better Tee Shots by Mrs. Ray Proves Determining Factor.

Mrs. E. Lansing Ray, representing the Bellerive Country Club, defeated Miss Grace Semple of the St. Louis Country Club, 3 up and 2 to play, in the final round of the third annual woman's State championship golf tournament at the Westwood Country Club, yesterday morning, thereby succeeding Mrs. J. C. Atlee of Kansas City as Missouri's champion.

Mrs. Ray, in gaining the title, gave the soothsaying clientele of local golfdom something as a shock which served as a prelude to the afternoon form-reversal at the Algonquin Club. Miss Semple had been down to win.

The new champion held the city title two year ago, and in consequence of yesterday's victory divides honors with her defeated opponent, as the only woman who had held both state and local titles. Miss Semple was the first Missouri woman champion in 1915, and has gained the city supremacy several times.

High Wind Hurts.

Yesterday's golf was not of the usual championship match merit. Certainly a mischevious shifting wind and a sodden links did combine to reduce the efficacy of play of both title contenders, but the elements do not account for Miss Semple's topped and dubbed brassie shots or Mrs. Ray's inconsistent putting. The game was ragged.

The driving of both players was the most meritorious phase of their game, with Mrs. Ray generally getting some advantage in distance. Where the contestants fell down was in their play between the drive and the green. Mrs. Ray, who used an iron for the second and third shots, could get but little distance since the roll was deadened by the heavy turf. Miss Semple resorted mainly to the brassie on the fair-way and nine grounded "flivers" paved the way to her defeat. As to the short game, Miss Semple was lacking. Had the champion been up to her standard, the match might have ended several holes before it did. Mrs. Ray missed two one-foot putts for holes and one three-footed for a half.

The style of play of the two contestants proved to be quite a contest. Indeed, orthodox golf seemed to receive quite a blow, when Mrs. Ray's style of taking a rapid survey and then clubbing the ball won over Miss Semple's patient, calculating, almost exasperating style. But as said before, it was an upset.

Matters looked unpropitious for Mrs. Ray when the players were going to the third tee, as Miss Semple had easily taken the first two holes. Mrs. Ray then took heed and won the third only to again become two down when she lost the fourth. That was the last hole Miss Semple took while going out, the turn being made with Mrs. Ray, 1 up.

On the return trip, Mrs. Ray took 10, 13 and 16, while her opponent gained but one hole, the eleventh. The match ended on the sixteenth green, when Mrs. Ray pitched prettily on the green, while Miss Semple found herself in trouble among the bunkers.

The gallery was pitifully small, no more than 25 persons witnessing the final play, 20 of which were late comers.

NATIONALS BREAK LOSING STREAK AT BROWNS' EXPENSE

Pitching Duel Between Sothoron and Dumont Won by Griffman, 2-0.

ST. LOUIS GETS TWO HITS

Puzzling Delivery of Washington Hurler Has Jones' Men Baffled.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 2.—The Senators finally won a game today after losing ten in a row, defeating the Browns, 2 to 0. The Browns played poor ball and deserved to lose, making but two hits off Dumont.

Both runs scored by the locals resulted from errors, and with misplays eliminated the contest would have gone into extra innings. A fumble by Pratt accounted for the first run and a wild throw by Sothoron accounted for the other.

Dumont has been pitching brilliantly this spring, but errors would bob up at opportune times for the opposition, and defeat generally came his way. Out of eight starts Dumont had won one game up to today's victory, and he now believes his bad luck has been broken. Today he held the Browns to two singles. One by Shotton and the other by Pratt, and certainly deserved victory, although the three errors of the locals threatened to be costly on each ocurrence.

Sotheron's Costly Heave.

Sothoron also pitched good ball, allowing but four hits, and although he gave five passes to first, they did not figure in the scoring. Sothoron was directly responsible for the second run, as he tossed the ball into right field trying to retire Milan at first, and Judge scored all the way from second on the heave.

But one brilliant play was recorded during the afternoon, Shanks pulling down Severeid's long fly in the fourth inning that appeared to be ticketed for a home run. Right on top of this brilliant catch, Marsans slammed another long fly to left that Shanks got both hands on, but let drop, dimming the luster of his previous performance.

Although the day was perfect only 2000 fans turned out, the continuous run of defeats by the Senators having broken down all enthusiasm for the sport in this city.

Errors Help Enemy.

After going runless for three innings the Senators finally landed in the fourth round. One gone, Smith reached first when Pratt fumbled. Morgan singled, Smith stopping at second. Sothoron beaned McBride, filling the bases. Sothoron tried to get the ball over while McBride was not looking and as a result the sphere struck Mac on the shoulder. Ainsmith then sent a long fly to Shotton who was too far out and Smith crossed the plate in safety. Dumont wound up this round with a strikeout.

In the next inning the Senators got their second and final run. Judge led off with a cleau single to left. Foster sacrificed. Milan then rolled one along the line towards first which Sothoron got hold of in plenty of time to make the play, but in endeavoring to avoid hitting the runner he threw the ball over Sisler's head. The ball rolled into right field, Judge coming home and Milan scooted to second. Shanks and Smith followed with easy outs at first.

WEBSTER GROVES TEAM SCORES ONLY 5 POINTS IN MEET IN WINDY CITY

CHICAGO, June 2.—With a score of 28 points, a well-balanced team from Lake Forest, Ill., Academy, won the sixteenth annual interscholastic meet held under the auspices of the University of Chicago today. Three hundred athletes from 90 high schools and academies competed.

Scott High School of Toledo, O., was second with 19 points, and East High School of Aurora, Ill., third with 15 points. W. Adams of Manteno, Ill., won the cup for individual honors. He scored 12 points, finishing second in the high jump, fourth in the discus and tied with two others for second in the pole vault.

Moorehead of Scott High and Rogers of Lake Forest Academy were tied for second place with 10 points each. Moorehead won the 100 and 220 yard dashes. Wilcoxen of Oakpark High, Chicago, broke the only record for the meet when he hurled the javelin 182 feet 9 inches. Neil Irving, who came on from Rupert, Idaho, to compete in this event, finished second.

Webster Groves and Slater were the only Missouri schools represented in the competition. The former gathered five points and the latter two.

Webster Groves gathered her points in the discus throw and in the mile run. In the former event A. Lincoln finished third and in the mile run A. Spencer was fourth.

Slater (Missouri) got her two points when W. McClain finished fourth in the 440-yard run.

McKinley Gains Tie for Lead by Beating Central

Dumb Base-Running by Latter Team Results in Defeat, Score, 4-3.

Central presented McKinley with a game yesterday morning at High School field by a score of 4-3. McKinley was outhit, 13-7, but bad baserunning and poor mental work by the mid-city lads resulted in their defeat.

For the first time this season Hager was really hit hard. The McKinley phenom was touched for 12 safeties, one a double. Weidlich pitched a masterful game for Central, and with decent support would have won. Central's real chance to tie the score came in the ninth. Hall led off with a single. Metz and Graves also singled and Hall scored. Metz foolishly tried for third and was an easy out on T. Thompson's throw to Conley. Graves was doubled as he tried for second. Wiedlich fouled out for the final demise. McKinley and Soldan are now tied for the title. The two teams will play for the championship at a later date, probably June 9. The score:

FISHER MEETS O'BRIEN IN OPEN-AIR MAT BOUT AT FEDERAL PARK TODAY

Jack Fisher, world's lightweight wrestling champion, will meet "Red" O'Brien of Woodstock, Ill., in an open-air wrestling match at Federal League Park this afternoon. The match is at 138 pounds and therefor not for the lightweight crown. It will be the third meeting between the pair. The first resulted in a draw and O'Brien won in the second meeting.

O'Brien is one of the best boys Fisher has met in local bouts. The Woodstock mat-man has met Johnny Billeter several times, and in their last engagement pinned the Toledo boy's shoulders twice in six minutes.

This wil be Fisher's last match in this city for some time. His next bout of importance probably will be with Owen Daly in Omaha.

Two preliminaries are scheduled for this afternoon, the first to start at 2:30 o'clock.

CLEVELAND WINS FIRST INTERSCHOLASTIC LEAGUE GAME, BEATING YEATMAN

Cleveland won its first game of the season by a 5-4 score from Yeatman yesterday, thereby going into a tie for last place with the North Siders. It is the third time during the last year that Cleveland and Yeatman have tied for interscholastic places. The teams were tied for last place in football, tied for first place in basketball and now tied for last in baseball. Spectacular pitching in the pinches by Kilculen, coupled with the new found batting strength of Cleveland, was the cause of the victory. Placke led in the hitting, with three out of five. Winkelman's sensational play in right field cut off several Cleveland runs.

"VICTORY FIRST," IS M.-V. BOATMEN'S LATEST SLOGAN

KEOKUK, Ia., June 2.—"Victory First!" In these words Admiral F. C. Smith of the Mississippi Valley Power Boat Association summed up the sentiment of the thousands of motor boatmen of the Middle West today, in announcing the cancellation of the association's annual racing program for the duration of the war.

"Our Executive Committee and officers have voted to cancel the Minneapolis regatta," said Admiral Smith, "because we feel the time has arrived when those trained in special lines—as race-boat men are trained in the handling of powerful boats and high-speed motors—prefer to devote their time and talents to fighting for America and for all that America means to every one of us.

"Personally, I should consider it unpatriotic if this association, by the continuance of a racing program, should deprive the country of their knowledge and services, and especially right now when they are sorely needed."

King Gorin, an Added Starter, Wins Handicap

Light Impost Helps Outsider Who Pays $43.50 in Two-Dollar Mutuels.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 2.—The 4-year-old Transvaal, Ethel Simpson colt, King Gorin, owned by R. L. Baker & Co., of Lexington, Ky., under the masterful ride of Jockey Mack Garner and favored by a light impost of 108 pounds, wont the fifth renewal of the Kentucky Handicap at Douglas Park here today by a neck from John W. Schorr's 3-year-old Broomstock colt, Cudgel, before one of the largest crowds that ever witnessed the running of the stake.

Half a length back was Andrew Miller's Roamer, which made his third try for the event. Boots, coupled in the betting with Ed Crump as the A. K. Macomber entry, finished fourth, beaten for the show money by two lengths. Old Rosebud, the 9 to 5 favorite, and Opportunity finished in the ruck after setting a terrific pace for half a mile.

The time of 2m 4 1-5s for the mile and a quarter was remarkable, considering the condition of the track, which was lumpy and slow.

King Gorin had to be ridden hard to win. Cudgel but for losing ground by going wide, might have won. They ran neck and neck from the head of the stretch.

King Gorin was only considered as a starter after his stable mate, Pif Jr., had met with a accident preventing him from being sent to the post. He was practically neglected in the betting, a $2 pari-mutuel ticket on him paying $43.50 to win, $21.10 for the place and $7.50 for show. Cudgel's chances also were not highly thought of, a $2 place ticket paying $14.20 and a show ticket $7.50. Roamer went to the post third choice in the betting, a show ticket on him paying $4.80.

The stake was worth $12,200 net to the winner; $1500 to second, $600 to third, while the fourth horse saved his fees.

MANION GETS NO CUP; GOLFERS SEND $1000 CHECK TO RED CROSS

Jimmy Manion, who is a "stock boy" at the Carleton Dry Goods Co., was somewhat distressed last night when he discovered that he would receive no silver cup for winning the State golf title. But Jimmy was relieved when he learned the reason why. Instead of giving cups the Missouri Golf Association donated all its surplus to the American Red Cross and Secretary Bonner Miller last night presented a check for $1000 to the local Red Cross representatives.

In lieu of trophies the winners and those who competed in the State tournament received a certificate, emblazoned with the American flag, saying that the certificate was given in order that the trophy fund might be donated to the Red Cross.

SIMPSON FOR THIRD TIME AFTER "BIG 9" HURDLES

COLUMBIA, Mo., June 2.—Bob Simpson, University of Missouri hurling marvel, will try June 9 to establish the remarkable record of winning both high and low hurdles, in Western Conference meets, for three consecutive years.

Bob took both hurdles at Chicago in his sophomore year. Last year he set a world's record of 14 3-5 seconds for the highs, at the Western meet. Simpson already has won both the high and low hurdles in the Missouri Valley Conference for three consecutive year.

Scholz, Duncan, Selbie and Pittam also will compete for Missouri in the Western Conference meet at Chicago, this year. Selbie lives in Chicago.

C. A. C. STAGES FIRST MEET OF YEAR TODAY

The Columbian Athletic Club will hold its first field meet of the season this afternoon when six events, open to members only, will be staged. An admission fee of 25 cents will be charged. Acording to Paddy Fitzgerald, who is in charge of the events, something like 40 members will participate.

FLYWEIGHT MANION, 2 DOWN AT NO. 27, WINS STATE TITLE

Municipal Links Golfer, Weighing 111 Pounds, Outdoes R. E. Lord in Final Round at Algonquin, Two Up and 1.

RALLY IN LAST NINE HOLES A FINE DISPLAY

Victor Refuses to Be Discouraged by His Opponent's Lead, and Plays Championship Golf in the Stretch.

By W. J. O'Connor

The Missouri State Golf championship passed from the heavyweight to the flyweight division, yesterday afternoon, when Jimmy Manion of the Kirkwood Country Club defeated Roger Endicott Lord, of Algonquin, 2 up and 1, in the final round of 36 holes played over the Algonquin links.

Manion is not yet 21 years of age and weighs a few ounces less than 111 pounds. He learned the fundamentals of the game as a caddie for Jess Carleton at Glen Echo when he was 12 years old, went to work when he was 16 and has since developed his game over the Municipal links where he plays twice a week.

Despite his apparent frailty he hits a long ball from the tee, having great power in his wrists and the all important "follow through." He knows his clubs and can do as much with the irons as any player in local competition. He plays a game interesting to watch. He's cool, cautious but never deliberate. He has eradicated that terrible fault of "fiddling." He analyzes his shot in advance and makes it with pleasing dispatch. His victory yesterday shoved R. W. Hodge of Kansas City from the titular throne, Mr. Hodge declining to defend his title.

Manion's Courage Tested.

Manion made a gallant fight after reaching the three-quarter pole and overhauled his worthy opponent only after a driving finish. At the end of the morning round the youthful champion was 1 up, but at the start of the final round in the afternoon he appeared nervous and in the parlance of the links, began to "slop things up." He missed two three-foot putts and at the turn he was 2 down and apparently slipping.

"It looks like the kid has blown," said Jess Carleton, his patron, who registered anguish and fled to the clubhouse. And the popular belief then was that Manion had cracked under the strain. He had fluffed a wee bit of a putt on No. 8 and dubbed his approach on No. 9.

And there was wailing and gnashing of teeth among the caddies who had bet everything—car tickets, good customers, old balls and discarded clubs—on their idol.

"I walk home a broker, if Jimmy blows it," said one caddie who had enough tan on his face to make a truant officer suspicious.

"'Gwan," said another Boy Scout, "Jimmy couldn't quit if he knew how. Watch him breeze from here in."

And that's precisely what began to develop. For after Jimmy sliced his tee shot into the rough he buckled down to business and started to win. He was not deterred by the fact that Lord's drive was straight down the alley. He played his second out of the rough safely to the edge of the lake and this recovery put him even with Lord who also played it safe.

The Tide Turns.

Manion took an iron and pitched his third onto the green. Lord sliced his third into the rough, while Manion's fourth was dead at the pin and he was down in 5, Lord taking a six.

Manion then was one down and coming. Lord's tee shot going to No. 11 landed him in the creek while Manion was behind the bunker, but Manion's approach was perfect and he bagged this hole, 4—5. It was then "all even."

Lord continued to have trouble with his tee shots and going 12 he drove into the creek while Manion cleared it, approached to the edge of the green, laid up nicely and holed out for 4. Lord was stymied by a sewer pipe, but was allowed to pick up and drop his ball without penalty, but he couldn't recover and took a 6. Manion was 1 up.

They halved No. 13, but Manion hooked out of bounds going to No. 14, and Lord was down in 5 to his opponent's 6, making it all even for the fifth time since the start of the morning round.

They halved No. 15 because Manion missed a 4-foot putt and again the Manion supporters began to weaken. They wilted when Jimmy sliced into No. 9 fairway going to 16, Lord getting a perfect drive of 225 yards down the course.

But here again Manion's unobtrusive aggressiveness asserted itself. He took a brassie and whopped one a mile for a wonderful recovery. Lord's second lacked distance. Manion was half-stymied by a tree, but he played his third to the edge of the green, laid his fourth dead at the pin and was down in five. Lord's third was to the right of the green, from where he over-approached, and he was done in 6. Manion was one up.

Going to 17, the 125-yard hole they lie alike after the pitch shots. Both were a little short on their "lay ups" and Lord then fluffed his putt, and it was Manion's match.

Lord easily can find solace in viewing his work in the tourney in retrospect. He eliminated Harry Potter and Chris Kenney, the odds-on favorite, and played a splendid game against Manion. But the latter, a sapling, totally without "nerves" was just a bit too much, and for that reason Missouri today has its youngest champion in history. Manion will not be a voter until Nov. 13, next. He was born in 1896.

RED SOX BLANKED FOR SECOND TIME BY SPEAKER'S MEN

Great Pitching by Bagby Helped Subdue the World's Champions, 5 to 0.

TRIS MADE THREE HITS

In Addition, the Greatest of Centerfielders Put Out Seven Opponents.

BOSTON, June 2.—Cleveland again shut out Boston, 5 to 0, today. Bagby allowed the champions only three hits, which came one at a time in each of the first three innings.

Not an opponent got on the last six innings.

Speaker had a great day, obtaining three hits, one a three bagger, making seven putouts.

The game was delayed three quarters of an hour at the start because of rain. Score:

YANKS KNOCK OUT FOUR DETROIT HURLERS

NEW YORK, June 2.—New York won an easy victory from Detroit here today, 8 to 4. Manager Jennings of Detroit used five pitchers. James was knocked out of the box in the fourth inning when Hendrix hit a triple, with the bases full and scored on a squeeze play.

Coveleskie, who has been bothered with a lame arm, attempted to pitch in the seventh inning, but retired after making two wild throws and allowing a hit.

The two teams left for Detroit immediately after the game, where they will play a postponed game tomorrow.

18 MATCHES PLAYED IN FOREST PARK TOURNEY; MANION VS. KOOB TODAY

Eighteen matches were played yesterday in the different classes of the Forest Park Club's tournament on the Municipal links. Today's schedule calls for the apeparance of Jimmy Manion, who won the State championship at Algonquin yesterday, and also for a match between Clarence Wolff and C. G. Donahue. Yesterday's results:

Championship Class.

Frank Wentura defeated L. D. Saunders, 2 up 1 to play.

Spring Gardening.

FULL many a gardener plants the festive bean
And finds a beet or radish growing there;
Full many an onion's born to blush unseen
And waste its fragrance on the desert air.

Full many a gardener will mistake a weed
And cultivate it with his rake and hoe;
Full many a man will plant canary seed
From which he thinks canary birds will grow.

Full many a man, regardless of expense,
With various garden tools will fill his shed;
Full many a neighbor's hen will jump the fence
And hold a banquet in his lettuce bed.

The Old Guard.

THEY do say that the ages of some of the veteran ballplayers have been increasing by leaps and bounds, since the conscription bill was passed. Some of them, it is said, aged as much as 10 per cent overnight.

Boy, Page Dutch Leonard!

THE bean ball is the ruthless U-boat of baseball. It is inhuman and has no place in modern baseball warfare. We trust American inventive genius will evolve something to blow it to smithereens.

* * *

Quite So.

IT'S easy enough to be happy
When blessed with a large patrimony;
But the fellow worth while
Is the one who can smile
When stung for a large alimony.

Looking Forward.

THE Giants, McGraw announces, will train in Marlin again next spring, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding. The Dallas fans are making reservations for the spring series between Ty Cobb and Buck Herzog.

Bill Byron avers that a ballplayer will never admit the possibility of his being wrong. We've noticed that, too. Maybe it's because they can't figure the possibility of the ump being right.

Now, take the fan; he is not so biased in his views. The fan will always agree with the ump when he takes issue with an opposition player. And he will back up the home player as against the arbitrator.

The Difference.

IT seems that one may play golf and not be a golfer. An authority, in summing up the relative merits of two topnotch players of the ancient and honorable game, once said: "Ah, but Jones is a golfer!" We take it the other guy ate a meal at home once in a while and maybe made a bluff at keeping some kind of office hours.

Speaking about golf, Francis Ouimet enjoys the distinction of being a professional in the East and an amateur in the West.

Both.

BY the way, what has become of the famous Jack Dillon-Bat Levinsky series? There hasn't been anything since the 49th episode. Who got the money?

ZEIDER STARS IN FIELD

Chicago Shortstop Pulls Feature Defensive Play for the Winning Club.

CHICAGO, June 2.—Larry Doyle's timely single in the ninth inning gave Chicago a 4 to 3 victory over Brooklyn today.

Prendergast had singled and had taken second when Wolter walked. Doyle singled after two were out, scoring Prendergast.

The visitors bunched hits and took the lead from the locals, in the seventh inning, but Flack, a pinch hitter, tied the count when he singled, went to second on Zeider's walk and scored on Wolter's double.

Zeider's fielding was the feature of the game.

TIGER TEAMS LOSE ONLY 15 STARS AT JUNE GRADUATION

Football Will Be Hardest Hit as Eight Members Will Leave the School.

COLUMBIA, Mo., June 2.—Unless enlistments and drafting ravage the ranks of university students this summer, Missouri has bright prospects of a successful athletic year from next September through May. At the annual commencement next week, fewer Tiger athletes will depart than has been the case within the past seven years. Only 15 wearers of the "M" will appear in the cap and gown, whereas last year 26 varsity men received their degrees.

Football will be the hardest hit, but because of the large amount of likely looking material developed this year, Coach Schulte has no cause to worry over the situation. Five regulars and three substitutes of the 1916 season will be missing when the first football call is sounded next fall. The graduates are Capt. Lansing, Muir, Groves, Wilder, Preston, McMillan, Rutledge and Peeples. Muir was injured early last season and consequently could not be considered as a "reg." while Rutledge and Peeples were both "sub" backfield men.

The biggest loss to the athletic department that has been suffered in seasons will occur when Bob Simpson, world's champion hurdler, is handed his diploma. Simpson is the greatest individual athlete ever developed at the University of Missouri, having given the institution more world-wide prestige than any other Tiger athlete has had the honor of giving. Other track men to graduate are Daggy and Wyatt, quarter-milers, and Williams, broad jumper.

Simpson Will Be Lost.

The loss of Williams also strikes two other branches of athletics. The Kansas Cityan is also captain of the basket ball and tennis teams. He is the only backet ball man or racqueter to leave. Next to Simpson he is probably the most valuable athlete in the university.

Four baseball varsity men are seniors this year, while a fifth will have finished his three years of service on the team, making him ineligible for the next season. These are Capt. McMillan, shortstop; Farmer, second baseman; Rutledge, outfielder; Owens, substitute catcher, and Morgan, pitcher.

Incidentally St. Louis' quota of Missouri University athletes will be almost entirely lost. Wilder, an end, is the only Mound Cityan on the football team. Wyatt's departure leaves Scholz as the only St. Louisan on the track squad. In baseball, Owens, Morgan and McMillan all come from suburbs of St. Louis, and their graduation leaves the Missouri Valley Conference champions without a single member from the State metropolis.

Slusher Named Captain.

About the biggest athletic surprise of the year at Missouri U. occurred this past week when Clyde Slusher, first baseman, was elected captain of the 1917 baseball team. Giltner, pitcher and outfielder, seemed to have the position clinched, with Dippold, an outfielder, as a possible alternate. Just another case of dark horse.

Norris Rider and Earl Renick are at present the most likely looking nominees for the track captaincy for next year. Rider is a quarter and half miler, while Renick has been Simpson's running mate in the hurdles.

The University of Missouri's baseball team's feat of completing the season with a record of 17 victories and 1 defeat, is the most clean-cut championship gained in the M. V. C. baseball league in recent seasons. Missouri has won 35 and lost three games in the past two years.

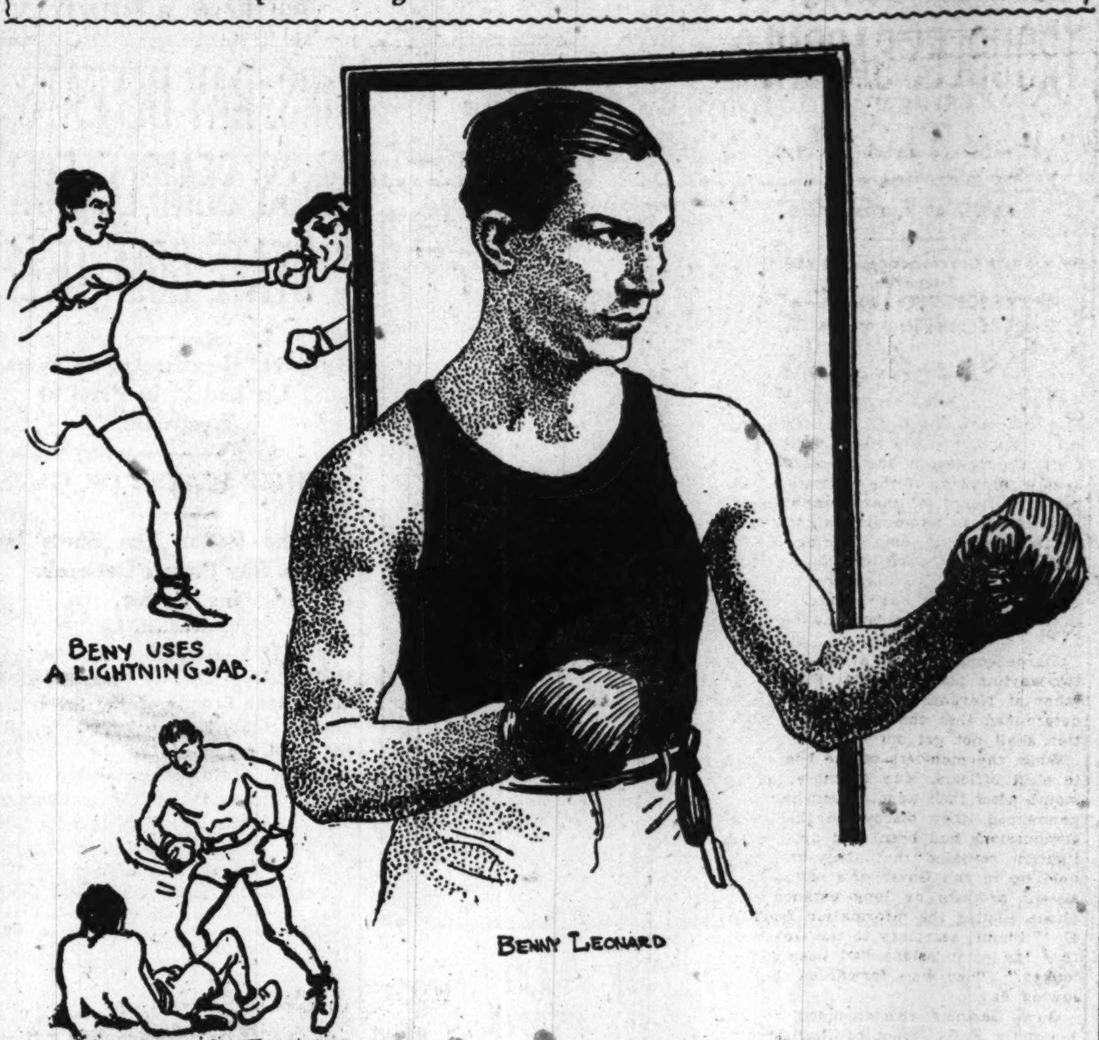
New Champion Fights First for U. S., Then for Title



BENY USES A LIGHTNING JAB..
HIS RIGHT IS THE FINISHER.
BENNY LEONARD

Kilbane and White Only 133-Pound Fighters in New Champion's Class

Dundee Doesn't Quite "Belong" and Lacks a Punch; While Hammer, Welling and Mitchell Have Been Beaten.

By John E. Wray.

BENNY LEONARD (or Leiner, as his real name is said to be), did the fistic world a nice little favor when he eliminated the purely defensive Freddie Welsh from all connection with the championship.

Throughout the fistic realm it was felt that matters had reached an exasperating deadlock, as regards the lightweight ring title, inasmuch as Welsh was slipping and would not defend his honors in an aggressive fashion.

Freed from the safety-first tactics of the former titleholder, some real battling may be expected, inasmuch as Leonard is not only a great, but a willing scrapper.

Nevertheless, the lightweight situation is none too hopeful, at this time. It is unlikely to be productive of a title contest for some time. Even if Leonard does not carry out his announced intention to enlist, this week, opponents of title caliber are few and not very classful. Of course, the men whose names naturally first rise to mind are Johnny Kilbane, Charley White and Johnny Dundee. White has the heavy artillery, Johnny Kilbane has the skill and headwork and Johnny Dundee, as we get it, won't do—he lacks punch and genuine class for the job of toppling Leonard.

Joe Welling, Ritchie Mitchell, Ever Hammer and other secondary candidates appear to have been effectually eliminated.

Fans Strong for Kilbane.

Kilbane is the lad that most fans would like to see oppose Leonard, because he is a native-born American, as is Leiner, notwithstanding the latter's Hebraic parentage. White's real name is Anchowitz, and he was born in Liverpool, while Dundee's ancestors and himself as well hail from Sharkai, Italy, his real name being Carrora.

Until his true colors came out in the fight with Welsh, last year, at Colorado Springs, Charley White was thought to be a world-beater. He has a better knockout record than Leonard and is undoubtedly a great battler, except for the fact that he seems to lose heart when the enemy shows spirit and gameness. That's the testimony of several good men who have followed his career.

However, he's a rugged boy and against Leonard, who lacks the really great defensive stuff Welsh knew, he might prove a true 42-centimeter. At any rate, this is the fight from which fans expect most, if it can be arranged.

Leonard Is Willing to Defend His Title, but Only After He Finishes Fighting for Uncle Sam, He Declares.

Leonard has been in the fight game only a few years, but not until the latter part of 1915 did he begin to attract attention from fans and promoters. He is 21 years old. His first fight was in 1912. He was regarded as a good little boxer, but like all the other lightweights, unable to hit.

Billy Gibson, who groomed him from a novice to a country-wide sensation maintained that some day Benny would become a star. Billy's prophecy came true. About the middle of December, 1915, Leonard was in a card of star lightweights in New York. He was paired off with Joe Mandot of New Orleans, who had just defeated Johnny Dundee in a 20-round battle.

Mandot Felt His Punch.

For six rounds Mandot and Leonard fought a pretty boxing battle, then in the seventh round Leonard finally found he could hit, or to use Philadelphia Jack O'Brien's favorite phrase, "He acquired punching power," anyway Leonard reached out with a trrific smash that caught the New Orleans lad on the jaw, and the latter took the count.

This conquest by Leonard startled boxing fans, but Leonard's clean-cut victory was taken with a grain of salt, boxing patrons saying, "Ah, Mandot is a has-been," but Manager Billy Gibson knew his prediction has finally come true.

Subsequently, however, Leonard continued his "kayo" career, stopping such stars as Phil Blom, Joe Welch, Shamus O'Brien, Jimmy Murphy, Ever Hammer, Ritchie Mitchell and Welsh. His last five fights have resulted in knockouts.

His Brains, More Than His Punch, Won Title for Yiddish Champion

NEW YORK, June 2.—Benny Leonard, the new lightweight champion of the world, owes his victory over clever Freddy Welsh to his brain more than to his supple muscles and his hard hitting right fist.

"I studied Welsh in all his fights for months," Benny declared when interviewed at his own fireside after the bout. "I planned something to offset every move he uses. I didn't know everything he had, for when he felt he was being whipped he used tricks he hadn't shown before and he fooled me at first.

"But I studied him and let down a little for two or three rounds until I felt sure I could go right in and finish him. I wasn't drawing it too fine, waiting for the ninth round, because I knew I could get him in any round then. When I started it took only a minute and 15 seconds to finish the job.

"Of course I had worn him down with body blows before that and I knew exactly what to do. He had lost just enough speed to make it easy to hit him, by hitting faster than he could shift his guard.

"When I had him on the ropes after the fourth knockdown I kept hitting him with the right, the blows held him across the ropes so that he couldn't fall. As his guard was down at last the only question was whether he would slide down to the floor and be counted out, or the referee would step in to save him from injury. I stopped hitting him on the chin as soon as I saw he was gone. I beat Mitchell in exactly the same way, hanging him on the ropes and finishing him there."

SIX PROVINCES IN CHINA DECLARE INDEPENDENCE

Threaten to Force Reinstatement of Premier and to Join Military Governors.

PEKIN, June 2.—The Provinces of Anhui, Chi-Li, Hu-Pe, Che-Kiang, Fo-Kien and Ho-Nan have proclaimed their independence and threaten to send a point expedition to Pekin to force the dissolution of Parliament and the reinstatement of Tuan-Chi-Jui as Premier. Tang-Hau-Lung, Speaker of the Assembly, has resigned and gone to Tien-Tsin to join the military Governors.

The President has issued a lengthy statement, defending his dismissal of the Premier, at the same time highly praising him and expressing the hope that he may serve the country in the future. The statement ends:

"If those responsible for the present crisis intend to provoke internal war, I will under no consideration watch the country sink into perdition. I am not afraid to die for the country."

The six revolting Provinces in China form the major party of the southeastern portion of the Republic and have a population of about 120,000,000. The situation in China has grown steadily more threatening since President Li Yuan Hung dismissed Premier Tuan Chi Jui from office on May 23, following a riotous session of the House of Representatives, at which the Deputies refused to adopt a resolution declaring war on Germany. The parliamentary building was surrounded by a mob, demanding war, and the President accused the Premier of attempting to coerce Parliament.

The military Governors sided with the dimsissed Prime Minister and left the capital in a body.

STATE HOSPITAL SUPERINTENDENCY TROUBLES GARDNER

Governor's Candidate Not in Favor With Board of Managers at Farmington.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 2.—After P. A. Benham, president of the Board of Managers of the State Hospital for the Insane at Farmington, had been closeted with Gov. Gardner two hours, today, the Post-Dispatch learned that the Governor is making every effort to fulfill political promises in the appointment of a superintendent of the institution, and that the board of managers virtually has refused to name the man the Governor wants. It also became known that the entire board of managers has been summoned to Jefferson City for a conference with the Governor before the board's next regular meeting, June 11.

Sharpened by defeat at the hands of two asylum boards, one at Fulton, the other at Nevada, the Governor seems determined that the Farmington situation shall not get out of hand.

When the members of the board met to elect officers, May 14, more than a month after their appointment had been announced, they discovered that their commissions had been held up. Investigation revealed that they had been held up in the Governor's office. Persistent protests by long-distance telephone elicited the information from N. E. Williams, secretary to the Governor, that the commissions had been "overlooked." They were forwarded the following day.

Gov. Gardner recommended to the board Dr. F. S. Vernon of Charleston as the candidate he wished to have elected superintendent of the Farmington hospital. Vernon served as an assistant physician in the institute during the Folk administration. At the initial meeting of the board Vernon could muster only one vote, Sam McMinn of Marble Hill, an old member reappointed by Gardner.

Dr. George E. Scrutchfield, the present superintendent, appears to be the chief obstacle in the way of the Governor's program. Scrutchfield submitted to the board and to Gov. Gardner a tabulated statement of efficiency and economy, comparing his administration with that of other State hospitals. He presented these figures to the Governor in person and asked for reappointment on the promise made by Gov. Gardner in his inagural address that the appointments in eleemosynary and penal institutions would be based on merit and efficiency alone and that politics would not be considered.

Gov. Gardner told the Post-Dispatch correspondent last week that he would not interfere further in the appointment of a superintendent at Farmington.

"I recommended Vernon to the board," he said, "but if he can't muster enough votes when the board meets, that is his lookout. I shall not interfere further."

After his conference with the Governor yesterday, Benham said the Governor was of the same opinion regarding the appointment of the superintendent, but added that the Governor, after expressing his preference, told him he was not going to dictate to the board.

The Post-Dispatch prints more boats, launches, bicycle, motor cycle and camera advertisements than the four other St. Louis newspapers combined.

HOW THE ALLIES MAY RECRUIT ALIEN LEGIONS IN THIS COUNTRY

With Approval of Secretary of War Foreign Nations Can Recruit Unnaturalized Residents.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—Regulations under which foreign legions may be recruited in this country by agents of the allies were announced today by Secretary Baker to make effective the law authorizing alien enlistments.

Great Britain is the first country to apply for permission to conduct a recruiting campaign in the United States, and is expected to open offices in New York immediately. Officials of several other countries have discussed the plan informally and may start systematic recruiting here within a few weeks.

The great alien population of Russian Jews, Italians, Rumanians and Servians in the United States are likely to be most affected by the new rules. Enlistments are entirely voluntary under the law. Aliens are not subject to draft for the United States army, but may enlist voluntarily.

Under the War Department's regulations a foreign nation must first obtain approval of the Secretary of War for recruiting here. The embassy, consulates or authorized recruiting agents may then enlist "any person other than citizens of the United States," and either assemble recruits in a concentration camp in this country or send them to their native country for training.

Educator Held Under Mann Act.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 2.—John V. Clark, until recently a high school instructor in New Orleans, was arrested here today on a charge of violating the Mann act. Federal officers said that Clark, using the name of H. O. Robinson, wrote to his wife m El Paso that he had been shot as a spy at Juarez, Mexico. Meantime, it is alleged, he had married a New Orleans school teacher.

AUSTRALIAN CHIEF OF STAFF THINKS WAR WILL END IN YEAR

Believes That German Resistance on the West Front Will Be Broken Soon.

MELBOURNE, Australia, June 2.—Major-General James Gordon Legge, chief of the Australian General Staff, who left Australia in May, 1915, to command the first Australian division at the Dardanelles and subsequently served with distinction on the Gallipoli Peninsula and in Northern France, said on his recent return here from the Western front:

"I am convinced that the German resistance will be broken and I hardly think that the war will last another year. The duration of the German resistance after the main line is broken can only be guessed at. Once Germany is beaten on the Western front Turkey and Austria will soon cry enough and collapse like a house of cards."

Gen. Legge said that the weather and the mud had all along been a greater obstacle than the Germans on the Western front and had prolonged trench fighting.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

TRADING BROAD, PRICES MIXED, IN WALL STREET

Stocks Show Gains and Losses for the Week; Money Rates Are Higher.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 2.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"When money rates rose on the Stock Exchange yesterday, to the highest figure of the year, Wall Street discussed the tightening of that market as a result of the preparations for Government borrowing. No doubt the floating of the $2,000,000,000 war loan and, perhaps, more particularly, the placing of blocks of short-term Treasury bills with the banks, are having their influence on rates, but it will hardly do to overlook the influence of the Stock Exchange itself. Daily 'million-share markets,' with prices rising excitedly under buying of the most highly speculative sort, hardly conduce to easy money, and that is one reason why a good many prudent people have regarded the present stock market commotion as exceedingly ill-timed.

"The opinion seems to prevail in many quarters that, since the placing of our enormous war loan will undoubtedly cause expansion in the credit accounts of banks, there will therefore be much more credit to spare for Wall Street speculation. The reasoning is a bit obscure, and it is pretty safe to stick to general principles, among which is the recognized fact that, when an enormous shifting of capital is under way in a single operation, absorption of credit in stock market extravagance will aggravate the money situation.

"What conditions will prevail in the field of bank reserve and credit facilities later in the year, is, as yet, more or less a matter of conjecture. But an outburst of excited Wall street speculation at the very moment when the two-thousand-million Government loan is about to come upon the market is more suggestive of blindness than of financial foresight.

"Nor can it very well be denied that the stock market is confronting problems of its own. When stocks break 3 or 4 points in almost as many minutes, on news of no importance except to excited imaginations, it is not hard to guess what situation the market may create for itself, if its recent tendencies continue and it should presently be confronted by some really alarming news.

"The steadiness of financial values during the trying period which preceded and followed our declaration of war with Germany was notable testimony to the strength of the country's financial and economic position. But Wall street in its present mood may easily presume too far on this.

"It is right that the thrifty general public should be warned, in emphatic and unmistakable language, of its duty in regard to the war loan and of the absolute necessity of nation-wide subscription by small investors, and of the very large national interests that are at stake in the complete success of the operations. It is neither here nor there that many of the newspapers and individuals who are now professing alarm at the prospects of the loan, are the very hopeful people who a few weeks ago were crying out that the $20,000,000,000 would be three times over-subscribed within a fortnight.

Loan Must Be Placed.

"The real matter of importance is that the loan shall not only be placed, but that it shall be rightly placed. That means that it ought not to be taken to a large extent by banks, on the basis of their own funds; and it means, on the other hand, that it ought not to be taken even in the case of small subscribers through borrowed money, which they do not see their way clear to repay at an early date.

"The one process pushed too far would tie up the credit facilities both of banks and of the Federal reserve at the moment when their free availability was most essential; the other would not only produce a similar result, but would gravely prejudice the chances of any subsequent war loan.

"What we are witnessing in the present 'loan campaign,' is the process of educating the public. Ours is a public which has heretofore been exceedingly unthrifty in its abundant savings, and which, because the 'circulation privilege' from 1863 to 1913, made the national banks almost the only bidders for United States loans, has lost the habit of investing in Government bonds like the thrifty European citizen. The lesson will be learned, and the learning of it will tap the largest resources of any people in the world. But it will have to be taught unremittingly."

Sugar Market.

NEW YORK, June 2.—There was only a moderate trade in sugar futures today, and transactions were principally in the form of evening up for over Sunday. Fluctuations were very narrow and closing prices were 1 point lower to 1 point net higher; July, 5.07c; Sept., 5.17c; Dec., 5.01c; Jan., 4.77c. Sales, 4150 tons. Raw sugar quiet; molasses, 5.01c; centrifugal, 5.89c; refined, steady; fine granulated, 7.50@8c.

COTTON 21 TO 26 POINTS LOWER IN EASTERN TRADE

NEW YORK, June 2.—There was a renewal of the bull movement in the cotton market today. The opening was 5 to 10 points lower under realizing and there may also have been some scattered selling in anticipation of a week-end reaction after the big advances of yesterday. Such operations were encouraged by reports that it had been possible to buy spots in the South yesterday on a tenderable basis and there appeared to be a few Southern selling orders around the ring.

Offerings, however, were readily absorbed by the demand inspired by yesterday's bullish condition figures and the market made new high records for the season before the end of the first hour. Every delivery on the list sold above the 22-cent level, with July selling at 22.55c and October 22.15c, making an advance of 112 points from the low level of yesterday on the active new crop position.

The market was easy late in the morning, under heavy realizing, with July selling off to 22.17c and October to 21.70c. Sentiment seemed to be unsettled by continued Southern selling, believed to be against actual cotton, and a less favorable view of the Russian situation. The market closed steady, but at the lowest point of the day, at net decline of 21 to 26 points.

Cotton futures closed barely steady. July, 22.17c; October, 21.71c; December, 21.78c; January, 21.83c; March, 22.10c; Spot quiet; middling, 22.70c.

Nothing Succeeds Like Success

The Consensus of Authoritative Opinion Is That the

$2,000,000,000

3½% Liberty Loan

Will Be Far Over-Subscribed.

In our opinion this issue would have been subscribed at a much lower rate of interest. But—

The Government intends that this loan shall be a popular one. It intends that these bonds shall be held from New York to San Francisco, from Canada to the Gulf.

It Is Your Loan—Make It So

We have been asked by Mr. McAdoo, Secretary of the U. S. Treasury, to give over our best efforts to assist in making this Liberty Loan a success.

We would gladly call on you—on everyone interested—and give full particulars—but the time is short. However, our facilities are at your disposal. Telephone, call or write us.

REMEMBER—Subscribing to the Liberty Loan is not only a patriotic duty which you should perform, but the Government has made it a most attractive investment.

These bonds are the safest investment in the world and, considering the safety, they give the highest income return that you can get.

We believe that Liberty Bonds will later sell at a premium. There are only 12 more days to subscribe—and the offerings may be withdrawn before June 15.

Subscribe now—

—A Closing Thought—

The proceeds of this loan, together with the other loans and Government Taxes, are to be SPENT immediately. Before the year is out several billions of dollars are to be put into circulation in this way RIGHT HERE IN THE UNITED STATES.

It is going to mean big business, good wages and industrial progress to an extent that we have never seen.

NOTHING SUCCEEDS LIKE SUCCESS—YOU, DO YOUR PART.

HEAVY RECEIPTS FAIL TO DROP CATTLE MARKET

Prices Finish the Week Firm on Beef Steers; Hogs Are Easier.

Reported for the Post-Dispatch by the National Livestock Commission Co., National Stockyards, Ill.

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last Week.	Week Before.	Last Year.
Cattle	26,500	19,900	23,000
Hogs	40,600	51,600	52,000
Sheep	15,700	10,400	22,000

Cattle receipts last week were the heaviest of the year. Owing to the heavy run the beef steer market at the outset of the week declined 10c to 15c per cwt, but after Monday the proportion of this class was very light, and as a result the market on beef steers closed the week in active condition and fully 10c to 15c higher than the previous week.

Stockers and feeders were barely steady, which might be attributed to the fact that farmers have been busy with their spring work. The rainy weather also had a tendency to keep the demand down to minimum. Good butcher stuff, either cows or yearlings, sold steady, but the general market on canners and common to medium butcher cattle was on the decline and closed 15c to 25c per cwt lower.

Choice to prime beef steers were quoted at $12.50 to $13.75; good to choice, $11.25 to $12.50; medium to good, $10.25 to $11.25; common to medium, $9.25 to $10.25; common off-colored light killing steers, $8.50 to $9.50; good to choice stockers and feeders, $9 to $10.25; medium to good, $8.25 to $9; common to medium, $7.25 to $8.25; good to choice stock cows, $7.50 to $8; common to fair, $7 to $7.50; good to choice light stock heifers, $8.25 to $9; choice to prime fat yearling butcher cattle, $11.75 to $13.25; good to choice, $10.75 to $11.75; medium to good, $10 to $10.75; common to medium, $8.50 to $9.75; choice to fancy heavy beef cows, $10 to $11; good to choice, $9.50 to $10; medium to good, $8.75 to $9.50; cutters, $7.50 to $8; canners, $6.65 to $7; good fat beef bulls, $9.75 to $10.50; heavy sausage bulls, $9 to $9.50, and light sausage bulls, $8 to $8.50.

After the finish of the previous week the hog market gradually weakened, and during the middle of last week the top went down to $15.80. Then receipts became moderate and the market improved, and the trade yesterday closed about 10c lower than a week ago.

Choice hogs, 180 pounds up, sold yesterday at $15.65 to $16; mixed hogs, 160 pounds up, $15.25 to $15.60; 120 to 140 pound pigs, $13.50 to $14.75; lighter pigs, $9 to $13.50; best rough hogs, $14.75 to $15, and half fat rough hogs, $10 to $12.

Sheep—Trade declined heavily, prices closing fully $1.75 to $2.25 per hundred lower than the close of the previous week; good fat sheep selling at $11.50 to $12.25; good fat bucks around $9; good spring lambs, $17.50 to $18; best cull springers, $14 to $15; little common springers, very slow sale, and anywhere from $5 to $9; medium to good clipped lambs, $14.50 to $15. Goats—Fat aged goats, $8 to $9, and choice fat kids, $9 to $10.

Horses and Mules.

Reported for the Post-Dispatch by Campbell & Reid and Western Sales Stable Co., National Stockyards, Ill.

There were few horses available yesterday for the domestic trade. Prices, however, were lower than last week on all grades of Eastern horses.

Runs of the week sum up about like a week ago, but the trade was by no means as good, all grades of Eastern horses showed a decline of $10 to $15 per head, while witnesses to the opening day's auction contended the decline was from $15@25 per head. Heavy draft, extra, $180@260; Eastern chungs, $150@190; Southern horses, good to choice, $135@150; Southern horses, plain, $95@120; Southern horses, common, $69@80.

Offerings of mules included many light-boned mules on the cotton and sugar type, for which there is no outlet at present. Demand is extra good for good big mules and real miners and nothing else is selling to any advantage.

Mules, 16 to 16½ hands, $150@275; 15 to 15½ hands, $140@235; 14 to 14½ hands, $65@150; 13 to 13½ hands, $50@100; plugs, $25@65.

Missouri Wheat Crop Promise Is 15,000,000 Bushels.

COLUMBIA, Mo., June 2.—Prospects for all Missouri crops are fair, with the exception of wheat, says the State crop report issued here today. The wheat yield promises to not exceed 15,000,000 bushels.

It is estimated that 90 per cent of the Missouri corn crop has been planted, but it is certain that some second planting will be necessary, as the stand thus far has been but 86 per cent of normal. This means that about one-fourth of the fields have been planted over. Correspondents estimte an increase of eight per cent over the 1916 crop of 7,368,334 acres. This is two per cent less than the forecast of one month ago, the difference being due to unfavorable weather for plowing and planting.

Correspondents report a slight improvement in wheat during May. The first condition being 57, as compared with 51.9 one month ago; 57.2 one year ago, and 75.7 as the 10-year average. Unless the yield is much better than that of last year and present condition does not hold out much hope, the harvest, with an abandoned acreage of probably 15 per cent, will not exceed 15,000,000 bushels.

The outlook is for a good oat crop, condition on June 1 being 92, as compared with 10-year average of 78.6

While the cutting of hay promises to be rather heavy, the quality will be low. Old meadows are weedy, much of the clover having been killed by the winter drouth. Condition of old clover is 70; new clover, 87; timothy, 82; alfalfa, 90.

All future deliveries of wheat descended to below $2 a bu here early last week, for the first time since the war rules which have restricted trading of late were put into force. Yesterday, however, prices jumped 10c to 11c. Optimistic crop reports and the northward spread of the harvest were the chief bearish factors.

Announcement that foreigners were getting rid of some of their future delivery holdings of wheat counted materially at the outset in accelerating the downward tendency of the market, and so did hopeful estimates of yield and of reduced consumption in the United States this season. The fact was noted, too, that world shipments had become larger, especially from Australia, and there were advices from Great Britain that less apprehension was felt regarding supplies. On the other hand, a big decrease in the United States visible supply total, led only to a temporary bullish influence.

Hedging sales against purchases of new wheat was apparently responsible in a considerable degree for later downward turns in value. Signs of a revival of export buying at liberal premiums, however, counted Friday, as an offset in favor of the bulls.

Likelihood of a record-breaking big crop this season formed the principal reason for lower quotations on corn. Nevertheless, a sharp rally took place Friday and yesterday, based largely on the unseasonably wet, cold weather. Offerings from the country had come to a halt; and there were predictions of a falling off in receipts.

For the most part, oats were governed by the action of corn. Field advice in regard to oats continued promising, and export inquiry was fair.

CHICAGO, June 2.—Assurances that the Government intends to protect growers in marketing their crops and that prices would be guaranted high enough to stimulate production tended today to strengthen the wheat market. Trading, however, was extremely small in volume.

Opening quotations, which ranged 1c higher all around, with July at $1.99 and September at $1.83, were followed by substantial further gains and then a moderate reaction. Later July wheat sold at $2.20 and September at $1.90.

Continued unfavorable weather gave a decided upward swing to corn values. On the advance there was much profit-taking by recent short sellers. After opening ¼c off to 2¼c up, the market made wide gains.

Oats hardened with corn and wheat. Crop reports were hopeful, but export business of late has tempered bearish enthusiasm.

Higher quotations on hogs carried pork and ribs up grade. Closing out of spreads between lard and ribs, however, had a depressing effect on lard.

The fact that virtually no future delivery wheat was offered for sale led subsequently to an extraordinary advance, July soaring to $2.20 and September to $1.90, an overnight respective gain of 22 cents and 17 cents. Later the market dropped back with scarcely a single intervening trade. The close was unsettled, 8 cents to 9 cents net higher, with July at $2.06 and September at $1.91.

No radical lasting setback in corn ensued. The close was nervous 1¼c to 4¼c net advance.

Our Coffee business has shown a large increase from month to month and from year to year. We can only attribute this to the fact that we give better values than can be obtained elsewhere. Our Coffees are selected with the greatest care and with particular reference to their drinking quality. We are still selling at the old price, tho the market has advanced considerable and looks like two cents a pound more will be added for war tax. Now is the time to buy.

Come early and avoid the rush. No delivery cost. No trading stamps. The saving is yours. Positively no goods delivered.

$900,000 PLANNED TO BE SPENT ON ROCK ISLAND TRACT

Truxton Investment Co. Absorbs Last of the Croesus Realty Co.'s Big Holding in Most Attractive Section of the West End.

TO BE IMPROVED WITH APARTMENTS

Plan Is for 10 of These Home Structures, Each Four Stories and Fireproof With Seven-Room Efficiency—Rounds Out Apartments Center.

By BERRY MOORE.

As a site for a group of 10 four-story, fireproof apartment buildings, with French basements, to cost approximately $900,000, the Truxton Investment Co. has purchased 868 feet of ground on the south side of Berlin avenue, west of Belt avenue. The sale was effected by Cornet & Zeibig, in conjunction with the Rosenbaum-Hauschulte Real Estate Co., on behalf of the Croesus Realty Co., of which former Mayor F. H. Kreismann is president.

The transaction is especially noteworthy as marking the complete absorption of what was known as the Rock Island tract, comprising 3100 front feet, and which was purchased by the Croesus Realty Co. only six months ago.

The tract has been resold in lots to suit for high-class apartments, which are now in process of construction and which will form a chain of buildings extending from Union boulevard to De Baliviere avenue, the east and west boundaries of the property. The aggregate cost of these improvements will run well into seven figures.

Elaborate Apartments Planned.

The apartments to be built by the Truxton Investment Co. will comprise five rooms, with seven-room efficiency, and will be perfect in arrangement and in modern appliances. All the buildings will be equipped with passenger as well as freight elevators, and will be provided with garages for the exclusive use of the tenants.

These buildings will be arranged with eight apartments facing Berlin avenue and eight facing Forest Park, on which the tract virtually has a second frontage.

The Truxton operation was financed by Sam Hamburg Jr., through the Rosenbaum-Hauschulte Real Estate Co., which will have the management of the apartments when completed. The buildings will be erected under the supervision of Sam Koplar, vice president of the Sam Koplar Real Estate and Building Co.

Among others who have purchased sites in the Rock Island tract are Louis Cella and the University Investment Co. These interests alone are erecting apartment buildings, the aggregate cost of which will approximate $250,000. As exemplifying the demand for apartments in these sections, many of them have been leased from the plans.

Coup by Croesus Company.

That the Croesus Realty Co. executed a coup in the purchase of the Rock Island tract is evidenced from the avidity with which it has been absorbed by the leading apartment builders of the city.

The Rock Island tract is in the heart of the ultra-fashionable apartment house center of the West End, and is virtually contiguous to Forest Park, which enhances its value immeasurably for improvements of this character.

Another sale through Cornet & Zeibig was that of 15.21 acres lying on the north side of Natural Bridge road, just west of the Brown road and adjoining Lucas place, from S. S. Bass, executor of the Wall estate, to Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Karst. The purchasers will take possession of the property this week.

Cornet & Zeibig also negotiated a sale of 84 acres on Marquette and Pernod avenues, between Watson road and Jamison avenue, from Judge Moses N. Sale to Ray Marshall, as was previously announced in the Post-Dispatch.

Hi Pointe Corners Sold.

A feature of the movement at Hi Pointe was the sale of two corners in the interior of the tract as sites for substantial business blocks.

Chas. De Largy, real estate officer of the Broadway Savings Trust Co., agent for the property, is withholding the identity of the purchasers and the details of the project, pending perfection of the building plans.

The demand for business corners in this subdivision, which promises to be the center of a flourishing community, is noteworthy. More than $50,000 worth of lots in Hi Pointe has already been sold from the plats.

The tract is situated at Clayton and Skinker roads.

SOUTHAMPTON LOT SALES OPEN TODAY

More Than 50 Sites Bought in Advance of Formal Opening of Campaign.

Although the selling campaign under its new ownership and management will not be formerly launched until today, more than 50 lots in Southampton have been disposed of, according to the Olive Terrace Realty Co., the agents.

As was announced in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch, the Twabrig's Realty Co., composed of a coterie of capitalists of which W. C. Ferris is the dominant spirit, has purchased all the unsold lots in Southampton, of the Southampton Realty Co., comprising 30,000 front feet.

While a majority of the purchasers are homeseekers who are taking advantage of the exceptionally low price at which the lots are being offered, not a few are investors who are attracted by the novel profit-sharing plan that is being introduced in their resale.

The number of lots sold would have been even larger, the indications are, but for the rain which hindered inspection of the property.

Among the buyers of Southampton lots during the past week were Q. W. Morrison, Dr. Louie P. Butler, John F. Schopflin, Clarence H. Hughes S. Nicoolls, W. G. Fatherly, Delia B. Roberts, Clemens C. Hausnecht, C. C. Willmore, Mrs. Alice S. Roth, George W. Taylor.

The tract is situatted in southeast St. Louis, at the junction of King's highway and Bancroft avenue, and is reached by the Southampton car line.

SALE OF THREE BEAUTIFUL COUNTRY HOMES REPORTED

Bakewell, Keller and Wilson Residences, All in the Midst of Attractive Acreage Tracts, Pass to New Owners—Tentative Offers for Another.

Sales of homes in St. Louis County on the Clayton road and also in the vicinity of the Midland Valley Golf Club and of Normandy, formed a feature of the week's realty movement in the suburban district.

Most notable of these transactions included the home of Paul Bakewell Jr., attorney; James T. Keller, treasurer of the Pulitzer Publishing Co., and Wilson Turner, capitalist, all of which were disposed of through Cornet & Zeibig.

The Bakewell home, which is on the north side of Clayton road, near the Price road, was purchased by Frenn W. Nulsen. This consists of a 14-room, hot-water-heated bungalow, equipped with three baths and finished throughout in hardwood floors. The place includes seven acres, made attractive with trees and shrubbery. There is also a chicken run and a garage.

The consideration was not made public, but it is understood that Nulsen obtained the property at a real bargain. The Bakewells bought the big bungalow about five years ago, but within a short while they decided to return to the city to live.

Joseph W. Jamison, general attorney for the M., K. & T., Railroad, was the purchaser of the home of James T. Keller, which is pronounced one of the most attractive in St. Louis County. It is opposite the Midland Valley Golf Club and "Wildewood," the country home of Louis A. Cella, realty operator and theatrical magnate.

The Keller house comprises 11 rooms and is modern throughout. It is in the midst of six acres of ground, beautifully landscaped and embellished with trees, shrubs and flowers. Auxiliary buildings on the premises include a garage, a stable and inclosed greenhouse supplemented with hotbeds. Jamison will remove to his new home the latter part of the month.

The Pelham home, comprising 15 rooms, besides several bathrooms, and owned by the Wilson Turner heirs, was purchased by Ernest Richardson, vice president of the Boyd Furnishing Goods Co., a client of Cornet & Zeibig. It is on the Florissant road, near Normandy. There are 16 acres in this tract, which is beautifully adorned with fruit and shade trees and shrubbery, and is considered one of the handsomest homes on the Florissant road. The location is near Belle Rive Country Club.

Several tentative offers have been submitted for the country home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarkson Carpenter, which adjoins the Turner place and which has recently been offered for sale. This is one of the most attractive in this district. It comprises 25 acres.

93 ACRES IN ZEPHYR HILLS SUBDIVISION ON SALE

Twenty Homes Under Construction and Work Has Begun on Street Car Extension.

Ninety-three acres of the most desirable home building sites in the suburbs of St. Louis are being placed on sale by the Reasor Brown Realty Co. This beautiful, well drained, highly desirable section is known as Zephyr Hills Subdivision, lying just west of the city limits, between Maplewood and Richmond Heights, reached by the Manchester car line.

The United Railways Co. is now grading through this subdivision preparatory to laying their tracks for the extension of the Hamilton car line, which they expect to have in operation within the next 60 days.

Upward of 20 homes are now being built in this addition. The new Maplewood High School is located in this addition and two churches—the German Luthern Church of Maplewood and the Methodist Church—have both purchased grounds here and are havingf plans prepared for the erection of two thoroughly modern buildings.

NORTH ST. LOUIS HEIGHTS LOTS BEING SOLD RAPIDLY

Buyers in Nearly Every Instance Said to Have Planned Early Improvement.

North St. Louis Heights was the center of realty activity in Northwest St. Louis. Eight lots were disposed of in that subdivision during the week, to persons who will, it is said, erect homes.

The most attractive bungalows in that section of the city are being erected in North St. Louis Heights. Edward F. H. Wenneker, sales manager of the Blanke-Wenneker Candy Co., is erecting seven bungalows there which are being offered for sale through the Broadway Savings Trust Co. The ground is high and beautifully terraced. It fronts King's highway, Queens, Ruskin and Florissant avenues. The Bellefontaine or Union avenue cars provide splendid transportation facilities.

INVESTIGATION INTO RACE RIOTING IN EAST ST. LOUIS

Committee of Illinois Defense Council Named to Inquire Into Influx of Negroes Into City.

An investigation will be started this week by a committee appointed by the Illinois State Council of Defense into labor conditions and the influx of negroes in East St. Louis, which resulted last week in race rioting. The committee, appointed yesterday in Chicago, is composed of J. H. Walker, acting president of the Illinois Federation of Labor; John H. Harrison, editor of the Danville Commercial News, and Dr. Frank Billings of Chicago.

Six militia companies are still on duty. Mayor Mollman announced that the militia probably will be withdrawn Wednesday. They will be held until then to assist the authorities on registration day. Saloons were open last night.

Catlin Leases Pierce Home.

Albert T. Terry & Co. have leased, for Clay A. Pierce, president of the Pierce Oil Corporation, his home, 23 Kingsbury place, for two years, beginning next fall, to Theron E. Catlin.

SITE PURCHASED FOR NEW WEST END APARMENT HOUSE

Six-Family Building Will Be Erected at Corner of Buckingham Court and North Court.

As a site for a six-family apartment house, the Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co. has sold to the Hasgall Realty and Investment Co., of which Sigmund Hasgall is president, the lot at the northwest corner of Buckingham Court and North Court, 215x99 feet. This lot, which is in the subdivision platted about a year ago by the Parkway Apartments Co., is bounded by Euclid, King's highway, West Pine and Laclede.

The corner 100 feet will be improved. Each apartment will have six extra large rooms with two baths, sleeping and sun porches and garages. The building when completed will be under the management of the Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co.

The western 115 feet of the site will be placed on the market by the Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co. for resale. The property was purchased from the Parkway Apartments Co. and Mrs. Elizabeth S. Bailey, who were represented in the transaction by Messrs. William & Bland. The cost of the building and the lot will represent a total investment of about $55,000.

LEASE OF ROE BUILDING TO MILFORD HOTEL CO. CLOSED

Contract Awarded for Converting the Structure to New Use—Ready by Oct. 1.

The Milford Hotel Co., which operates the Brevort and Milford Hotels, has leased the Roe Building, at Broadway and Pine streets, for 25 years.

The building is fireproof throughout, with large marble corridors, and will make an ideal hotel. The work of conversion will be started at once and the contractor expects to complete it by Oct. 1.

After alterations are completed, the cost of which will be approximately $100,000, the hotel will have about 200 rooms, each equipped with bath and showers, hot and cold water, telephone and all conveniences.

In addition to the alteration in connection with the hotel, the ground floor of this building is being divided into smaller stores. Each store will be equipped with a modern front and will have access to the lobby of the hotel.

The contract for the construction has been awarded to Harry Horowitz, with offices at 521 Boatmen's Bank Building. Kennerly & Stiegmeyer of 505 Benoist Building, were the architects.

Isaac A. Hedges, represents the Roe estate in these negotiations.

MOTION PICTURE FIRM TO PUT IN A BRANCH HERE

Goldwin Corporation Leases Second Floor of Building at 3312 Lindell Boulevard.

The Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co. has closed a lease whereby the Goldwin Picture Corporation of New York establishes a branch in St. Louis. The lease, of which Mrs. Daisy G. Cornwell and Miss Maude S. Walker are the lessors, includes the entire second floor of the building known as 3312 Lindell boulevard, in the Plaza block.

St. Louis was selected as a distributing center for the West and Southwest districts by the Goldwin corporation. Floyd Lewis, formerly connected with the Triangle Film Co., will be the local branch manager for the Goldwin company. A fireproof film vault and other improvements will be installed in the premises and it will be occupied by the new lessee on July 1.

Garment Company Expands.

Isadore Doischman, representing the Doischman Garment Co. and the Queen Skirt Co., has closed a long-term lease for the fourth floor of the Washington building, 1015-1019 Washington avenue, owned by the Lindell Real Estate Co. Arthur W. Rehfeldt secretary of the Lindell Real Estate Co., negotiated the lease.

MECKEL REALTY CO. MOVES.

The Meckel Realty Investment Co. has removed from suite 1401-3 Federal Reserve Bank Building to 623-24, same building.

WEEK'S SALES IN RIVERVIEW GARDEN EXCEED $16,000

Early Demand for Building Sites Centers Upon Those Overlooking River.

Sikking and Beckwith of 809 Chestnut street, who started their newspaper advertising at the end of last week, report that, in spite of unpleasant weather, their sales in Riverview Gardens amounted to more than $16,000.

The rush seems to be on the front tracts overlooking the river, accounted for the fact that Riverview Gardens is th elast piece of river frontage available for residence purposes.

Besides the sales recorded, many men of prominence, especially members of the Riverview Club, have spoken for sites along Riverview drive.

Development wrok was hampered severely by the rain, but road building has proceeded far enough to show practically all of the platted part.

The tract is in demand for home sites because it offers the exceptional residential combination of a country home in the city. Residents will have all city conveniences, and at the same time ample space for comfortable living and the best facilities for the easy-growing of vegetables.

The tract is only 45 minutes from the heart of town by street car, and 20 minutes by automobile. It is understood that the city proposes to resurface north Broadway from Riverview drive down to the city proper with asphalt in the near future.

Riverview Gardens embraces 255 acres, comprising the large and beautiful Destrahan property, which was acquired recently by the present syndicate at war prices. There is, it is claimed, no home site in the St. Louis metropolitan district that compares with it. Prices of the property are low, and values are believed to be sure to increase.

100 REALTY MEN OF ST. LOUIS EXPECTED TO ATTEND MEETING

Program of Milwaukee Convention to Deal With Vital Interest Questions.

One hundred members of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange are expected to attend the tenth annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, which will be held in Milwaukee, Wis., July 27-27. The delegation will be in charge of William E. Caulfield, chairman of the Convention Committee. The convention will consider business methods and conditions in conferences beginning at 8:30 a. m., and concluding at 5:00 p. m., with an hour and a half for luncheon.

The past two or three years has brought a decided change in the character of these conventions. Formerly, men either spoke or read papers on matters pertaining to real estate. Every subject on the Milwaukee program will be a discussion of the modern methods of service and how best to handle the vast interest to get the best results. Leaders are being selected for the discussions, chosen because of peculiar fitness. It might, in fact, be termed an annual conference than a convention. Opportunity will be given to study Milwaukee from an industrial and commercial angle, as well as from the development of housing.

The accessibility of Milwaukee will, it is believed, assure a large attendance of realty interests.

LOT AND BUNGALOW SALES IN COUNTY AND CITY ACTIVE

Oakland Terrace and Kathmar Acres Centers of Interest Among Home Builders.

Sales of lots and of bungalows in city and country were a feature of the week in realty. Included are lots in Oakland Terrace, a new and high-class subdivision lying on the south side of Forest Park, a few blocks west of Forest Park Highlands. All the purchasers are said to have plans for erecting bungalows, dwellings or flats.

R. Weissenborn and O. Kubatzky have just completed a series of bungalows in this addition which are exciting attention.

About two-thirds of the lots in this addition, which was laid out by the Hemmelman-Spackler Real Estate Co., have been sold, and most of them have been improved.

Ten tracts were disposed of at Kathmar Acres during the week. This land is west of Ramona, on the Florissant division of the Kirkwood-Ferguson line. It is available for both home and truck purposes.

Many substantial homes are being erected in Kathmar Acres, which is being sold by John J. Dowling, formerly secretary of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange.

Albert Wenzlich is building a group of attractive bungalows on Carton avenue, in Maplewood. These contain six rooms and reception hall, finished in hardwood and have tile baths and large fireplaces.

Thirty-eight have been sold out of 40 bungalows erected in the 4200 block of Lafayette avenue, by the Sam Koplar Real Estate and Building Co. These homes comprise six rooms and have sleeping porches.

Close-in Factory and Warehouse Sites on the Belt Line
Speculative Property at Eastern End of the Municipally Owned
NEW FREE BRIDGE
Opposite Business Heart of St. Louis

The completion of the FREE BRIDGE, connecting St. Louis and East St. Louis, will develop a great industrial and residential center at the east end of the Bridge, in the heart of East St. Louis, and opposite the Business Center of St. Louis.

A syndicate has owned about 900 lots at the east end of the bridge for a number of years. To settle estates and divide interests, a sale must be made at this time, just before the bridge is completed, and on the eve of the great Railroad and Industrial development which the great enterprise makes certain.

THE PROPERTY MUST BE SOLD. Nearly 900 lots, some residence sites, some railroad sites, factory and warehouse sites, switching and terminal property—all must go under the hammer, regardless of price. Never was property of greater speculative attraction forced upon the market: An opportunity for home buyers and speculators.

It takes no vision or foresight to see that this property will become very valuable.

East St. Louis Is the "Pittsburgh of the West"

Abundance of cheap fuel, cheap water and incomparable transportation facilities, liberal treatment of commercial enterprises, low land values, has made East St. Louis grow by leaps and bounds until it has become a great Industrial City and is rapidly growing.

It has become the second largest city in Illinois and steadily increasing in population and importance. Four bridges over the Mississippi unite the cities of St. Louis and East St. Louis, forming one great city or community comprising the heart of the "St. Louis Commercial Zone."

A large area of this section is adapted to use for homes of moderate cost. You can buy a lot in this section and build a moderate home to live in, or put up a building to rent, and be assured of large returns on your investment. On account of the numerous factories, railroad yards and offices close by, employing many thousands of men and women, and the new factories now being erected, houses are in great demand these people want to live near their work. Houses command big rents. Get in on ground floor. Buy now at low prices, sell later at big prices. This ground is going to be needed sooner or later by the factories, warehouses and railroads. It has great speculative possibilities. You can be safe yet make a speculation.

The low prices at which the ground can be purchased today, leaves a wide margin for future profit.

The property must be sold—either for high prices or low. Sacrifices will be made, bargains will be bought.

Auction will begin on the premises promptly at 10 o'clock A. M., rain or shine. Shelter will be provided if it rains.

WHEAT NOT ESSENTIAL IN EGG-LAYING RATION

Results Obtained on Federal Experiment Station With Corn, Oats and Beef Scraps.

With wheat so high, poultrymen will be interested to learn that on the U. S. Department of Agriculture experiment farm excellent egg-laying results were obtained with a wheatless ration. Thirty Leghorn pullets to which this ration has been fed for one and one-half years produced an average of 147.3 eggs per hen for the pullet year. This compares favorably with egg yields obtained on other rations containing wheat and therefore more expensive. This pen, moreover, during the first 16 weeks of its second year, averaged 28.5 eggs per hen, 17.5 eggs being produced in March.

The same wheatless ration has been fed to a pen of Buff Orpington pullets, which laid 53 eggs per hen in 20 weeks, and hold the highest egg record of any of the large feeding pens of pullets at the farm this year. Two other pens, however, are less than one egg per hen behind this pen.

The ration used was as follows: Scratch mixture, two pounds cracked corn and one pound oats. Dry mash, three pounds corn meal and one pound beef scrap.

The mixture was fed sparingly so that the hens ate about equal parts of it and of the dry mash. The total grain consumption of feed for the year was 52 pounds, of which 26 pounds was scratch mixture. Throughout the year it took 4.6 pounds of feed to produce a dozen eggs. Another mash, which is slightly cheaper than this one, is made of 4 per cent each bran and middlings, 26 per cent beef scrap, and 66 per cent cornmeal.

If the wheat is omitted from the ration it is very essential to feed a considerable proportion of beef scrap in the mash, but with present prices beef scrap is one of the cheapest poultry feeds, considering its high protein content.

These experiments, the specialists say, prove that wheat is not essential in an egg-laying ration and that excellent results can be obtained by using corn and oats as a scratch mixture, provided this is fed with a good mash containing 25 per cent beef scrap.

Preserve Eggs for Winter Use

One-half of the yearly egg crop is produced in March, April, May and June. More eggs are produced then are consumed. Egg dealers put this surplus into storage and sell when production is light. H. L. Kempster of the Missouri College of Agriculture suggests that the consumer do likewise and store enough for his own use.

Cold storage is the practical commercial way to preserve eggs, but for home use other satisfactory methods can be employed. One of the most common is the "water glass" method. Water glass, or sodium silicate is a syrupy liquid which can be purchased at drug stores. Mix one gallon of this with nine gallons of water which has been previously boiled. This solution should be placed in some container, such as a stone crock or jar. The eggs can then be put in the solution and used when desired. They should be stored in a room which is cool and in which the air is fresh and sweet. The jars should be covered to keep the solution clear, and inspected occasionally to see that evaporation has not exposed the eggs. There should be three inches of solution over the top of the eggs.

In selecting eggs too great care cannot be exercised. Only clean, unwashed, fresh, strong-shelled eggs should be used. Infertile eggs are better than those from a flock where male birds are present. If possible, the eggs should be stored the day they are laid. If this is impossible they should be candled and those which show effects of heat, incubation or which have large air cells should be discarded. Spring laid eggs are better in quality and are less likely to be bad than those produced in summer. One gallon of water glass will make enough solution for 50 dozen eggs.

Another method of preserving eggs is to coat them with a commercial egg preservative. Such preparations close the pores of the egg so that air and germs of decay are excluded and evaporation is prevented.

The cost of these preservatives is about one cent a dozen. If such eggs are sold, they must be offered as preserved eggs.

POULTRY BREEDERS' MEETING

The meeting of the St. Louis Poultry Breeders' Association called for Monday evening, June 4, has been postponed one week on account of the Ad Men's convention.

This meeting will be especially attractive on account of the reception of all the new members, as each one of the 30 members agreed to get one new member by June 4. The prize list for the coming show will be arranged.

JAS. J. LONG, Secretary.

FLYING STEEL KILLS WORKMAN

Pierces Jugular Vein of Car Repairer at Woodriver, Ill.

Peter Ewen, 41 years old, a car repairer, was killed at Woodriver, Ill., yesterday when a small piece of steel struck him on the neck, severing the jugular vein.

Ewen and William Werner were repairing a tank car. Werner was holding a chisel to cut rivets. Ewen was striking it with a sledge hammer. When a piece of steel struck Ewen on the neck he bled to death before a doctor could reach him.

POULTRY PROBLEMS SOLVED

Feed for Ducks.

I will have some Indian runner ducks to hatch in a week and would like to know what kind of feed to start them on, also whether to feed wet or dry. I intend to keep my ducks penned always and to sell them as soon as they are fit for table use. Therefore I would like to know what feed will fit them the quickest. How long does it take for an Indian Runner duck to become fit to sell? Are young ducks subject to lice the same as chicks?—Mrs. H. B., St. Louis, Mo.

Fattening feeds for ducklings will give best results if moistened to a crumbly stage with milk preferably, or with water if milk is not available. A good fattening ration for the first week is equal parts corn meal, middlings and bran, mixed and fed crumbly. Provide fine grit and plenty of water, and also some form of green, succulent feed if not on free range where they may get grass, etc. Lettuce and the various garden greens are good for this purpose. Stale bread and crackers moistened with milk or water also are good. The second week some form of meat should be fed, as meat or beef scraps. Start with 10 or 15 per cent of the whole ration and increase slightly in the next two or three weeks. As the ducklings grow older also increase the corn meal proportionately and decrease the middlings, leaving the bran in about the same proportion as at the start. The feeder should be careful not to leave feed in the vessels after the ducks have had enough. Feed several times daily and give just as much as they will clean up each time. Water must be changed frequently to keep it fresh and sanitary. They use large quantities of it and do a great amount of puddling, which soon contaminates the water. If fed carefully and well, your ducks should reach marketable condition at about 10 weeks, when they probably will average four pounds each. If you are engaged in the business merely for meat production, you would have better success with the Pekin ducks. They will put on weight more rapidly than the Runners, and also stand confinement better. The Runners are the best layers, of course. The ordinary poultry parasites do not trouble ducks.

Blood Spot on Eggs.

I have 24 hens and have been getting from 15 to 20 eggs a day for the last four months. For the last month most of the eggs have had a little bloody spot on them. Can you tell me what to do for them and what causes this? The birds are in very close quarters.—B. N.

It is not quite clear to me whether your eggs have blood on the outside of the shell, or whether there are spots of blood inside. If on the shell it would be caused by a rupture or some injury in the egg passage. This is nothing serious and will soon pass away. The fact that so many of the eggs are affected leads me to believe that the blood is inside the egg. This condition is found where the egg organs are not in normal condition, due to overfeeding of fattening foods, or unbalanced rations, or to some other abnormality caused by improper feeding. The fact that you have the flock in close quarters at this time of year leads me to believe that this is the trouble with your birds. The only cure, of course, is to remove the cause. If the flock can't be turned on open range containing grass, try giving them large quantities of green feed, such as lettuce, lawn clippings, etc.

Poultry House.

Could you furnish me with a sketch or measurements of a poultry house for about three dozen birds through the Post-Dispatch poultry columns?—W. A. S., East St. Louis, Ill.

You should build your poultry house large enough to allow at least 3 to 4 feet of floor space for each bird. For the size of flock you expect to have our suggestion in the main would be a house about 7 by 18 feet in ground dimensions, built east and west, and having a shed roof with the high side to the south. Have the north wall perfectly tight, and 4 to 5 feet high, while the south wall may be 7 or 8 feet high. Have the dropping board along the north wall, hinged, or fastened otherwise to make it readily movable. Place roosts a few inches above this with ends resting on small "sawhorses" or on wall cleats. By having the nest boxes directly beneath and at the front edge of the dropping board, or else hung on the side walls, you have your entire floor space free for scratching. Drink and feed vessels for winter use also may be hung to the walls. Leave most of the south side open to be covered with poultry netting. It will pay you to write the Extension Department of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association, Chicago, for their bulletin on poultry house plans. The poultry department at the State Experiment Station, Mountain Grove, Mo., or the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington, D. C., also have some excellent bulletins on this subject. All may be had for the asking.

Blackhead in Turkeys.

Please let me know what is the matter with my young turkeys. They are well and healthy until 6 weeks old, then sicken and die in a couple of hours. I opened one and its liver was full of spots, yellowish in color. I feed lettuce, onion tops, wheat and chick feed. Mrs. J. J. H., Electric, Tex.

These turkeys are undoubtedly affected with the disease known as "blackhead." The yellowish spots on the liver, perhaps the most characteristic symptom, indicates this ailment. It is a contagious disease caused by an organism known scientifically as amoeba meleagridis, and is most common in young turkeys ranging from 2 to 12 or 15 weeks old. It is unusual for this sickness to prove fatal inside of a few hours, but your turkeys may have been ailing before you noticed the trouble. It is a most difficult disease to handle, and in some localities turkey raising has been abandoned on account of it. D. Salmon of the United States Department of Agriculture, advises the use of 5 grains of sulphur with 1 grain sulphite of iron, as a remedy. Also 1 grain each of benzonapthol and salicylate of bismuth, or a third preparation made of 1 grain each of sulphate of iron and salicylate of soda. Give a dose of 10 to 35 grains of Epsom salts before and after either of these remedies are given. A teaspoonful of castor oil answers the same purpose. After suggesting these remedies Dr. Salmon states that after all the only real hope of success lies in preventing infections. The same measures should be employed as with any other dangerous contagious disease—isolation or killing and burning of infected birds, thorough disinfecting of quarters, etc. Wiping eggs for hatching with a cloth moistened with 80 or 90 per cent alcohol is advised to prevent infection of young stock in that way.

Leg Weakness.

I would like to know what to do for my chicks, 2 months old and under. They are beginning to get weak in the legs and can't walk. I have them in a nice, clean shed, with two inches of sand and some straw on a granitoid rat-proof floor, and the board floor of the brooder where they roost at night. I am letting them run out in the yard in the daytime. —B. H. S., St. Louis, Mo.

The most common cause of leg weakness in chicks is a lack of mineral, bone-making feed in the ration. Cold, damp quarters, causing a sort of rheumatism, will also give them leg weakness sometimes. If you can turn these chicks out on grass, or give them plenty of green lettuce, lawn clippings, milk in any form and possibly a little beef scrap or other meat food, you will overcome the trouble without a doubt.

MOST HUMANE TYPE OF MUZZLE FOR DOGS

Coat of Animal Determines Kind of Collar to Be Used—Chains Better Than Leather.

Dogs would much prefer to do without collars and muzzles, and dog owners would like to dispense with them, too, but they are a necessary evil, especially in the cities. However, they need not be on the dogs all of the time, and for the sake of the dog they should be kept off as much as possible.

The best type of muzzles to use is the kind that will permit the dog to lap water freely, but will still keep him from biting. This muzzle is considered best because it is most humane, and right here it should be said that whatever practice or treatment is most humane is best for the dog in the long run. A great deal of abuse is practiced on dogs in the belief that it is necessary when there is absolutely no good reason for it.

Two types of collars, round and flat, are used. The round collars are preferred for dogs with rough coats that stand out around the neck. A round collar will not destroy the coat at that point as will a flat one. The flat collar is used on the short-coated breeds. Chains are preferred to leather straps for ties, as they cannot be bitten in two. The chain should be a light one, of course, and it should have two or three swivels in it, with a spring snap at each.

A puppy or young dog should never be chained or tied, as it seems to break their spirit and spoils them for training

Speculation in Eggs Strongly Suspected

There are evidences that more eggs have gone into storage this spring than ever before. A so-called scarcity of eggs, with high prices for the season, indicates this.

There may be some good features about this heavy storing of eggs from the point of view of the public, but one is quite suspicious that there is a pretty strong desire on the part of certain speculators to profit at the public's expense next winter. Motives other than those inspired by patriotism are suspected.

Anything like an effort to produce an artificial scarcity or corner, resulting in inflated prices for food products, does not add to the economic strength of a nation and certainly does not help a nation win a war. Price-fixing by the Government is not desirable if it can be avoided, but there are worse evils. High prices for eggs to consumers this spring in the large cities, at a time when an unusual supply is reported from many heavy egg-producing sections does not put the city purchaser in an altogether happy frame of mind. He does not blame the producer, but he suspects that certain powerful influences are to blame.

EXECUTRIX'S SALE OF STOCK OF HARDWARE
By Order of the County Court of Macoupin County, Ill.

A good, clean, merchantable $[illegible] stock of hardware will be sold Saturday, June 9th, 1917, at 2 o'clock p. m. The bids are to be sealed, and each bid is to be accompanied with a certified check for 10% of the bid. All bids will be deposited with the First National Bank, Mount Olive, Ill., not later than 2 o'clock p. m. of that date. The right is reserved to reject any or all bids.

The stock was owned by Louis Simmering, who conducted the business successfully for many years at Mount Olive, Ill. The owner died recently, and that is the reason the stock is being sold in order to settle up the estate. It is an established business, a good stock and fine opportunity for anybody desiring to enter into the hardware business. This is a very attractive proposition. Prospective purchasers are invited to call at the store and examine the stock. Address all communications to KATIE SIMMERING, Executrix, Mount Olive, Ill.

SAYS ST. LOUIS IS LACKING IN CIVIC CONSCIOUSNESS

Chairman Gundlach of Civic Association Committee, Explains Movement Begun Last Week.

Civic co-operation, which will become permanent and give St. Louis a higher position in that respect, is the purpose of the movement begun last week by the General Arrangements Committee of the American Civic Association. The Chamber of Commerce, Civic League, Central Civic Council, Conference of Federations, Women's Central Committee for Food Conservation, Federation of Women's Clubs, Women's Council, the Local Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, Manufacturers' Association, Show-You Club, and many other commercial and civic organizations are co-operating in the movement.

The movement has been under contemplation for some time, and the coming convention of the American Civic Association furnishes a basis for the continuation of the work.

Gundlach Explains Movement.

"St. Louis has not awakened to the civic consciousness which it should have," declared Chairman Gundlach, of the committee, in explaining the movement. "We should have a more effective method of working together for civic good. There is need for a greater interest in problems which make for the good of the community. In Kansas City at the time of the recent conference on city planning, this spirit was quite manifest, and if the American Civic Association Convention can do as much for St. Louis, that alone will have justified its coming."

Gundlach is president of the Pageant Association and former President of the Civic League.

The conference of Mayors of the towns on the east side of the river is one of the features planned in conjunction with the convention. The civic and commercial organizations of that section also will be called upon to co-operate in a movement for the creation of Mounds Park, which would lead to the preservation of the historic Indian mounds. In this way a closer union also will be effected, it is hoped, in a civic sense, between the organizations of St. Louis and those of the Illinois towns.

Mrs. Moore Heads Committee.

Mrs. Phillip N. Moore has been appointed chairman of the local Program Committee for the convention.

In the campaign for civic co-operation, which is to extend up to the convention and beyond that time, the various local federations are to hold separate meetings and report their progress at a general conference. The Civic League office is the executive office for the General Committee.

What One $50 Bond Will Do for Men in Field for America

NEW YORK, June 2.

THE Liberty Loan Committee here issued a table of figures today showing what the buying of one $50 bond means to the Government. In terms of arms and equipment, it finances the purchase of 1000 rounds of ammunition, or 3 standard rifles, 16 shelter tents for 32 men, 6 woolen overcoats or any one of a number of other military necessities.

In terms of food, it will finance the purchase of 1000 pounds of flour, 1250 pounds of bread, 400 pounds of fresh beef or 120 pounds of butter.

ANTI-CONSCRIPTIONISTS LAUNCH PROPAGANDA IN THIS CITY

Advertise in Newspapers Urging Objectors to Law to Register Under Protest.

Organized anti-conscriptionists, who have been conducting their propaganda in many cities for several weeks, made their first appearance here yesterday, when they placed in newspapers advertisements protesting against conscription.

The organization is called "the St. Louis Committee for the Maintenance of Constitutional Rights." It has a room in the Fraternal Building, Eleventh street and Franklin avenue.

Carl Brannin of Kansas City, who came to St. Louis ten days ago to serve as temporary secretary of the committee, was found last night at the Astor Hotel. He stated that other members of the local committee were Mrs. Ella Reeve Bloor, a Socialist lecturer known as "Mother Bloor;" Dr. L. Caplan, a physician in the Carleton building, and Hans Toensfeldt, an architect. These three could not be reached for statements.

Brannin declared the committee advised all persons within the conscription age to register Tuesday, but urged them to insist that their objections to conscription and their claims for exemption be entered upon their registration cards. As proper reasons he suggested that they contend the law was unconstitutional; that it is against the religious convictions of the applicant for registration, and that it is against his moral convictions to kill a human being under any circumstances.

The committee's newspaper advertisements contain an appeal for funds Brannin declared the Socialist party would distribute the committee's circulars throughout St. Louis. All funds that the committee had obtained he added, were from members of the local branch of the American Union Against Militarism, which has headquarters in Washington. Roger N. Baldwin, until recently secretary of the Civic League, is directing this organization.

A volume of business amounting to nearly a half-million dollars, within four months, brought not riches, but heavy loss, to James S. Hyde of the Hyde Seed Farms, whose office is at 708 Rialto Building. As a result of complaints from customers whose orders for seed potatoes he was unable to handle to their satisfaction, Hyde was charged in a Federal warrant, issued yesterday, with using the mails to defraud.

The postoffice inspector who worked on the case reported that Hyde, in his opinion, had not intended to defraud anyone, but that the advance in the price of seed potatoes, which Hyde had not foreseen, had caused his troubles.

This was also Hyde's version. He has been in the seed business at Pattonsburg, Mo., and last January he opened a St. Louis office and warehouse. He issued 200,000 catalogues late in 1916 and quoted a price for seed potatoes which soon turned out to be lower than he could afford to give, after the supply grown on his own farm was exhausted.

He said his business aggregated nearly $500,000, and that all orders except about $10,000 worth were filled. It is charged in the warrant that checks, which Hyde sent as refunds to certain customers, were rejected by banks because of insufficient funds. Hyde said he intended to remain in business and would meet all obligations.

A Perfect Patch!

Vulcanize Your Inner Tubes
-In 5 Minutes-

Vulcanize a perfect, permanent patch on your inner tube in five minutes. Anywhere, anytime! In the wind, rain or snow. Thousands of motorists doing it with the Shaler 5-Minute Vulcanizer. Over 100,000 sold in 60 days! No cement, gasoline, acid or flame. A combustible disc furnishes the heat. The disc is in a metal container with the rubber patch on the other side. You simply clamp the container over the puncture and light the combustible with a match or lighted cigar or cigarette stub. It creates just the right amount of heat to vulcanize a perfect patch, stronger than the tube itself.

SHALER
5-Minute Vulcanizer

No chance to over-cure. No chance to scorch the tube surrounding the patch.

A clamp, 12 patches and 12 heat units neatly boxed—that's all there is to the complete outfit. Carry it with you right in your tool box. You're always ready to repair a puncture anywhere on the road in five minutes.

You save yourself worry. You save yourself money. You make your tubes last longer. You keep them out of the repair shop.

Why bother any more with makeshift "stuck-on" patches? Why keep on buying new tubes when you can get extra service out of your old tubes by repairing them with a Shaler 5-Minute Vulcanizer.

COMPLETE WITH 12 PATCHES AND HEAT UNITS AT ALL DEALERS $1.50

You can buy additional heat units and patches as you need them at 75 cents per dozen.

A Sensible Car at a Sensible Price

GRANT SIX $875

SUPPOSE you are thinking of paying up to $1200 for a car. For that same amount you can not only buy a GRANT SIX but you will have left more than enough to buy gasoline and tires for three years.

For the average man the GRANT SIX is the sensible car to buy. You get a good looking, sturdy, five-passenger car that will do anything and go anywhere that is possible with a car costing several hundred dollars more.

On November 5, 1916, a stock GRANT SIX made a 1000-mile non-stop trip averaging 21.25 miles to a gallon of gasoline. A GRANT SIX backed up 9½ miles of the steep Mt. Wilson road. Not only in "stunts" like these, but in everyday running, GRANT SIX performance has never been rivaled by a car in its price class.

Compare the GRANT SIX and its performance— that's all we ask

Oakland

The Practical Car for You

Up any hills—over any roads—the Oakland Sensible Six—$945—will take you with ease, comfort and economy.

It's a big car, though it weighs but 2150 pounds, and its long, semi-elliptic springs—51 inches in rear—over-size tires (32x4), long wheelbase, (112 inches), all give the Sensible Six that easy riding quality which wins the enthusiastic praise of owners everywhere.

The valve-in-head motor develops 41 h. p. at 2500 r. p. m.—one horse power for every 53 pounds of car weight. On the hills or in bad going the Sensible Six has more actual power and more proportionate power than any other car of its weight.

This power with light-weight means fuel and tire economy. Average drivers get from 18 to 25 miles per gallon, and from 8000 to 12,000 miles per set of tires.

Q. What keeps him so late?

A. Punctures.

Q. Why blame the tires when, maybe, it's the club or the boys?

A. He's not seeking any alibi in this case—it's just rotten tire luck putting him in bad.

Q. How can you do away with this tire luck you mention?

A. Play a certainty—use Lee Puncture Proof Tires. Of course they're pneumatic—possibly they're a little more expensive than the ordinary tires but you're not bothered with the punctures of ordinary pneumatic tires—they'll go the whole journey and more and let you out of any such rotten tire luck. Jests and Jingles

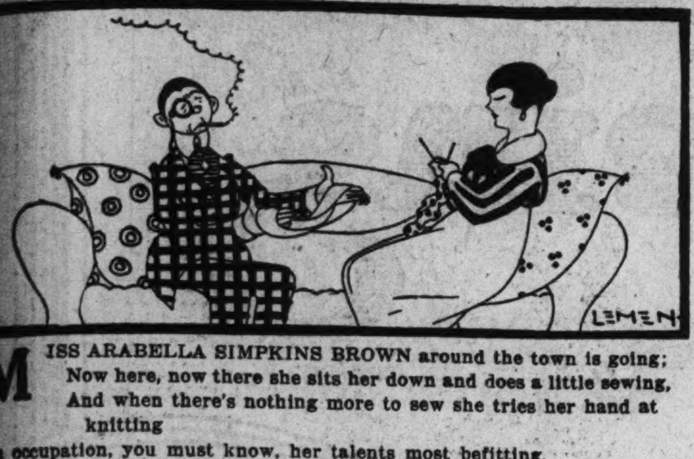
By W. H. JAMES

ARABELLA'S BIT.



MISS ARABELLA SIMPKINS BROWN around the town is going;
Now here, now there she sits her down and does a little sewing,
And when there's nothing more to sew she tries her hand at knitting
An occupation, you must know, her talents most befitting.
She's knitting mitts for brave poilus and sweaters for the Britons
Just anything the soldiers use, from stocking caps to mittens;
There's mufflers for the sailor, too; we're very sure he'll need 'em
While cruising on the ocean blue to fight for fame and freedom.
She loves to do her little bit, the while she's gaily smiling
And so all day she'll sit and knit, the June time hours beguiling.
She never seems to tire at all, or ever think of stopping,
In fact this patriotic call has all the lure of shopping.
Her fingers never seem to tire, but keep right on a-going,
So all the world must fain admire the ardor of her sewing,
Now cheer up, valiant soldier boy, who soon will be in action.
Her every stitch will bring you joy and prove a prime attraction
No bullet then can cause you fright or prove a spirit ruffler,
If you but know the true delight of Arabella's muffler.
And Germans you will blithely trap, as mice are caught by kittens,
For you will surely win the scrap, if you but wear her mittens.

THIS GLORIOUS WEEK.

(Chorus of Advertising Men).

THE shades of night were falling fast
As through St. Louis town there passed
A bunch, who lifted to the skies
A banner with the axiom wise—
ADVERTISE!
We blow the horn and beat the drum;
We'll advertise till Kingdom Come.
If you've got the goods and want to sell it bad
The only way to do it is print an ad.

(Double quartet of bunting dealers).

FINE! Oh, fine!
Here's where we shine;
Convention doings are right in our line.
We hang up streamers and flags and such
To give the city a festive touch,
We're busy decorators and we never shirk;
When you go back home tell 'em WE did the work.
Have a card.
We're trying hard
To follow out that axiom wise—
ADVERTISE!

(Members of Reception Committee).

HERE is where we come to bat,
Each of us wearing a shiny hat.
We give you welcome one and all,
And fervently hope that you will call
At our stores and factories and see for yourselves
The wonderful goods we've got on our shelves.
Our stocks can't be beat for quality or size,
In saying which you'll agree we're wise—
ADVERTISE!

(Grand Opera stars in sextette).

WE pray you, come to Forest Park
Any evening after dark.
We'll give you our artistic word
Such tenor singing you've never heard.
Our soprano can easily reach high Q
And gladly will do that same for YOU.
Remember well each singer's name.
Then go back home and spread our fame
We may be temperamental, but still we're wise—
ADVERTISE!

(Architects and landscape gardeners)

DON'T forget that it was WE Made this open air theater fair to see.
We planned it all and laid it out,
A noble task beyond a doubt.
If you want one like it in your home town,
Tip us the word and we'll come right down.
If it's in our line we'll put you wise—
ADVERTISE!

(Chorus of Ad Writers).

COPY! Copy!
We can turn it out quick;
Short and choppy
With plenty of kick.
You'll get the best service you ever had,
If you'll only let us write your ad.
We'll give it a twist that's bright and wise—
ADVERTISE!

(St. Louis, coming down from his high horse).

SINCE I have listened to all this din,
I've reached the conclusion I'd better get in.
So now my banner I've unfurled
And I'm going to tell the big round world
Just what I've got that's better and best
Than anything from East to West,
I'll blow my horn and beat my drum
And sing my own praises till Kingdom Come.
I may be old, but I'm getting wise—
ADVERTISE!

TRAPPING A MENACE.

HOWDY, Jinks."

"Hello, Binks, where have you been?"

"Very busy."

"On what?"

"My new invention."

"Are you at it, too?"

"Sure I am. I think I've solved it."

"Yes, that's what my brother thought."

"Did he have an invention?"

"Yes."

"Did they try it out?"

"Sure."

"How did it work."

"It wouldn't catch 'em."

"Was it controlled by electricity?"

"No, I think it was compressed air."

"Working in a vacuum?"

"I don't know."

"Maybe it was spring-actuated wireless."

"Yes, I believe it was.

"Probably equipped with resilient shock absorbers."

"Maybe so."

"That's it. They're all covering the same old ground."

"I suppose you have something entirely new."

"Certainly I have."

"And you know more about it than Edison or any of those fellows."

"Much more."

"Say, you've never been to the seashore, have you?"

"No."

"Then what do you know about catching submarines?"

"What's that got to do with it?"

"Isn't your invention to catch submarines?"

"No."

"What then?"

"To catch my neighbor's chickens before they get my new lettuce.

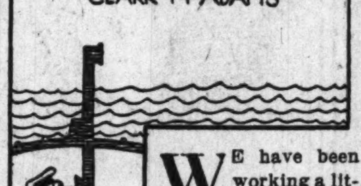
QUITE RIGHT.

Mary had a little roll;
She watched it while it grew.
But with it, for her very soul,
She knew not what to do.

She drew it from the bank one day,
With never frown or sigh,
And we distinctly heard her say.
"A Liberty Bond I'll buy."

A LOOK AROUND

BY CLARK McADAMS



WE have been working a little harder than usual at our psychology this week. We have been trying to make out how a pessimist like Simon Lake could invent anything. One would suppose that his pessimism would at once argue that he couldn't invent anything, and that he wouldn't try it. However, it seems he did invent the even-keel type of submarine, and we will therefore leave the intricacies of the problem to people like Prof. Edgar James Swift of Washington University, whose business it is to continue beyond the point at which the amateur psychologist gives up. All we care to say is that the submarine is not apparently the irresistible weapon Mr. Lake thinks. It seems to be losing ground everywhere except in the Mediterranean, and that is because the defense of the allies against it has not gotten around to the Mediterranean. It will. The submarine is a goner. There has never been another time in history when so many people laid their heads on ice and thought with the coolness of self-preservation as are doing that now with respect to the submarine. After all, it is matter—and this is mind. This is always an interesting contest, but it never lasts very long.

Whoa, Emma Goldman!

JUST because we have been disappointed in Emma Goldman again is no sign we are going to give up trying to say something nice of her that is true. At a time when, as the most conspicous omission from the commission we are sending to Russia, she still took it quietly and sweetly, as if in rebuke to Col. Roosevelt for the way he talked when he was not sent to France, we called attention to Emma's conduct and directed the Colonel's mood to it as a model. Imagine, then, our chagrin to read within a few days that Emma is organizing a league against conscription and expects to get 50,000 young men into it. A non-bombing anarchist such as Emma is probably has demands upon her conscience, to say nothing of her career, of which we are not always conscious. If we read aright the warnings of the Government, jail lies somewhere along the way Emma is traveling if she is indeed organizing that league. However, jail is not to Emma what it is to us. It can be an opportunity.

Greece and the Greeks.

IT has taken a Greek woman to tell us about the Greeks. If we have wondered about them in the present war, then let it be known that the Greeks do not believe in war. They consider it futile. They have had a long career, and have concluded that while war gets them nowhere, the peculiar mental qualities of the Greek are unbeatable. Thus, while Turkey holds Constantinople, it is the Greeks who reign there. They did it in Saloniki. They have found themselves able to do it anywhere in that part of the world. Mental pan-Hellenism is the cue of the Greeks. Who rules physically doesn't much matter. We are told by this woman that there are more Greeks outside of Greece than in it. They constitute a mental empire which has a much stronger hold upon southeast Europe than anything that has ever been devised by force. There are Greeks who sometimes feel they must fight, as many Greeks did in the recent Balkan wars; but that is not the great Greek idea. It is a little difficult to get, but we think we have it. The Greeks, as they are now doing in places like Constantinople, are to dominate a place mentally. Whosoever will may rule, but who is he, after all? He is the policeman.

Our Linguists.

THE requirements of conscription are discovering to us some of our linguists. One St. Louis man, an Austrian by birth, speaks 12 languages. Another, also an Austrian, commands 11. My little Greek friend, Anastasias, who blacks boots down on Olive street, speaks seven languages. He is a native of Macedonia. He knows Greek, Servian, Montenegrin, Turkish, Albanian, French and English. Anastasias has that facility for learning characteristic of Greeks. He attends the public schools in St. Louis, as do most of the Greek boys who have come to this country at tender ages. These are our real linguists, and if culture is to be rated by the number of tongues one speaks, these boys leave nothing of the more or less scholarly quarters in the West End. However, that is not culture. Nobody knows it better than Anastasias. He knows what culture is. It is the Greek's instinct to know. That is the reason why, when the school bell rings through the dark canyons of downtown these summer nights, Anastasias may be seen skedadling for one of the little red schoolhouses provided by the Board of Education.

IT WAS A LOVELY SHOW WASN'T IT?
YES, NOW I'VE GOT TO HITCH UP AND GET ON MY ROUTE.
THE TROUBLE STARTS.
MIKE HEARS A SHOT AND A COMMAND: "HALT!"
WHO ARE YOU?
BAD BILL FROM BADVILLE.
BAD BILL LASSOES HIM AND DRAGS HIM FROM THE WAGON.
IN THE TOILS.
BILL DRAGS MIKE TO A MOUNTAIN PEAK AND TIES HIM TO A BOULDER. "YOU STAY HERE TILL I GET BACK WITH MY GANG."
A BIRD LIGHTS ON THE BOULDER. "GEE, IT'S AN EAGLE."
MIKE TIES A NOTE TO THE EAGLE'S LEG. "NOW YOU TAKE THAT TO MINNIE".
A TERRIBLE FATE
BAD BILL RETURNS WITH HIS GANG—THREE INDIANS WITH BOWS AND ARROWS. "TIE HIM TO A TREE AND SHOOT HIM UP" MIKE IS TIED TO THE TREE.
UGH! I HIT HIS RIGHT EAR FOR TWO BITS.
ALMOST SAVED.
THE INDIAN IS DRAWING HIS BOW. COWBOY CHARLIE DASHES UP ON HIS BRONCHO.
THE INDIANS JUMP OFF THE CLIFF.
BAD BILL LASSOES COWBOY CHARLIE. "AHA! NOW I'VE GOT YOU BOTH."
A FIENDISH PURPOSE.
BAD BILL PILES LEAVES AROUND MIKE AND CHARLIE "NOW WE'LL HAVE A LITTLE BONFIRE"!
HE IS ABOUT TO APPLY THE MATCH WHEN THE EAGLE COMES BACK.
IT PICKS UP BAD BILL AND DROPS HIM IN THE CANYON.
DELIVERANCE AT HAND.
MINNIE DASHES UP WITH SIMON, THE SHERIFF AND HIS POSSE.
I GOT YOUR NOTE ALL RIGHT
SHE IS ABOUT TO UNTIE HIM, WHEN—THE BOSS POKES MIKE IN THE RIBS. "YOU'RE FIRED FOR SLEEPING IN YOUR WAGON!"
AFTER THE SHOW.

A $20,000 MAN

Sales, Advertising and Merchandising Executive

OPPORTUNITY for expansion exists in some big business today that is ready for the right man to step in, get a clear grasp of WHY and HOW of its selling problems, speed up its marketing machinery and sales organization to maximum efficiency.

Your business, your product and your service may be the best of their kind in the world, yet the big story back of them may never have been applied in a way to inspire your salesman, secure the effective co-operation of dealers, create more sales among present users and win new markets at minimum cost.

This man is now engaged with one of the largest businesses of its kind in America, where this broad training and knowledge of the fundamental principles upon which successful business is built, and his capacity to apply those principles quickly and exactly, is being utilized in the most important function of business—marketing its product and service with the greatest economy.

I KNOW marketing in all its manifold phases of selling, distributing and advertising. I KNOW HOW to develop new trade channels. I KNOW HOW to improve selling and distributing methods. I KNOW HOW to meet competition in price, service and profits. I KNOW HOW to work out sales-producing plans for reaching the largest possible market at the least possible cost. I KNOW HOW to keep sales and profits ahead of increasing expenses. I KNOW HOW to attain greater efficiency in every process, in every link, of the chain of distribution from producer to consumer in order to meet without loss the changing conditions of trade.

I am prepared to help you prepare. I am ready to help you fortify your business against whatever future it may face. I am an investment in trained knowledge and ability that will produce profitable returns. I am open to consider only such propositions as may prove worthy of the time, energy and experience of a man who has arrived.

LIBERTY BOND 'PRIMER' ISSUED BY GOVERNMENT

It Answers Many Questions That Have Been Asked, Some That Haven't.

FOR WIDE DISTRIBUTION

Larger Number of Copies Will Be Placed in Banks, Wholesale Houses and Factories.

The Liberty Bond Primer is here. It is issued by the Government to answer the more pertinent questions that have been asked about the Liberty Bonds, and a good many that have not been, but are sure to be sooner or later. Arrangements are being made to deliver large numbers of copies of the Primer, in booklet form, in banks, wholesale houses and factories. The Primer is fixed up in the questions and answers style. Here are some extracts from it:

Q. Should the holder of a Liberty Bond lose it, would he lose his investment, or would he be protected?

A. Liberty Bonds are divided into two classes: Coupon bonds, payable to bearer, and registered bonds. Coupon bonds are in denominations of $50, $100, $500 and $1000. Should any of these bonds be lost or stolen and come into possession of an innocent purchaser, the actual owner would lose. Registered bonds are in denominations from $100 to $100,000. Should any of these bonds be lost or stolen, considerable inconvenience would result, but there would be no real loss.

Q. May a Liberty Bond be transferred from one person to another, and if so, how?

A. A coupon bond may be transferred by delivery only. A registered bond to be transferred must be assigned, registered and delivered.

Q. Which bond is more desirable for the small investor?

A. Generally speaking, the coupon bond, because of the ease of transfer and therefore a resulting higher price in the open market.

Q. Will these Liberty Bonds probably sell for more or less in the future?

A. Our best experts agree that should there be no subsequent issue of bonds in addition to the $2,000,000 now being issued, the bonds will sell at a premium after the war because of a provision in the present issue that Liberty Bonds may be converted without cost into any Government bonds bearing a higher rate of interest. This provision should serve to keep the present issue at or above par.

Q. (a) When and (b) where will the interest be payable?

A. (a) On June 15 and Dec. 15 of each year. (b) Interest on registered bonds will be mailed to the holder's address, while interest coupons will be payable at the Treasury Department or at any subtreasury. However, these coupons may be cashed at par at any bank.

Q. How will the Government raise the money to pay the interest on these bonds?

A. The interest will be paid out of the general funds of the Government. These funds will be raised mainly by the collection of duties on imports, internal revenue tax on liquor and tobacco, income tax and corporation tax. There are other less important sources of revenue.

Q. Will these bonds be legal tender in the payment of debts, the same as money?

A. No. But experience in the past with issues of Government bonds has been that they sell most readily and generally at a premium. Hence all a holder of a bond would have to do would be to sell his bond and pay his debts from the proceeds.

Q. Will banks lend money on Liberty Bonds as collateral?

A. To their customers, yes. These bonds are regarded as the highest type of security and banks will probably lend up to 95 per cent of the face value.

Q. Are these bonds subject to taxation?

A. They are subject to no taxation whatever, except inheritance and estate taxes.

Q. Should a holder want to sell his bond, where would he go or what would he do?

A. In the larger cities there are bond brokers who can, on application, give the exact value of any Government bond. Experience has proved that there always is a market for these bonds and they therefore may be converted into cash immediately on application at the then market price.

Bonds may be purchased in any amount, from $50 up. Payment is to be made, for bonds bought through regular financial channels, as follows: 2 per cent on application; 18 per cent, June 28; 20 per cent, July 20; 30 per cent, Aug. 15; and 30 per cent, Aug. 30. The purchaser of a $1000 bond would pay $20 on application; $180, June 28; $200, July 20, and $3000, Aug. 15 and Aug. 30.

In order to distribute the bonds as widely as possible, trust companies and department stores, have arranged a weekly payment plan. Under this plan the purchaser pays $1 a week for each $50 of bonds he buys. The trust companies and stores have arranged to pay interest on the weekly payments. They buy the bonds outright from the Government, and sell them on the time payment plan merely as an accommodation to the public. They hold the bonds as security until they are paid for. Under this plan they hope to be able to place a bond in every home. The allotment of bonds will be made as soon after June 15 as possible.

The Illinois Traction System (McKinley Lines) welcomes you to St. Louis—fourth city, and to America's most important business and patriotic meeting.

Efficient distribution of the world's goods—keynote of your convention—is largely dependent upon the country's carriers.

The electric railway has become a real factor in this field.

St. Louis is the southern terminal of one of the world's largest electric systems. As such it offers opportunity to observe the advantages of electric transportation.

We invite inspection, as a diversion from your sessions, of our terminals and facilities.

The McKinley Bridge, which affords the only independent railway entrance into St. Louis, is the largest electric span in the world and the strongest across the Mississippi River at any point. Modern electric trains of this company are operated over this structure any hour in the day to principal points in Illinois.

Parlor cars by day, sleepers by night, and automatic block signals on these lines assure the traveler every comfort and safety without the annoyance of smoke and cinders.

A delightful side trip from St. Louis is a 100-mile ride to Springfield, Ill., home, final resting place and scene of the early struggles and triumphs of Abraham Lincoln. The old Lincoln home, Lincoln's tomb and monument, and the Illinois State Capitol and Supreme Court buildings are of historic interest. It's less than a four-hour ride from St. Louis through a country rich in agriculture and industry. Parlor cars affording large observation platform, comfortable chairs, library, club section and cafe service, leave St. Louis daily at 9 A. M., 1 P. M., and 5 P. M. Special Sunday rate, $2.00 round trip.

Look down Advertising Plaza for the electric sign atop the City Terminal at 12th St. and Lucas Av.—one block north of Jefferson Hotel.

11000 Partners
Working As One to Give Most Miles per Dollar

THE stock distribution by which 90 per cent of the members of the Firestone Organization accepted partnership in the Company, is a further move toward the betterment of the service to the public. It is a vital factor for the development of man power which is the lever of all successful business.

But while you may not be concerned with the ethical side of the partnership, you as a user of tires are vitally interested in its effect on the quality and mileage cost of Firestone Tires.

Now that Firestone workers are owners of the business, it is logical to suppose that there will be improvements all along the line. Efficiency has always been the Firestone watchword, and everybody knows that men are more efficient when personal pride and ambition are involved.

Firestone workers are literally Firestone builders, building not only tires but fame and business success. Action is quickened, ability encouraged, enthusiasm spurred. The results are plain: quality improved, production stimulated, most miles per dollar emphasized.

Equip with Firestone Tires and get the benefit of those long-established values which go with the Firestone name.

How You may Change Your Face Completely

Any woman not satisfied with her complexion can easily remove it and have a new one. The thin veil of stifling, half-dead cuticle is an incumbrance and should be removed to give the fresh, vigorous, young skin underneath a chance to show itself and to breathe. There's a simple, old-fashioned remedy which will always do the work. Get an ounce of pure mercolized wax from your druggist and apply it at night like cold cream, washing it off in the morning. The wax will gently absorb all the lifeless skin and leave a healthy and beautiful complexion, as fresh as a child's. Naturally it takes with it all such facial blemishes as freckles, moth patches, sallowness, liver spots, pimples. It is pleasant to use, and economical. The face so treated soon looks years younger.

To keep the skin free from wrinkles and furrows, there's nothing quite so good as the old reliable saxolite lotion. It is only necessary to dissolve an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel and bathe the face in this as required. The result is instantaneous and wonderful, and there is no harmful effect whatever.—ADV.

GRUENDLER NORTH WIND SHOW CASE REFRIGERATOR IS YOUR BEST SALESMAN

The North Wind Refrigerator and Showcase is especially designed for meat markets. In it you can show choice cuts of meats in a manner that will appeal to your customers. This Refrigerator Showcase is your silent salesman—it will increase your sales.

Not only is the North Wind a handsome showcase, but it is a perfect and economical refrigerator as well. It differs from all others—in that the cooling is done by currents of cold air forced through the showcase, making a uniform temperature.

This is the only display refrigerator that will freeze on the top shelf, and what's more it is self-cleaning—no scrapers necessary to clean the tubes. These refrigerators are being used by hundreds of the largest concerns throughout America. Investigate the Gruendler Showcase Refrigerator at once.

WAR NOW AND IN '61 IS COMPARED BY MAJ. RASSIEUR

Danger at Present as Great as Then, but People Do Not as Fully Realize It.

DISLOYALTY OPEN THEN

Effort to Gain Control of Affairs Under Cloak of "Neutrality" Was Frustrated.

POINTS of similarity, and of contrast, between the present early-war period in St. Louis and the like period in 1861, after the outbreak of the Civil War, were outlined in an interview given to a Post-Dispatch reporter by Maj. Leo Rassieur, former commander of the Grand Army of the Republic. Maj. Rassieur, who is 74 years old, and a native of Prussia, has been outspoken in his support of the United States Government in the present war, and he aroused great enthusiasm by his speech at the loyalty meeting held in the Coliseum April 5, on the eve of the declaration of war against Germany.

"The danger to our country today is as great as it was in 1861," Maj. Rassieur declared. "The difference seems to me to be that our people here in St. Louis do not realize the seriousness of the situation now as they did then.

Open Disloyalty Then.

"At that time, there were open expressions and demonstrations of disloyalty, to an extent which would seem hardly possible now. But on the other hand, there was an intense loyalty, and a feeling that disloyalty must not be permitted to prevail. This was in part a feeling of fear, and of self-preservation, and it caused many men to get into military organizations who otherwise might have been indifferent.

"St. Louis had its advocates of 'neutrality' in 1861. These were, of ocurse, disloyal persons, who meant to get control of the city for the Confederacy, and who used the 'neutrality' talk in the effort to weaken the resistance to the carrying out of their plans.

"The German element in South St. Louis, it was well known, would not support the Confederacy; so the 'neutrality' talk was directed toward them, and it made an impression on some of them.

"The argument made in support of this idea was that, if we remained neutral, we would be left in peace by both sides. Gen. Frost and other leaders of the Confederates sought to impress this view on some of the Germans of means, who, they thought, would have something to lose.

"A meeting was held at St. George Market, one month and 10 days before the fall of Camp Jackson, on a call signed by several of these substantial German citizens. A committee was appointed by the chairman, Dr. Adam Hammer, to draw up resolutions, and this committee, within five minutes, reported a set of resolutions of such length as to show that they had been prepared in advance. These resolutions favored the neutrality idea.

Speaks Against Neutrality.

"I was a boy of 17, but I had kept well posted on the situation while working in my father's retail store, and I had attended several of the meetings held by the disloyal element and had a good idea of what they planned to do. I was convinced that there was no such thing as neutrality for the German people in St. Louis, and that the safety of our people was bound up with that of the Union. There were older men in the meeting who were of the same opinion, but who did not feel that they could express themselves, and so called on me to speak. I was shoved upon a butcher block and was virtually compelled to speak by these men, who saw that if someone did not speak in behalf of the Union, the neutrality resolution would be passed.

"I repeated what I could remember of the oath taken by Germans when they became citizens of the United States. I asked how anyone could propose to remain neutral when the flag of the country was assailed. I asked whether it was sufficient to cheer the flag on the Fourth of July or at picnics and whether it was not the duty of citizens to defend the flag.

"The chairman tried to rule me out of order, but I demanded either a hearing in that meeting, or the holding of another meeting where speech would be free. The result was that cries of 'Heraus!' arose and that the crowd formed outside in a new meeting, of which Roderick E. Rombauer was made chairman, and I was secretary. That meeting adopted a brief resolution, stating that we would stand by the Union for weal or woe. I am glad to say that Dr. Hammer later indorsed this position and took a commission in the volunteers.

Recruiting Not in the Open.

"Recruiting was not carried on as openly in those days as it is now, but the results were much more speedy. The Turner Hall on Tenth between Market and Walnut streets was barred against Confederate attacks, and the members of the Turner Regiment had to conceal the weapons they carried in and out.

"But without any public activity in recruiting, there were four regiments, of about 1000 men each, ready to be sworn in, under the title of United States Reserve Corps, Missouri Infantry Volunteers. Another thousand men wanted to go, and Frank P. Blair urged their acceptance.

"Blair commanded the First, or Turner Regiment, and Schofield, Larned and Totten, non-Germans, were among the Captains in the regiment. The Second, Third and Fourth Regiments wer commanded by Henry Boernstein, proprietor of a German paper; Frans Sigel and Nicholas Schuettner.

"The outfits supplied by the Government in those days were much less elaborate than what the soldier gets now. At first we had few uniforms, and

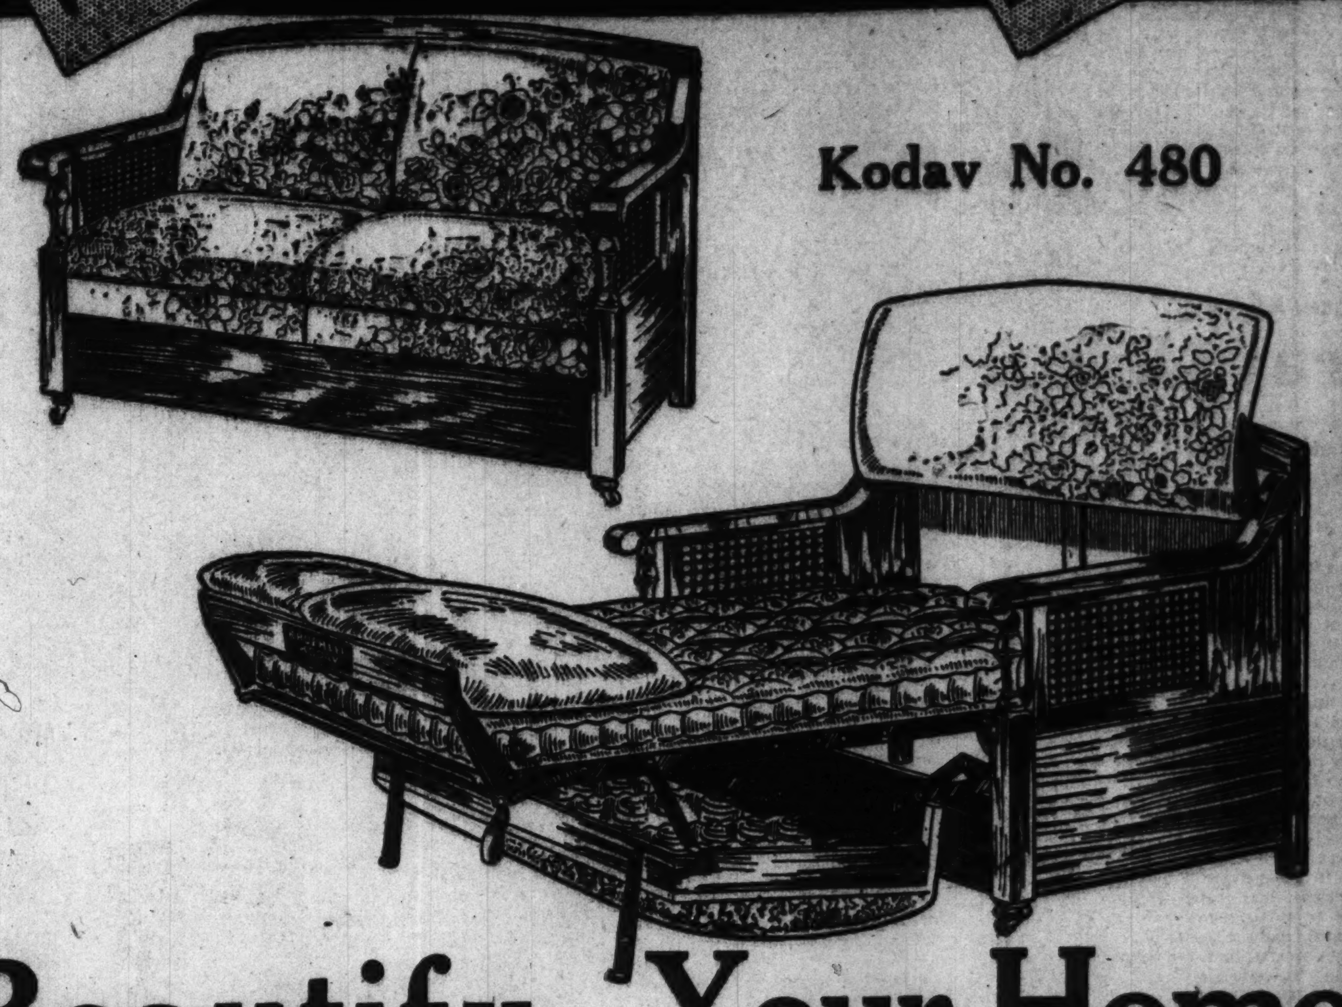
KODAV KROEHLER DAVENO
BED DAVENPORTS



Beautify Your Home —and Save Space!

LACK of room is easily overcome with a Kroehler Bed Davenport—a beautiful, stylish and highly ornamental piece of furniture which may be used as a davenport by day and as a luxuriously comfortable, full size bed by night. No home is completely furnished without one.

The Kroehler Kodav is the short davenport for small rooms. The Kroehler Daveno is the long davenport for large rooms. Each contains concealed in an airy space under the seat a full-size, sanitary, comfortable bed equipped with a thick, removable mattress. This bed section folds or unfolds with slight effort.

Enables You to Live Comfortably in Smaller House or Apartment

Provides additional sleeping room for members of your family—or for guests.

The steel-wire fabric and helical springs supporting the mattress are firmly attached to an all-steel, sanitary bed frame.

Bed frame and springs are entirely independent of upholstering and when in use as a bed there is room for free circulation of air underneath and all around.

You sleep on a real 35-pound cotton felt mattress, not on a mere pad, nor on the upholstering.

The patented folding mechanism is simple and perfect. Nothing to get out of order.

For Finest Homes

In the Kroehler Kodav and Daveno, only the best materials are used. Every part of the construction and finish is closely inspected. Because of their many refinements Kroehler Bed Davenports won highest award at Panama-Pacific Exposition. Seven mammoth factories built up by P. E. Kroehler from a small beginning are your assurance of satisfaction.

Large variety of styles, including Period designs.

Sold by leading furniture dealers everywhere at moderate prices for cash or on easy payments.

The name "Kroehler" is stamped on every bed frame. Insist on seeing it before you buy.

If your furniture dealer doesn't handle Kroehler Bed Davenports, don't accept a substitute, but write us for the name of a dealer near you who DOES. We'll also send illustrated booklet.

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as the prescription othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from any druggist and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.—ADV.

Causes of Gray Hair and how "Canute Water" will restore it to its youthful color.

Gray hair is not generally an indication of age. It is often hereditary—being common to many families. Prolonged sorrow or worry — dandruff and mental overwork very often cause grayness. Severe illness and constant pain or sudden fright will cause the hair to become gray, even in a child.

Thanks to this remarkable new scientific discovery, one can now obtain a clear and clean water, which will restore the natural and youthful color to gray or faded hair. It will therefore no longer be necessary for one to remain gray.

The gray hair will surely yield to the gentle, never-failing influence of this pure, clean liquid called "Canute Water for Gray Hair."

A crystal clear water solution that is free from sediment, odor, grease, lead, acid, walnut stain or coal tar products of any kind. It is therefore absolutely safe to use.

Day by day your gray hair will take on more and more color. The action is not complete after the first application. Use it for a few days, and before the completion of the first bottle the youthful color of your hair will be restored. It will then remain that way and simply require a retouching once every week or two as the hairs grow.

"Canute Water for Gray Hair" is applied by simply wetting the hair with it. It is simplicity itself to use. Yet it works wonders.

Why hesitate "Canute Water for Gray Hair" is GUARANTEED ABSOLUTELY HARMLESS!

WAR NOW AND IN '61 IS COMPARED BY MAJ. RASSIEUR

our arms were old Austrian rifles, which had been provided by some contractor who had bought them from the Austrian Government. Later we got caps, partial uniforms and better rifles.

"While each regiment had its surgeon and assistant surgeon, there was nothing like the present care for the sick and wounded. Wounds were less skillfully treated, amputations were more frequent, and the ratio of deaths among the wounded was high.

Church Used as Hospital.

"I was carried, when ill, in an ambulance from Springfield to Rolla, Mo., and was placed in a Methodist church which was being used as a hospital, and which was so crowded that the surgeon could hardly get around among the patients. During the night several dead were carried out.

"There was no selling of Liberty Bonds in those days, nor any public participation in the cost of the war. It seemed that neither the Government nor the people had any money. Business here was at a standstill.

"As there were no bridges then, there was less work to do in local guarding than the First Regiment men are doing now. The camps, after the troops were mustered in, were guarded, although most of those who came were admitted. The arsenal was guarded more closely. It was known that Frost planned to plant batteries within range of the arsenal, but the Germans kept a watch on the places within range of the building, and he did not succeed in carrying out his plan.

"The call for troops came May 6, and on the following day the companies of the four German regiments were drilling. The company in which I was, B of the First Regiment, drilled in Flora Garden for two and one-half hours, under Capt. Rombauer. I managed to impress the drillmaster with my military knowledge, most of which I had gained by studying the manual from a book, and practicing with my father's shotgun, and I was made orderly Sergeant, much to my father's surprise and my own.

How Gen. Lyon Became Hero.

"Gen. Lyon was in those days what as I judge, Gen. Pershing is now—a soldier in whom everyone had confidence as thoroughly loyal and capable. Lyon was a man of almost insignificant appearance, with red hair and scraggy beard, but he was looked upon, by the German people as a leader, from the day he came here. The taking of Camp Jackson, May 10, 1861, made him their hero.

"The headquarters of disloyal organizations was around Fifth and Pine streets. These organizations formed military bodies, as part of the State troops. Fred Schaefer, who was Lieutenant-Colonel of Boernstein's regiment, and later a Brigadier-General, was mustered out of the State militia because he tried to display the stars and stripes as the colors of his company.

"Such occurrences enabled everyone to understand the seriousness of the situation then. They seemed to indicate that the city, as a whole, was favorable to the Confederacy, and that we who favored the Union must make our utmost efforts or we would be overwhelmed.

"Because this feeling did prevail, and because we did our utmost and succeeded in overcoming this danger, the loyal people of the North and East were shown what could be done on the border, and were aroused to make greater efforts. I have been told by leaders of loyal opinion in the North that the achievement of the St. Louis Union supporters was of the greatest value there. 'After Camp Jackson,' said J. Warren Keifer of Ohio, 'we had to stand by you.'

"I don't think our people realize the seriousness of the situation now, as they did then. The fighting at present is far away, and people do not give enough thought to the question, what will become of other republics if the republic of France is permitted to perish?

Present War Misunderstood.

"The justification for our declaration of war is not understood as it ought to be understood, and the enthusiasm is not felt which should be felt over our country's stand in defense of our rights on the sea, and to aid and uphold the principles of democracy.

"Our people should hail with delight the opportunity to stand by the French republic in this war. For our country to sit inactive would prove that we lacked courage to defend our rights, and that we were more attached to the dollar than to the principles of our republic."

A Reliable Treatment for Rheumatism

A sudden twinge of pain is generally the first warning of an attack of rheumatism. It feels as if the disease was in the bones or muscles, but the real cause of rheumatism is the uric acid in the blood. The use of liniments and rubbing undoubtedly gives temporary relief, but effective results only come from the use of a dependable internal medicine such as Warner's Safe Rheumatic Remedy. It acts on the blood and helps drive the uric acid from the system. It has a history of 40 years of well doing behind it. A history fully substantiated by people whose good will and confidence in this thoroughly reliable treatment has been fairly won. Warner's Safe Rheumatic Remedy rarely fails to assist the patient back to health and vigor with a feeling of true happiness and words of praise. If you have any symptom of rheumatism, you're safe in trying Warner's Safe Rheumatic Remedy.

"I Recommend to All Who Wish to Reduce"

Says Arbolone Tablets "Is the Best Remedy I Ever Came Across."

Tells Reason for Successful Obesity Treatment to Thousands.

One of the biggest advertising experts in New York City stated in a letter that his wife had greatly reduced her weight and improved her health, and if it were not for fear of undesirable notoriety she would gladly tell the whole world about its great blessings. For Tablets Arbolone has proved itself a real blessing to thousands of suffering fat people. L. M. Hansen, 1917 Master St., Philadelphia, Pa., writes:

"I have taken 3 pkgs. of Arbolone Tablets, which have reduced me 20 pounds, and it is the best remedy I ever came across. I recommend to all who wish to reduce, etc."

Arbolone Tablets is the only treatment that stops the craving for wrong foods, overcomes perverted appetite, eliminates fatty elements and dissolves fat from the body safely, surely and reasonably prompt. One or two packages will convince anyone that Arbolone is a real reducer. Sold by thirty thousand druggists in sealed tubes with full directions. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious names will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

C. J. R. asks: "Can I safely reduce my weight, and how?"

Answer: Go to a well-stocked druggist and get five-grain arbolone tablets in sealed tube with complete directions. Take as directed and you should soon feel the relief you desire. Many of my patients report quick results without any harmful action whatever.

* * *

"Vanity" writes: "Two years ago I used your great prescription for kidney trouble and it wholly overcome the trouble. I want medicine now for constipation and impure blood, for I am a sight with pimples that make big lumpy sores."

Answer: I would advise the taking of three-grain sulpherb tablets (not sulphur) for several months to purify the system.

Ellen J. asks: "Tell me, please, how I can increase my weight and improve my color. I seem to be anemic, weak and tired all the time."

Answer: Begin taking three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets with your meals and soon you will feel your strength returning and gradually your weight and color will improve. This is a most effective remedy if persistently used.

"Poor Nerves" writes: "Is it possible to find a medicine which by its tonic or nutritive powers will bring the glow of health and ambition back to a man who has everything in the world but health and happiness? I am dull, forgetful, despondent, weak, trembling, short of breath and suffer more or less with pain in spine and back of head."

Answer: Your condition indicates the need of a strong, harmless tonic nutritive to restore nerve equilibrium, which in turn fortifies and strengthens the organs of nutrition, thus vitalizing the blood and promoting new cell and tissue to take care of the waste forces. Three-grain cadomene tablets, packed in sealed tubes with full directions, are recommended in all such cases.

Mrs. "Annie R." writes: "My husband is surely afflicted with some kidney disease. He has become weak and suffers with headache and pains in his back and groins. Pains are like rheumatism. His ankles swell and his feet seem to be tired all the time. Some days he has chills and no appetite. Please prescribe."

Answer: The symptoms indicate derangement of kidneys and should not be neglected. I would advise balmwort tablets, a compound well suited to such cases. Obtain in sealed tubes with directions for home use.

NOTE: For many years Dr. Baker has been giving free advice and prescriptions to millions of people through the press columns, and doubtless has helped in relieving illness and distress more than any single individual in the world's history. Thousands have written him expressions of gratitude and confidence similar to the following:

DR. LEWIS BAKER DEAR SIR: I am glad I was recommended to your prescription for medicine. I was pretty well run down, nervous and loss of ambition; felt tired all the time; could not sleep, loss of appetite, felt weak and trembled from weakness. I find three-grain Cadomene Tablets are helping me very much. I was writing to my sister about my run-down condition and she advised me to take your prescription of medicine, for she was as bad off as I was and the Cadomene built her nerves up and also restored her health. I am more than thankful, etc. Yours truly,

MANY GERMAN RESERVISTS IN MEXICO, BUT WARLIKE PROPAGANDA IS HOPELESS

Post-Dispatch Writer, in Article in "The Bookman," Shows Failure of Berlin Diplomacy Nullifies Work of Kaiser's Army Chiefs.

The following discussion of the Mexican situation in view of the changed conditions brought about by the entry of the United States into the European war, and the consequent rush of German reservists from the United States to Mexico, was written for The Bookman by a Post-Dispatch staff correspondent who has spent two years on the Mexican border.

In The Bookman, which is published in New York, it was printed under the title "What Is Germany Doing in Mexico?"

By CLAIR KENAMORE.

(Reprinted From The Bookman for June by Special Arrangement With the Post-Dispatch.)

The German is the most popular foreigner in Mexico for well-established and sufficient reasons. The Mexican Government has a feeling of friendship for the German Empire very similar to the warm regard which its citizens hold for individual Teutons. These conditions, now that we are at war with Germany, are reasonable grounds for apprehension in high places, but a critical examination of the conditions and their causes tends to quiet the apprehension and to relieve the tension.

Germans in considerable numbers have been crossing the borders or traveling by sea to Mexico since war between the United States and Germany seemed inevitable. The numbers probably have been larger than the daily papers have announced, and the total would make a sizable army in our land of little armies. These men are not German-Americans in our usual acceptance of that questionable term, but German reservists, not naturalized in the United States, and our proclaimed enemies. Trained soldiers of an amazing efficiency and loyalty, they join our warlike, but improvident, southern neighbor ready to give him the full of their endeavors.

These recent excursionists find in Mexico many of their own countrymen, long established there, but still German citizens who have done the great work of establishing and maintaining the German-American friendship. No far-sighted war lord sat in the midst of his counsellors many years ago and decreed that Germany should win and keep the friendship of Mexico. The friendship is a natural growth. Doubtless it has been assiduously cultivated since its strength and vigor were observed, but its beginning must have been hte logical result of natural causes.

Exploited by Foreigners.

Mexico is a country which always has been exploited by foreigners; and doubtless will be for many years to come, a condition that is due to internal lack of financial resources, and a seeming native reticence about initiating big enterprises. Of the foreigners who have entered and established businesses, nearly the whole list is embraced in Americans, British, Spaniards and Germans for we must omit the Chinese, who receive no consideration whatever in Mexico and are classed with the buzzards or the burros.

Americans almost without exception are the objects of bitter hatred by Mexicans. The reasons are not essential here, and a large amount of the blame is our own, but the condition is as stated and is acknowledged by everyone of competent vision who has studied the case. The Britons and the Mexicans do not mix. An Englishman, far from home and thrown among a people he does not understand, is not a chummy person, and in addition to this, the popularity of certain Englishmen, like Lord Cowdray, with President Diaz, has thrown them all into disrepute with the people. The Spaniard is looked upon as a tricky trader, an unscrupulous twister of the screws when he has the opportunity, and the hereditary enemy of the country. Revolutionary leaders always make it a point to loot the stores of Spaniards in captured towns—usually a popular proceeding.

The German, however, is different. There is a psychological kinship between the Mexican and the German. They mix easily and pleasantly, they understand each other, something resembling esteem brows up where the German is long established, and they trust each other, usually with subsequent minor regrets on both sides. Sixty per sent of the business of Mexico is now in the hands of Germans, a remarkable condition of affairs and I doubt if a parallel case exists in the owrld. It is a testimonial, not to the superiority of German methods or materials, but to a sort of affinity between Germans and Mexicans.

Many Intermarried.

The early Germans who invaded Mexico had no national motive. other than the national profit which would result from their individual power and prosperity. Many of them married Mexican wives and they became Mexican in most of the outward evidences, although the difficult naturalization laws prevented most of them from becoming Mexican citizens. Their activities touched almost every line of business, but their supremacy is most apparent in financial affairs and in the machinery and hardware trade, in which lines they have specialised. The ramifications of German financial institutions reach t oall parts of the country: the Bank of Sonora, for instance, the strongest institution on the west coast, is owned entirely by Germans, and the strongest bank in the country is a German institution in the capital. Then, too, for its first two years, the Villa revolution was a tremendous financial success, what with stealing cattle, bullion and foodstuffs, printing paper money and levying taxes and imposts, and all the mechanism and details of the financial phase of that revolution were handled by Germans.

The hardware and machinery factor is of the highest importance. None of the expensive machines used in mining and refining operations is made in Mexico, but, together with all agricultural implements, is imported. The machinery trade is a rihc field and it is tilled almost exclusively by Germans, this being especially true along the northern border, where it has the greatest significance for the United States. Hardware and machinery establishments in towns on the American side of the border from ocean to ocean are run by Germans with but few exceptions. Some of the merchants are naturalized American citizens but nearly all are of foreign birth. For five or six years, the

Mother, Why Don't You Take Nuxated Iron

And Be Strong and Well and Have Nice Rosy Cheeks Instead of Being Nervous and Irritable All the Time and Looking So Haggard and Old?—The Doctor Gave Some to Susie Smith's Mother and She Was Worse Off Than You Are and Now She Looks Just Fine.

NUXATED IRON WILL INCREASE THE STRENGTH AND ENDURANCE OF WEAK, NERVOUS, CAREWORN, HAGGARD LOOKING WOMEN 100 PER CENT IN TWO WEEKS' TIME IN MANY INSTANCES.

THE CHILD'S APPEAL

"There can be no Beautiful, Healthy Rosy Cheeked Women Without Iron."
F. KING, M. D.

"There can be no healthy, beautiful, rosy cheeked women without iron," says Dr. Ferdinand King, a New York Physician and Medical Author. "In my recent talks to physicians on the grave and serious consequences of iron deficiency in the blood of American women, I have strongly emphasized the fact that doctors should prescribe more organic iron—nuxated iron—for their nervous, run-down, weak, haggard-looking women patients. Pallor means anaemia. The skin of the anaemic woman is pale, the flesh flabby. The muscles lack tone, the brain fags and the memory fails, and often they become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women, the roses go from their cheeks."

"In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, sago, farina, degerminated cornmeal, no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cookery, by throwing down the waste pipe the water in which our vegetable are cooked are responsible for another grave iron loss

"Therefore, if you wish to preserve your youthful health and strength to a ripe old age, you must supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron, just as you would use salt when your food has not enough salt.

"As I have said a hundred times over, organic iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only take Nuxated Iron when they feel weak or rundown, instead of dosing themselves with habit-forming drugs, stimulants and alcoholic beverages I am convinced that in this way they could ward off disease, preventing it becoming organic in thousands of cases and thereby the lives of thousands might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, kidney, liver, heart trouble and other dangerous maladies. The real and true cause which started their disease was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by lack of iron in the blood.

On account of the peculiar nature of woman, she requires iron much more than a man.

Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per dav after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while double their strength and endurance and entirely rid themselves of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles, in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this, after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, ironacetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. The iron demanded by Mother Nature for the red coloring matter in the blood of her children, is, alas, not that kind of iron. You must take iron in form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. I have used Nuxated Iron widely in my own practice in most severe aggravted conditions with unfailing results. I have induced many other physicians to give it a trial, all of whom have given me most surprising reports in regard to its great power as a health and strength builder.

Many an athlete and prize fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray; while many another has gone down in inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron."

Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York City, said: "I have never before given out any medical information or advice for publication as I ordinarily do not believe in it. But so many American women suffer from iron deficiency with its attendant ills—physical weakness, nervous irritability, melancholy, indigestion, flabby, sagging muscles, etc., etc., and in consequence of their weakened run-down condition they are so liable to contract serious and even fatal diseases that I deem it my duty to advise such to take Nuxated Iron. I have taken it myself and given it to my patients with most surprising and satisfactory results. And those who wish quickly to increase their strength, power and endurance will find it a most remarkable and wonderfully effective remedy.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine or secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians both in Europe and America. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in nuxated iron, that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron, and increase their strength 100 per cent or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in 10 days' time. It is dispensed in this city by Judge & Dolph Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Johnson-Enderle-Pauley Drug Co., Kiefer Drug Co., and all good druggists.

You can tell the women with plenty of iron in their blood — beautiful healthy rosy cheeked women full of Life, Health and Strength.

Dr. Ferdinand King, New York Physician and Medical Author, tells physicians that they should prescribe more organic iron—Nuxated Iron—for their patients—Says anaemia—iron deficiency—is the greatest curse to the health, strength, vitality and beauty of the modern American Woman.—Sounds warning against use of metallic iron which may injure the teeth, corrode the stomach and do far more harm than good; advises use of only nuxated iron.

SPECIAL TO PHYSICIANS: Doctor, when you wish to prescribe a true tonic and blood builder, one that puts the real "stay there" strength and youthful health into the blood and nerves, try Nuxated Iron. If you have been using the old forms of metallic iron, without success; if you have had patients complain of discolored teeth, upset stomachs, etc., from the use of metallic iron, again we suggest, try Nuxated Iron. Nuxated Iron will be furnished by any druggist on an absolute guarantee of success or money refunded. It is highly endorsed by such physicians as Dr. Schuyler C. Jacques, Visiting Surgeon of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York City; Dr. Howard James, late of The Manhattan State Hospital of New York and formerly Assistant Phyician Brooklyn State Hopital; Dr. A. J. Newman, late Police Surgeon of the City of Chicago, former House Surgeon Jefferson Park Hospital, Chicago; Dr. Ferdinand King, New York Physician and Medical Author, and others. In most cases physicians direct the use of two five-grain tablets three times per day after meals.

No Substitute
For Butter

Because nature does not produce and human ingenuity can not produce any substitute for fat of cow's milk as an article of food for the human family.

Because butter fat alone, of all commercial fats, is produced in Nature's own laboratory for the specific purpose of nourishing and developing living beings.

Because butter fat alone, of all commercial fats, is available for human consumption without first killing the animal that produces it.

Because butter fat alone, of all commercial fats, is not a "dead fat" and possesses a volatile substance which materially aids in the digestion of all foods.

Because butter gives to every other article of food with which it is used, its unequaled appetizing flavor and its great energizing properties.

Because butter combines all the virtues of all other fats plus palatability, easy digestibility and power to promote life and growth.

When You Buy Butter You Get Indispensable Qualities Not Found in Other Fats or Foods

The discriminating, frugal housewife finds no more economical food than butter, and will energize the low priced foods by the liberal use of butter with them.

In energy value alone one ounce of butter costing 3c is equal to four ounces of beef costing 8c; or five ounces of veal cutlets costing 13c; or four ounces leg of lamb costing 7 1-2c; or three ounces of ham costing 8c; or three eggs costing 10c. GERMAN RESERVISTS FAIL IN THEIR WAR MISSION IN MEXICO sale of arms and ammunition to various shifting armies in Mexico has been one of the most lucrative branches of this trade. Although usually illegal, it is regarded locally as respectable and it is not uncommon to have a celebrity pointed out in proud defiance as "one of the biggest ammunition smugglers on the border," or as "one of the leading gun-runners in this section." Many border hardware establishments of the highest rating and of unquestioned commercial probity have been in trouble more than once with the United States Government over this very difficulty. This business of supplying guns and ammunition along the border and the stocks and stores of these essentials, are in the hands of men with German names; their customers are to the south of the border and they are the chieftains, whether revolutionary or governmental, to whom have gone the German reservists from the United States.

There is along the border, also, a good number of Germans in various professional lines who may fairly be suspected of being agents of the Kaiser. They came in from five to seven years ago and since then they have worked hard, said little, and made their legitimate activities sufficient excuse fo rtheir presence and existence. A specimen of this class is a civil engineer in Lower California, a highly intelligent, pleasant, companionable young man, who has a profitable business in the upper end of the Imperial Valley; he has the best maps of the country that I have seen and has as clear and comprehensive a knowledge of the region as any man in the valley. Knowing this man to be a trained soldier, one can easily see what an immense opportunity he now has to serve his country. In fact, the Germans' maps of Northern Mexico are better than any except our own. This Lower California engineer is but one of many—men of his type are strung along the border from coast to coast.

Ordered to Mexico by Berlin.

Now why did the German reservists, ouf avowed enemies, rush into Mexico, with which country we always are nearly at war, and why are many others now on their way? Because they were ordered to do so by Berlin. There can be no doubt of this, but when the order is examined more closely much of its sanguinary tinge fades. There was nothing else to do. The order, always a powerful thing among Germans, may be two years old. It would say: "In case the United States enters the war against Germany, all reservists in that country will report as soon as possible to consuls or other agents in Mexico." The reservists expected to be interned if they remained in the Unite dStates. They could not go to Canada, which also was at war, the route to Germany was closed to them, so there was no haven but Mexico. Stubborn circumstance sent them to the one country where they could best strike a blow for the Fatherland. No one knows today how many Germans there are in Mexico. My guess would be 15,000—not an alarming number in point of force; but as seeds of trouble it can become bothersome.

One of our national American customs is to underrate the opposition. Officers of our army find pleasure in saying that the Mexicans are not soldiers, that their appearance is convincing on this point: they are dirty, they do not stand up and salute like soldiers, they cannot shoot, they fight all day and nobody is hurt, they will not stand before the fire of trained troops and they are deficient in courage. These and many similar assertions are made. Now the most of these assumptions are not true. The Mexican armies, especially Obregon's armies, are made up of good soldiers. They have not the martial appearance of our men, they are slovenly at saluting, and the drill is such as is best suited to the hot climate, but it fits them for their irregular warfare. They can shoot straight and they do shoot straight. When two Mexican armies fight all day, there is a sufficiency of dead and wounded to mark the place. They stand under fire, even when their own officers are down, a capacity that was shown at Carrizal, where Capt. Boyd of the American punitive expedition, in attempting to force his way through a superior Mexican force, was killed and his cavalry well whipped. These are things we do not like to dwell upon, but they are stubborn facts wihch must be met. Such conditions should be acknowledged and analysed, that a recurrence may be prevented.

Mapped Northern Mexico.

The German reservists flowing to Mexico are potentially better soldiers than the Mexicans, but they have not had the practical experience which the Mexicans have had, for Mexican soldiers now in the field have had five years of actual warfare. These Germans, however, are men any commander would be glad to have in his army, and most likely they will become attached to the de facto forces. For the German, usually is a poor revolutionist, as his sympathies are trained to coincide with the established power. But once in Mexico, he can be relied upon to do whatever is best for Germany. Thus the departure of German reservists from the United States is calculated to aid Caranza. With them he would be able to inflict greater punishment on the border towns, and he could give us a little stiffer fight in case of war between the United States and Mexico. There are, however, only a few German officers in the Mexican army, according to the best information obtainable. Whether they were placed there by the German Government is in doubt; I do not believe so, but suspect that they are adventurers or fugitives who have found berths with the Mexicans.

It possibly will be seen from the foregoing that the Mexican border, which is always a ticklish spot with us, is now more than ever a danger zone. We are at war with a great and powerful nation overseas, and a small and touchy nation nearby is able to deliver a more stinging blow than formerly.

The German army, after its immemorial custom, has done its work well. It has, to the best of its ability, aided the foe of its foe. It has mapped the roads and water holes of Northern Mexico, the possible scene of conflict, and it has sent its reservists there. It knows the number and condition of locomotives and railway cars. It has gathered the data necessary to the conduct of a war.

BLACK SAFETY TREAD TIRES

EVOLUTION climbs on the bones of the weak. Only THE STRONG, THE BEST, survive the TEST. As true of TIRES as of cave men.

Goodrich Black Safety Treads are the FIT fabric tires that have survived the relentless TEST of the Goodrich Test Car Fleet.

To produce them hundreds of tires have been worn to the quick over millions of miles of the worst roads of America.

Goodrich never sells you an experiment. Be it a Goodrich rubber mat, a garden hose, or a Goodrich tire, it must prove itself by wear and tear test worthy of the Goodrich name.

A cruel test of tires—that test of Goodrich's Test Car Fleets.

Tested The Country Over

Six corps of heavy cars, light cars, hard running cars—take Goodrich Tires and maul their MERIT against teeth of sand, rock and gravel. Two sets of drivers; speeding them sixteen hours a day, hammer them week after week on the anvil of the road.

Wherever climate and roads can test and tell something about tires a Goodrich Test Car Fleet is grinding the TRUTH out of Goodrich tires.

While the Atlantic Fleet crunches through the hills and valleys of New York and New England, the Pacific Fleet hammers the granite highways of the Western Coast.

While the Dixie Fleet braves the sun of the South, the Lake Fleet ploughs the sand stretches of Minnesota.

While the Prairie Fleet scours the roads around Kansas City, the Mountain Fleet battles the rocky trails of Yellowstone and Glacier Parks.

Throughout miles of roughing it, which run into millions, over roads which cross-hatch the map of the United States, Goodrich learns the TESTED VIRTUES of its tires.

Thus it settles the durability and resilience of the UNIT MOLDED TIRE—the unbroken curing Goodrich has always maintained was the BEST construction for fabric tires. Thus it settles the wearing strength of Black Tread, the toughest rubber known.

"SHOW-ME" STATE IS CONVINCED AT LAST

Men and Women of Missouri No Longer Doubt That Tanlac Is the Master Medicine—Kansas and Illinois Also Are Shown.

Tanlac's triumph in the West is now complete.

The people of Missouri, the "show-me" state, and of Illinois and Kansas have been shown.

The men and women of these three great states at first were reluctant to accept Tanlac as the Master Medicine. They wanted to be shown. They desired conclusive proof that Tanlac was a medicine of merit and not the ordinary highly advertised preparations.

Believe Friends' Words.

But when these men and women read in the newspapers of the great relief their friends and neighbors had derived from the use of Tanlac, they began to take notice. This indisputable proof has convinced countless thousands of skeptics of Tanlac's unusual merit.

Today Tanlac is enjoying the largest sale in Missouri, Illinois and Kansas of any proprietary medicine ever offered the public of these states.

Druggists Enthusiastic.

The J. S. Merrell Drug Co., St. Louis, Mo., wholesale distributors of Tanlac and one of the oldest and most reliable drug houses in the United States, is now buying Tanlac in two-carload lots to supply their Missouri, Kansas and Illinois trade.

One thousand of the leading druggists of Missouri, Kansas and Illinois have within the last year been awarded a rich business prize in the shape of the exclusive Tanlac agency for their respective cities and towns. These druggists are proud of their Tanlac agency and declare it to be one of the most profitable assets to their business. They know that when they sell a new customer Tanlac the chances are that the purchaser will be so pleased with the Master Medicine that he or she will become a permanent patron of the Tanlac store. They also know that when one of their old customers call for Tanlac that he or she is buying a medicine that is pretty sure to prove so satisfactory that the purchaser will return for a second and perhaps a third or fourth bottle of Tanlac. Tanlac's repeating qualities is the most conclusive proof of its merits. If the first bottle did not give satisfaction, who would waste his time and money to return for the second?

ADMITS INABILITY TO OFFER FACTS

"I slept so poorly that I just dreaded going to bed," Mrs. Laura Badaracco, 4748 Natural Bridge avenue, this city, told the Tanlac Man at Johnson-Enderle-Pauley's drug store on May 9.

"Stomach trouble caused me a world of annoyance five years," Mrs. Badaracco continued. "It seemed that everything I ate soured on my stomach. I got so I couldn't eat meat, eggs, vegetables or anything greasy. I was awfully constipated and had terrible headaches constantly. I slept so poorly nights that, really, I dreaded the arrival of bedtime. I was so nervous I could not stand for anyone to walk across the floor.

"Tanlac has made my life a real pleasure. The stomach trouble has been relieved beyond my wildest hopes. Nothing seems to disagree with me or cause any pain. The constipation has been relieved. The dreadful headaches bother me no more. I retire early and sleep through the night now in fine condition. Recommend Tanlac? Why, I'm afraid I can't do it justice, but I think everyone should know of it. Oh, I am so glad that I gave Tanlac a trial. I had tried everything and nothing helped me except Tanlac."

RELIEF WORKER CAUSES CHANGE

"I'm a different man since taking Tanlac," S. W. Murphy, 2728 Russell avenue, said recently. "The dizzy spells, pains in my back and tired, draggy feeling have all vanished now."

PREPAREDNESS BEING PREACHED

Thousands Beginning to Realize Importance of Guarding Against Disease—Tanlac Offers Means for Overcoming Winter's Hardships.

The siege of winter, that leaves in its wake so many people with completely run-down systems, is one of the great agents of destruction man has to contend with.

The many days of snow, sleet, cold rains and winds that chill a person through and through are so thorough in their work against humanity that few escape.

In fact, in recent years, it has become common for people who desire to rid themselves of the effects of winter weather and to guard against a disagreeable state of ill health in the summer months, to take, at springtime, some kind of a tonic known to be a system purifier and of reconstructive properties.

Already many people, who have adopted the habit of taking a tonic each spring and have learned how vastly beneficial it is, are looking for the best preparation on the market to take this season.

Scores who have begun the use of Tanlac, the remarkable new reconstructive tonic and system purifier, praise the new medicine as the best Spring preparation they ever tried.

Tanlac does its work quickly. It speedily attacks the impurities in the blood that might, if left alone, bring serious results. It builds up the tissues broken down by the daily battle of your physical self against extreme weather conditions. It brings about the proper digestion and assimilation of food at the same time throwing off any decayed matter that might have accumulated.

In fact, Tanlac literally drives from the body the impurities accumulated during Winter's siege.

"IT'S SPLENDID," WOMAN ASSERTS

"Tanlac is simply splendid—that's the very least I could possibly say," Mrs. J. C. Vogel, St. Louis woman of 4763 Maffit avenue, said on May 10.

"For three years I haven't been able to eat any meats or greasy foods because of my stomach," she continued. "I also suffered severely from rheumatism in my right arm. It seems that Tanalac has benefited my entire system, though. I have a fine appetite now—hungry all the time—and no matter what the food, it agrees with me and digests perfectly. The rheumatic pains have been greatly relieved."

TANLAC The Master Medicine

is now being explained to the St. Louis public by an expert at the Seventh and St. Charles streets store of the Johnson-Enderle-Pauley Drug Co. K. OF C. QUARTERS AT BARRACKS OPEN TODAY

First Mass Will Be Said; Formal Opening Is Set for June 17.

The Knights of Columbus Field headquarters at Jefferson Barracks will be formally opened June 17 by the Rev. Father McFadden, representative of the Catholic interests at this army station. Work on the building, which is 50x90 feet, has progressed so far that the first entertainments will be given in it next week.

After the formal opening of the building, entertainments will be given two or three times a week. The first mass will be said in the building today. The building was erected by the Knights of Columbus at the request of Father McFadden so that the soldiers of the Catholic faith would receive the same religious and moral care as the Young Men's Christian Association affords for soldiers of the Protestant faith.

Father McFadden said that about 40 per cent of the soldiers were Catholics, and that the post chapel is entirely too small. The headquarters were authorized by the Knights of Columbus at their convention in St. Louis in May, and the Supreme officers of the State, under the chairmanship of State Deputy Joseph Kane were appointed as a committee to supervise the work. This committee, with Father McFadden, John Riordan, Sidney Lee, John E. O'Reilly and R. P. Sheehy, made the plans for and has had charge of the erection of the building.

The building will be pavilion shaped, with the front and sides screened. The altar will be portable, so that it may be moved to more convenient places if it is necessary to seat crowds around the building, as well as in it. Writing material and magazines will be placed in the pavilion for the use of the soldiers. At the formal opening the Knights of Columbus Choral Club will sing, and the members of the order will participate in the ceremonies.

GERMAN RESERVISTS FAIL IN THEIR WAR MISSION IN MEXICO

But the able work of the army comes to naught and the situation is saved for the United States because the diplomatic end of the German machine failed in its part of the work. This has happened before in German affairs. If the situation becomes desperate again, it will be because of things done by Mexicans or Americans, not because of things done by Germans. The failure of Germany to make its diplomatic friendship sure has rendered useless and worthless all the efforts of the military. The blundering Zimmerman note was only a hurried and desperate attempt to bring about an alliance that should have been made two years ago if the military program was to be supported properly, and it showed on its face that the needful diplomatic preparation had not been made. Indeed I believe it is beyond the power of the Germans now on the American continent, and probably beyond any other human power, to combine and weld the various revolutionary factions in Mexico. Their chiefs are many and none has any particular power. Any dangerous blow at the United States must be launched from Mexico City.

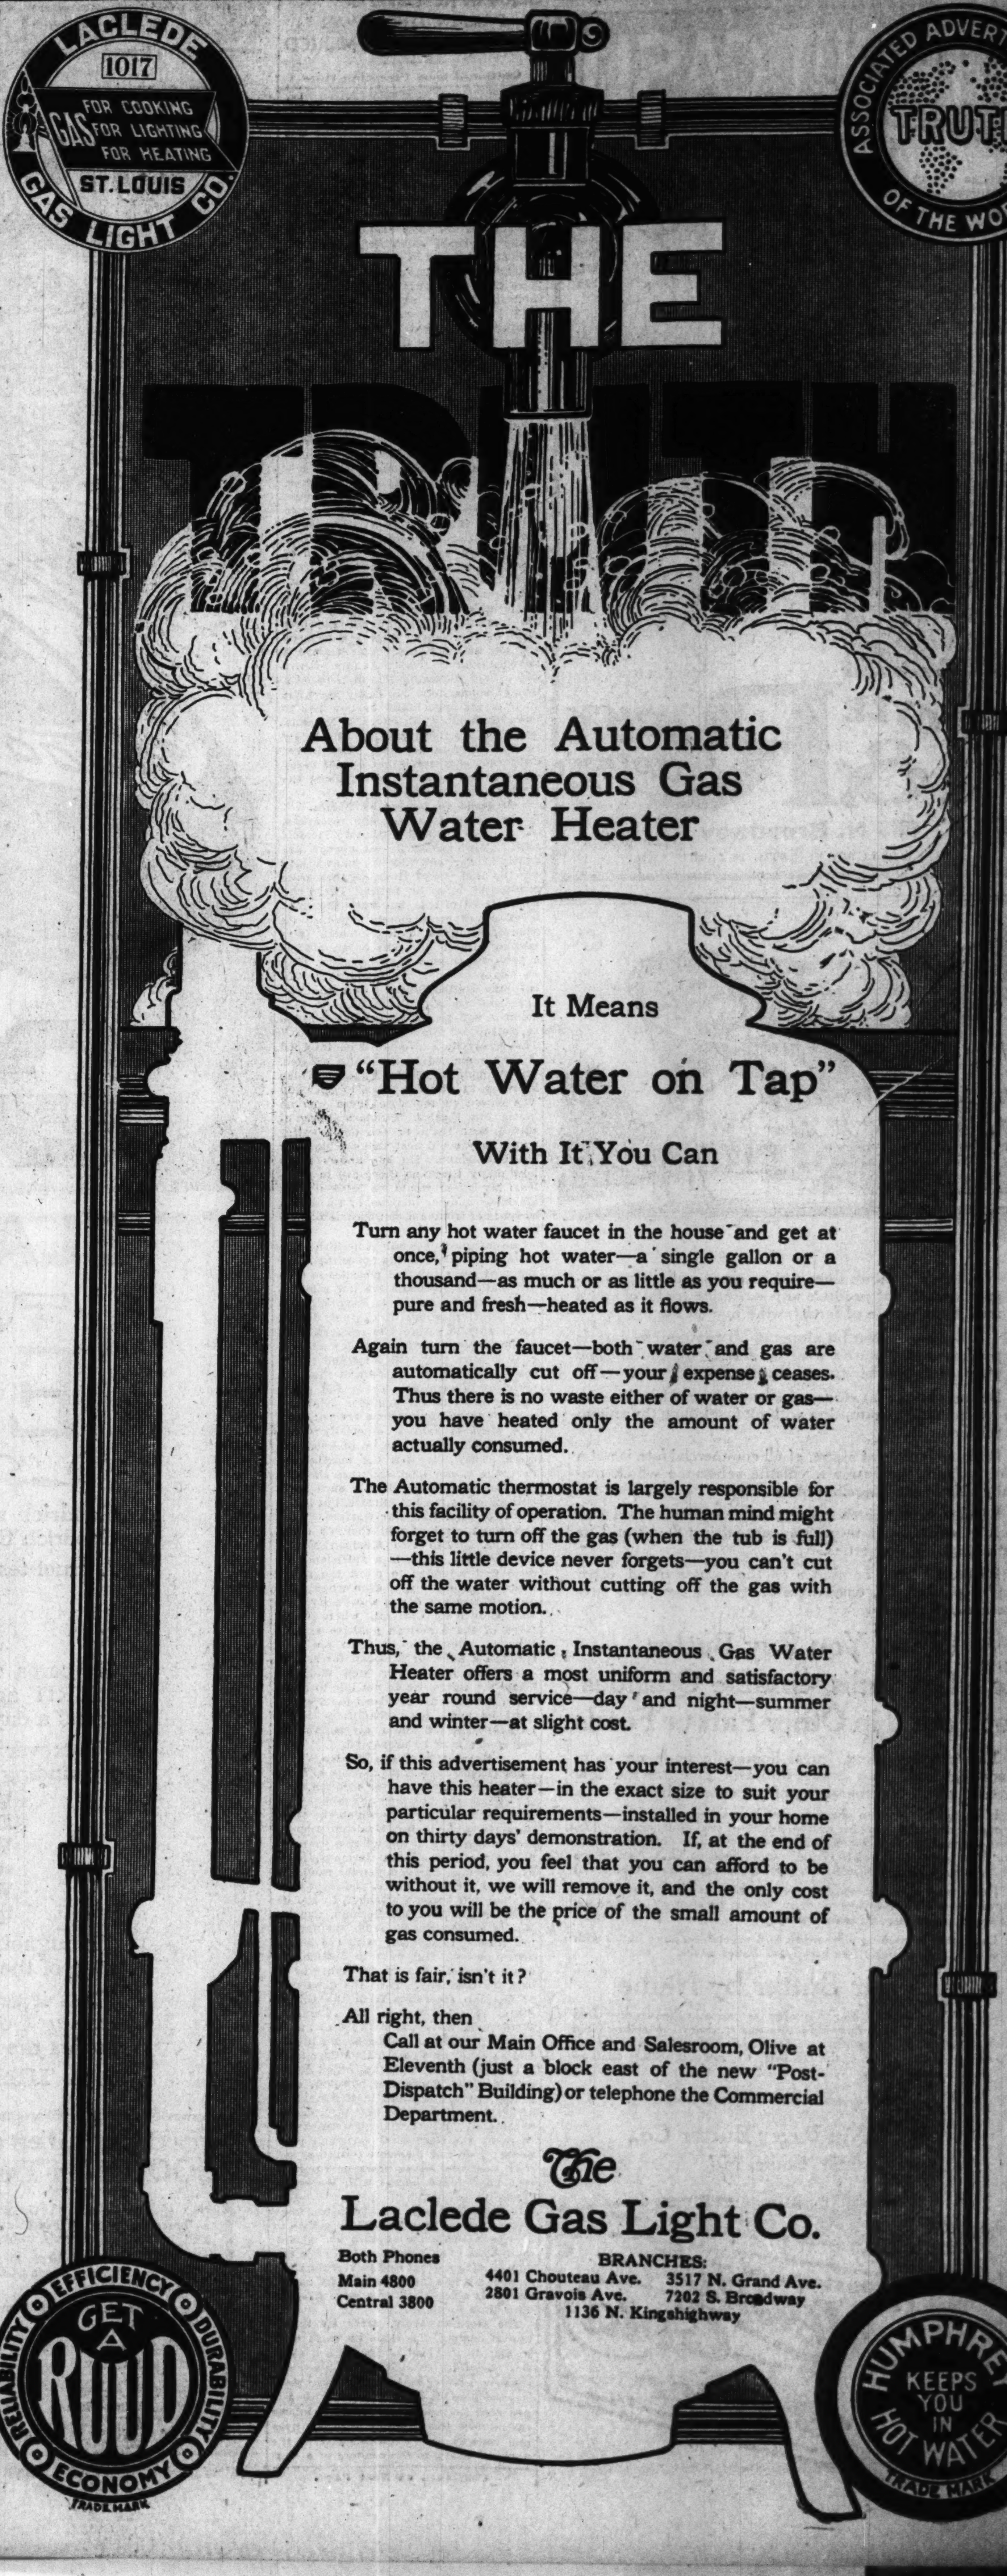
Mexican diplomacy is a "smooth and slickery" thing. Mexico City, usually, makes Washington look silly in a letter-writing contest. President Carranza is an old man of many faults, but of a bull-headedness which is a shining virtue, a trait, in many cases, that admirably takes the place of force and ability. He appreciates, and Gen. Obregon, commander of his armies and his Secretary of War and Navy, appreciates even more fully, that if Mexico stays out of trouble with the United States now, the prospect for a continued peace is very bright, but that if Mexico does get in now as an enemy of the United States, no matter what the outcome of the European war, a tremendous housecleaning will take place in Mexico. I have unquestioned authority for the statement that Obregon has striven earnestly to have Mexico declare sympathy with the United States in going to war with Germany. The announcement of neutrality was Carranza's idea and he doggedly clung to it.

Cannot Cause Much Trouble.

Germany, therefore, no longer has the power to cause us much trouble in Mexico. Her financial resources are limited on this side of the water, and she cannot transport arms and ammunition in sufficient quantities to make an offer of such assistance attractive to Mexico. Submarine bases, of course, may be established along the Mexican coast, and Governors of Mexican states may wink at them. The destruction of such bases, however, is an easy task for our navy, for the central Mexican Government has no ships with which to protect its neutrality.

"German influence" in Mexico City receives much notice in American newspapers. It is always about to do something particularly destructive to American interests, and its power is small or great as each individual piece of writing finds it necessary to magnify or minimize it. I confess that I do not know how powerful this influence is, but I am confident that its strivings will be useless as long as the iron band around the German empire continues to tighten its grip. If Germany should succeed in loosening this choking band by striking down one of its enemies, and should appear to be winning the war, German influence in Mexico City would strengthen accordingly, and in the event of a German victory, Mexico might become overconfident and force a war with the United States. But Mexico will not cast its lot with one international outlaw which the rest of the world has combined to crush; it certainly will not while the one outlaw is losing; the ties between Germany and Mexico are not strong enough for that.

Our Southern neighbor may bluster, and swagger somewhat, but it will behave itself while this war proceeds.



THE TRUTH

About the Automatic Instantaneous Gas Water Heater

It Means

"Hot Water on Tap"

With It You Can

Turn any hot water faucet in the house and get at once, piping hot water—a single gallon or a thousand—as much or as little as you require—pure and fresh—heated as it flows.

Again turn the faucet—both water and gas are automatically cut off—your expense ceases. Thus there is no waste either of water or gas—you have heated only the amount of water actually consumed.

The Automatic thermostat is largely responsible for this facility of operation. The human mind might forget to turn off the gas (when the tub is full)—this little device never forgets—you can't cut off the water without cutting off the gas with the same motion.

Thus, the Automatic Instantaneous Gas Water Heater offers a most uniform and satisfactory year round service—day and night—summer and winter—at slight cost.

So, if this advertisement has your interest—you can have this heater—in the exact size to suit your particular requirements—installed in your home on thirty days' demonstration. If, at the end of this period, you feel that you can afford to be without it, we will remove it, and the only cost to you will be the price of the small amount of gas consumed.

That is fair, isn't it?

All right, then

MORE DEMOCRACY IN JAPAN URGED BY COUNT OKUMA

Bureaucratic Statesmen Seem Blind to Political Currents of World, He Says.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

TOKIO, May 1.—"Bureaucratic statesmen of Japan seem blind to the political currents of the world and try to stem the rising tide by means of old-fashioned ideas and exploded doctrines," asserted Marquis Shigenobu Okuma, the former Premier and opponent of the present Terauchi administration, in commenting upon the political situation in Japan and the recent election. In this election the Terauchi government was victorious.

Absence of a strong controlling power was not seriously felt in Japan, added Marquis Okuma. The consequence was, in his opinion, that the people have no fixed or stable political views and change their opinions with chameleon-like rapidity.

The former Premier remarked that about 15 years ago, when Prince Katsura was at the head of the Government, the work of the Russian scholar, Mr. Podiedonotseff, in support of despotism was translated into Japanese and printed copies of the translation were distributed among all the Government officials throughout Japan. Subsequently, as the result of war with Japan, Russia became a constitutional country, but among the Japanese there are some who are still intoxicated with Podiedonotseff's political philosophy.

The result, he said, is that statesmen who are imbued with these political doctrines try to stand aloof from political parties, ignore the rights of the Diet, and bring public opinion into submission to official authority. In Russia, too, he declared, there were some statesmen who believed in the virtues of Pobiedonotseff's political philosophy, and tried to carry on a despotic system of administration. The result had been the downfall of the Romanoff dynasty. It is not only in Russia, he declared, but also in Germany—a hotbed of bureaucracy—that bureaucratic statesmen appear to be awakening to the poltical needs of the age. The ex-Premier continued:

"There appears to be nobody anxious to lick a healthy public opinion into shape and lead it along the right paths. Politicians, scholars and religionists alike are in one comprehensive mass of lethargy and degeneration, and an effective power to control society is entirely nonexistent. In the midst of the general degeneration, however, a great credit should be accorded to the press for the way in which it is endeavoring to bring a healthy public opinion into existence. The fate of the Japanese people will not be decided by the recent general election. Sometimes the unjust may assume ascendency over the just. Political progress in Japan in any marked degree can hardly be expected till an effective controlling power appears in society."

He believed that, to further the progress of constitutional government in Japan, measures should be taken to develop the political thought of the nation, which is now in a condition of chaos.

PLASTERERS DECLARE HOLIDAY

Plan to Participate in the Liberty Loan Bond.

Members of the Operative Plasterers' Local No. 3, by a unanimous vote have decided to regard registration day, Tuesday, as a holiday. They will hold a meeting tomorrow night to decide how much of the funds of the union they would invest in the Liberty bonds. Edward L. Smyth, secretary of the union, said that he thought they would take $2000 worth of bonds.

Fourteen members of the union have joined the United States service and the union voted to keep them in good standing while they are at the front and to allow them the usual $300 death benefit in case any are killed.

A Big Opportunity for the Right Man

The Riley-Schubert Grossman Company BRANCH
RSG

We Are Establishing 5000 Service Branches In U.S.

We want one man in your town and general community to take charge of The Riley-Schubert-Grossman Company's local Service Branch—to represent this great $5,000,000 mail order company—to handle all our business where you live.

Not necessary to buy merchandise, or have experience. We do the selling, advertising work—you superintend the business that comes in. We rent and furnish an office for you. Right over your desk you may handle $20,000 to $50,000 in mail orders a year.

Remember, we back you with the great stocks of merchandise of the fastest growing mail order house in Chicago. Our big catalogs—which go into city and farm homes everywhere—list thousands of bargains in Apparel, Household Supplies, Furniture, Groceries, Machinery, Farm Implements, Automobile Supplies, etc., etc.

We assume all expense—therefore must have a trustworthy manager who can be depended upon to accept and O. K. orders accompanied by big sums of money.

To ONE Man in Your Town

—we offer this unusual opportunity. You may be the man we want—a retired merchant or farmer or ex-rural free delivery man, or bright ambitious young man.

Do not answer unless you enjoy a reputation above reproach. If you are the right man we can make you the leading merchant of your locality.

We are going to decide the matter quickly.

HOW TO JUDGE A WOMAN BY HER HAIR

There is real common sense in just noticing whether the hair is well kept to judge of a woman's neatness, or good taste. If you are one of the few who try to make the most of your hair, remember that it is not advisable to wash the hair with any cleanser made for all purposes, but alwnys use some good preparation made expressly for shampooing. You can enjoy the very best by getting some canthrox from your druggist, dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. This makes a full cup of shampoo liquid, enough so it is easy to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head. Dandruff, excess oil, and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its luster and softness will also delight you, while the stimulated scalp gains the health which insures hair growth.—ADV.

New Home Treatment for Banishing Hairs

(Beauty Topics)

With the aid of a delatone paste it is an easy matter for any woman to remove every trace of hair or fuzz from face, neck and arms. Enough of the powdered delatone and water is mixed into a thick paste and spread on the hairy surface for about 2 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed. This completely removes the hair, but to avoid disappointment, get the delatone in an original package.—ADV.

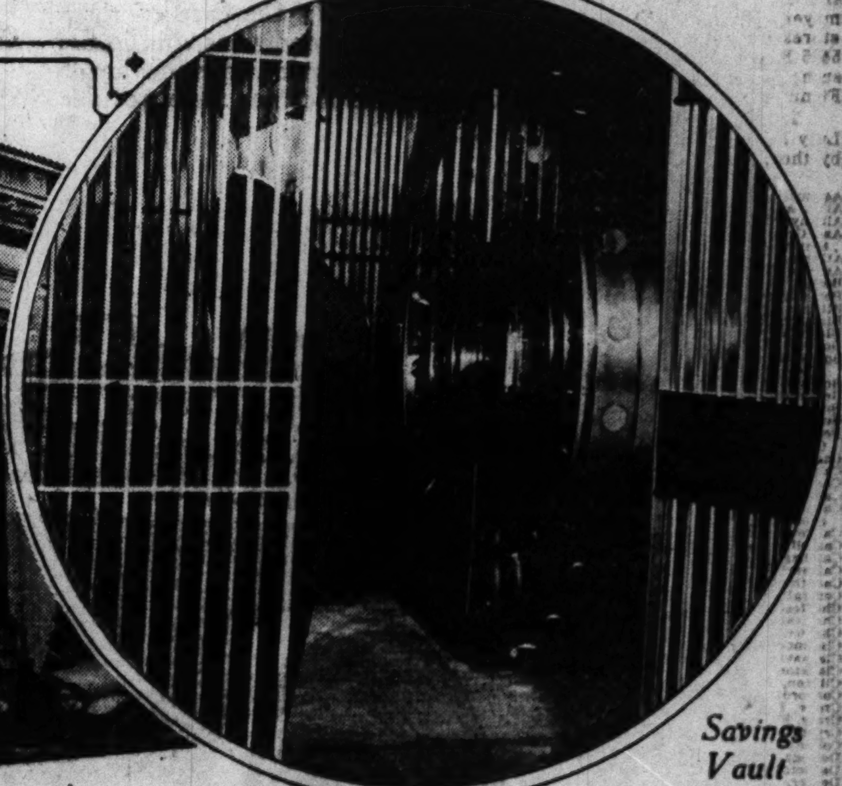
FRANKLIN BANK



Savings Vault

THE FRANKLIN BANK commenced business May 1, 1867, at Sixth Street and Franklin avenue, as the Franklin Avenue German Savings Instituion, with an authorized capital of $200,000, of which $60,000 was paid in.

In 1880 it occupied the corner at Fourth and Morgan streets, its name having been changed in December, 1879, to Franklin Bank.

The history of the Franklin Bank is a record of continuous success, evidenced by the fact of the growth of the original $60,000, with which it was started, to one and a third million dollars—solely through the accumulation of surplus profits.

Today its resources are $8,300,000 in round figures, and its deposits total $7,000,000.

Welcome, Visiting Delegates of A. A. C. of W.

FRANKLIN BANK

Invite You to Their New Banking Offices at the Northeast Corner of Washington Avenue and Broadway

Come at Your Convenience Between the Hours of Nine O'Clock in the Morning and Four O'Clock in the Afternoon.

ITS safe deposit vaults in the new building have eighteen-inch walls of steel and concrete, 300,000 pounds of plate steel lining, two seventeen-ton steel doors, twenty-four locking bolts that enter frames of manganese steel—and latest improved time locks, making them the very best vaults that can be built. In them are batteries of safe deposit boxes of many sizes to meet the requirements of its customers.

The occupancy of its new home, with its complete modern equipment, is but another step in the steady progress that has characterized the development of the Franklin Bank since its doors were thrown open to the public, a half century ago.

The Franklin Bank invites the opening of new accounts by individuals and firms, to whom every accommodation will be extended that is consistent with good banking practice.

Present Low Price of Jeffery Six Can Only Be Maintained While Our Stock of Materials Lasts

So this is your opportunity if you act quickly. When our materials, bought over a year ago, are gone, you can't buy this Jeffery Six, worth $150 to $200 more, at the present low price. Take advantage of this saving now. See this car. Place Your Order at Once.

NASH
Jeffery MOTORS

YOU have watched automobile prices go up and up.

The newspapers have been full of price-raising announcements. Already forty-four manufacturers have been forced to make advances of from $75 to $200.

These, we believe, were honestly necessary. They were based almost entirely on the increased cost of parts and raw materials.

Now materials and parts are still advancing—and in conjunction with the proposed government war tax, will unquestionably force motor car prices to still higher levels.

Here is where The Nash Motors Company has a tremendous advantage over companies which merely assemble cars. Ninety-three per cent of every Jeffery Six is made right in the Nash plant, from raw materials.

So you see we are practically unaffected by the rise in the cost of parts. And although during the past six months all raw materials have advanced in cost 20 to 50 per cent we have been protected on the raw material side, too.

Because we build ninety-three per cent of every Jeffery Six in our own plant we buy these materials far in advance and in huge quantities.

That is why in the face of these many abnormal conditions, and in the face of the tremendous advance made in materials, it does not seem possible that we can sell the Jeffery Six at $1465 for long—certainly not after our present stock of materials, bought over a year ago, is used up.

This is your opportunity! While we maintain this present price on Jeffery Six you can simply figure that you save a clear $150 to $200 by buying now.

For if the Jeffery Six were to be advanced in price in keeping with prices advanced by makers of other fine cars, you would have to pay just that amount to get this wonderful car.

So we say—act now. There are two good reasons why you should see your nearest Jeffery dealer and place your order at once. The first is that you have an unparalleled opportunity to buy this Jeffery Six—the finest car in its field—at from $150 to $200 below its real market value in view of present conditions.

The second reason is that the demand for this car is surpassing our expectations. We are hard pressed now to fill orders. The steadily rising prices of competing cars are driving home every day in the minds of people the truly unusual value of Jeffery Six.

Now as to the car itself. There is little we need to say about it to you now. You know the name this Jeffery Six has won for being a marvelously performing car. No car in its price class can match the service it will give you.

Ask any Jeffery owner what he thinks of his Jeffery Six. He will tell you that he has found it practically impossible to wear this car out. He will tell you that after long, hard service the body is tight and that repair costs are negligible.

He will tell you, too, that the motor keeps fit—that its flexibility and quick pick-up seem to improve with use. He will tell you that its streamlines are strictly the vogue. He will tell you that its second-hand value is higher after several years' wear than of most cars of its price class which have seen only half that service.

Remember—this is the Jeffery Six revised, improved and backed with unqualified endorsement, by The Nash Motors Company. We cannot maintain this price indefinitely. That is certain.

So you see it is the wise thing, the shrewd thing, the bit of good business on your part to see your nearest Jeffery dealer and place your order for a Jeffery Six at once.

Do this now. Don't delay. Then you will know that you have bought the biggest value in the motor car market today.

One more word! See your dealer—place your order—get your Jeffery Six at $1465.

AIM AND OBJECT OF ADVERTISING CLUBS OF WORLD

Basic Purpose Is Education and Influence Has Been for Better Business Methods.

BELIEVE IN TRUTH

"Advertising Lowers Cost of Distribution," Slogan for Convention Here.

By Anita Moore.

Official Press Representative of the Thirteenth Annual Convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

What is the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World? What is its purpose? Why is this great body of business men and women assembled in St. Louis in convention for the thirteenth time, at this time of the nation's stress and unrest? What manner of men compose its membership, that the President of the United States would impose such great confidence in them as is expressed in his greeting under date of May 14, 1917? This is what he said:

> May I not congratulate the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World upon their purpose to assist in mobilizing the best thought and promoting greater activity in all lines of business in these times of stress and exigency?
> It would be of the greatest benefit if the convention could be employed to steady business and clear the air of doubts and misgivings in order to make for greater unity of purpose in winning the war for democracy and civilization.

The object of the association, as set forth in its constitution, is "to amalgamate advertising organizations into a central body for the purpose of furthering the best interests in advertising."

The Associated Advertising Clubs of the World was organized by men of big ideas and higher ideals. Men who believed in the ethics of business and practiced their belief. The tremendous growth of this organization is due to the high standard of practice set by the organizers and high principles sustained throughout. The basic purposes of the Association is education, and its influence has been a power for better business methods throughout the world. The founders recognized in advertising a rare combination of business, profession and science. These three powerful elements compounded into one, formed the greatest and most vital force in the world's progress and development, a force which was being dissipated and misused because of lack of proper appreciation and lack of understanding.

Raise Ethics of Business.

To conserve this vital force for the best service of mankind they have taken advertising and reduced it to a science, which they apply skilfully and professionally, and through their educational propaganda and vigilant committee have raised sordid business, through ethics, to a level with other dignified and honorable professions.

Not content to rest upon the achievement of raising the business standards of the country, the Association adopted a Declaration of Principles, which in part, is:

"We believe in Truth, the cornerstone of all honorable and successful business, and we pledge ourselves each to one and one to all to make this the foundation of our dealings, to the end that our mutual relations may become still more harmonious and efficient.

"We believe in Truth, not only in the printed word, but in every phase of business connected with the creation, publication and dissemination of advertising."

Of this declaration, President Wilson, when in St. Louis, Feb. 3, 1916, said in his address at the Hotel Jefferson:

"America will be successful if she is righteous. You know the advertising men of this country have banded themselves together to see that all advertising speaks the truth. In the business field of this country we have gone it a little too strong, and we are beginning to realize that after all, facts are best. We cannot long deceive our customers, as they will soon find out the real quality of our goods."

It is the purpose of the A. A. C. of W. to advertise advertising. With this object in view, the Association presents in its Thirteenth Annual Convention, systematically and comprehensively, to the public, facts in regard to advertising, its nature, its purposes, its powers through every medium known to the experts of the Association.

"Advertising Lower Cost of Distribution" was selected as the theme of the Thirteenth Annual Convention of the A. A. C. of W. to demonstrate to the buying public the working principles—ethical, as well as material—that underlie advertising; how through constructive advertising the manufacturer has been able to multiply his productions to such a magnitude as to reduce the cost of production.

After an article has been manufactured the next problem is to get it before the consumer. Through the economic and far-reaching medium of advertising the producer is able to present his product to a greater number of people and over a wider territory than by any other method; thus creating a greater demand and a broader market for his wares at a minimum cost.

Advertised Article Half Sold.

The manufacturer who has a wide distribution for his product, built up largely through the medium of advertising, can have a better equipped establishment and can operate at less expense than the small manufacturer who does not advertise. Advertising has reduced the cost of selling, in that the product is made known to the buying public through advertising channels. The advertised article is half sold and requires less individual effort on the part of the personal salesman.

The public has confidence in the widely advertised product, and this is largely due to the work of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, which insists that the manufacturer's product shall absolutely measure up to all advertised statements; that the ideals conceived by the founders of this great educational and constructive body shall be preserved.

This acumen is the result of constant study and research. Every successful advertising campaign is the product of weeks, months, perhaps a year's careful study, analysis and preparation, not of one individual, but by several persons. The product of not one but many minds, the best thought of each compounded into a perfect whole. The advertising organization must be composed of men who possess an inexhaustible fund of general information, keen merchandising sense, quick comprehension and most important of all analytical minds. And yet, three other qualities are essential—courage forbearance and unfailing good humor.

A new, or perhaps an established but unsuccessful, business is under consideration. The business is studied, the commodity—if it is an article of manufacture or production. Next the elements which enter into it, such as the method of production, the location of the business, the equipment of the plant, its capacity, the materials used in the production—their production accessibility, quantity and quality, etc. The merchandising possibilities are studied, such as the market for the product; the channels of distribution and consumption, the requirements and tastes, the habits of the buying public in the district where it is proposed to sell the products and the transportation channels and the best advertising mediums.

After all this information has been gathered a brief is made. The campaign is planned and the writers and artists begin to prepare copy based upon the facts contained in the brief.

Work of Many Minds.

The copy is dissected and analyzed, commended or condemned; or perhaps it may be shelved, much as a chemist sets aside his experiment for months to let "it ripen," when it is again taken down and the entire advertising staff will take turns in "shooting" at it for the second time. More study and further investigation may be deemed necessary by the powers that be—which may be the president of the organization, the artist, writer or salesman, for be it ever remembered that the great and interesting advertisements, which hold the attention of the reading and buying public are composite productions of many minds—and further consideration is given the subject.

The investigation may take advertising experts to the mines, the forests, the agricultural districts, into cities; the study and research may lead to a study of the Bible, ancient history, medicine, into laboratories of chemists, scientists and men of medicine, into the United States Departments of Agriculture, Mines, Fisheries, Livestock Industry, etc., or even in foreign countries. Neither expense, trouble or time are spared in learning the facts in the case, that the great fundamental principle—"truth in advertising"—be maintained.

The growth and development of advertising is one of the wonders of modern times; its numerous and peculiar ramifications have extended into every line of commerce, industry, finance, science, art, education and even religion; its influence is felt by every man, woman and child who reads the printed page; its conduct involves the expenditure of incredible millions, yet is but imperfectly understood by the vast majority of people. Through the deliberations of the thirteenth annual convention of this powerful organization, the A. A. C. of W., its leaders hope to disseminate a knowledge of its principles.

When the basic principles of advertising are understood, there is small wonder at its marvelous development, and its omnipotent power.

Not Game of Chance.

Advertising is not a game of chance. It is one of the real basic fundamentals upon which the progress and development of the world is built. It involves a study and application of business, industry, commerce, science, art and literature. It is a dignified and important "profession-business," that is, it is a rare combination where the highest business acumen and a knowledge of art, science and literature are applied in a thoroughly professional manner to the world's affairs.

The advertising man of today is a skilled diagnostitian of business symptoms, well versed in political economy. His hand is ever on the pulse of business and public affairs; his eyes are ever watchful, his ears ever listening; his mind ever alert, he is the first to note symptoms of deterioration, sluggishness, loss, evidence of decay. Like a skilled physician he questions, examines and then prescribes and applies his remedy.

This acumen is the result of constant study and research. Advertising is surely as much of a science as medicine and law, to be able to apply the knowledge of the science of advertising is truly as professional as the application of the knowledge of the science of medicine. The skillful application of the science of advertising means the increase of business, production, commerce, industry and profits, thereby adding to the world's wealth.

If Jonathan Swift could write of a voyage to the thirteenth annual convention of the A. A. C. of W. he would surely write another up-to-the-minute axiom which would perhaps read: "Whoever can make one hundred times the commodity, or fifty times the industry to be produced in a factory, where only one article was made and onep erson was employed, would deserve better of mankind, and do more essential service to his country, than the whole race of politicians put together."

Commerce is the life blood of the world. The greater the commerce the more virile and powerful the nation. Advertising is the force that moves commerce.

It has become the barometer of a man's banking credit. Festus J. Wade, St. Louis, president of the Mercantile Trust Co. and the Mercantile National Bank, in a recent public address, said:

"When we see a man cutting down his advertising, we cut down on his credit."

Advertising Courses in Schools.

It is recognized and held in high esteem by the leading educators of the country. Last year the University of Pennsylvania opened its doors to the twelfth annual convention of the A. A. C. of W., giving over the buildings for the various departmentals and general sessions. Washington University was offered to the Convention Board of the Advertising Club of St. Louis for the housing of the thirteenth annual convention. The great distance of the university from the business district, in the judgment of the Convention Board made it impractical to hold the convention there other than the Big Sunday Inspirational Meeting, June 3. Many of the leading colleges and universities have advertising courses in their curricula.

The efficacy of advertising is recognized by the clergy in uplift work. An eminent divine recently—Bishop Warren A. Candler, dean of the Emery University, Atlanta, Ga., said that he considered advertising next to the church in power for good to mankind. The church departmental, composed of leading members of the clergy, will consider the subject of advertising as pertinent to religion and uplift work, as a part of the thirteenth annual convention. Dr. Christian F. Reisner of New York, pastor of the Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, is chairman of the church departmental.

The advertising men are fully cognizant of their responsibility and render conscientious service to the public; they have set a very high standard for all users of advertising, which the association insists upon being maintained.

They recognize the importance of their position in holding their thirteenth annual convention, held at this time of stress, unrest and exigency of the nation. This great body of brainy, capable business men is the cynosure of the entire world. The deliberation and acts of this body in convention are of vital importance not only to the United States, but to the entire world. The European Governments and people are watching the proceedings of this body with as much interest and expectancy as they are the acts and deliberations of the august body assembled in Washington, D. C.

Its proceedings will undoubtedly leave a profound impression upon the world. No greater opportunity has ever been offered to business America than that which is visualized by President Wilson, "To clear the air of doubts and misgivings," "To steady business," "Promoting greater activity in all lines of business in these times of stress and exigency," and last, but not least, "To win the great war for democracy and civilization."

Playing Part in War.

Advertising is playing an important part in the world's great tragic war. Both England and France have employed its force to mobilize their armies and resources in this great conflict. In England 5,000,000 bond buyers were secured for the $5,000,000,000 Victory Loan through advertising.

A similar campaign is now being conducted in the United States to float the $2,000,000,000 Liberty Loan bond issue. The National Advisory Board of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World tendered their services free to the United States Government to make the broadest possible market for the Liberty Loan bonds. The board was organized for the sole purpose of rendering patriotic service to the nation during the war and commands the membership of the A. A. C. of W., 16,000 members, all trained in selling and merchandising and advertising.

The National Advisory Advertising Board studied and investigated the crisis confronting the nation, studied its needs and applied all of their knowledge and experience in working out, selling and merchandising the campaign. The board of 25 members are from every section of the country, and their business and official connection is evidence of their capacity and character.

Among the leaders in the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World who will take an active part in the thirteenth annual convention are: Officers—Herbert S. Houston, New York (Doubleday, Page & Co.), president; Lafayette Young Jr., Des Moines, Ia. (Des Moines Capital), vice president; P. S. Florea, Indianapolis, Ind. (Merchants' Bank Building), secretary-treasurer. Executive Committee—William Woodhead, New York City (American Weekly Magazine); Walter B. Cherry, Syracuse, N. Y. (Merrell-Soule Co.); W. W. Cloud, Baltimore, Md. (State Bank of Maryland); Frank A. Balck, Boston, Mass. (William Filene's Sons Co.); William G. Rose, Cleveland, O. (505 Chamber of Commerce Building); J. Clyde Oswald, New York City (American Printer); Frank H. Rowe, Toronto, Ont. (E. L. Ruddy Co., Ltd.); A. E. Chamberlain, New York (39 East Twenty-eighth street); W. C. D'Arcy, St. Louis, Mo. (D'Arcy Advertising Co.); O. C. Harn, New York City (National Lead Co.); William H. Johns, New York City (the George Batten Co.); Wilson H. Lee, New Haven, Conn. (Price & Lee); Kerwin H. Fulton, New York City (Van Bouren & New York Bill Posting Co.)

The Convention Board of the Advertising Club of St. Louis deserves unusual credit for its foresightedness in insisting that the thirteenth annual convention should be held as scheduled, instead of canceling it, as did many other big and important organizations on account of the war. The men who are largely responsible for this are: J. F. Oberwinder, general director; John Ring Jr., George M. Burbach, associate directors; Festus J. Wade, director of finance; W. C. D'Arcy, treasurer; M. P. Linn, president Advertising Club of St. Louis, and H. E. Myers, general secretary.

RAILWAY SUPPLIES BUSINESS VOLUME GROWS TO $18,000,000

Exports to Europe Small, but South and Central America Bought Large Quantities.

St. Louis is one of the most important points in the United States for the manufacture and distribution of railway supplies, and the total volume of business in these lines in 1916 was the largest on record, exceeding by 50 per cent the business of 1915.

Beginning the year with a good increase, each month's business was larger than the one which preceded it, and prospects are bright for again breaking all records in 1917.

There was practically no export business to Europe, but South and Central America took large quantities of railway supplies, and it is estimated that the total volume of business in 1916 amounted to over $18,000,000.

St. Louis' receipts of flour in 1916, 4,493,235 barrels. Flour shipped in 1916, 5,288,930 barrels.

WOMEN SHARE IN CONVENTION ON ADVERTISING

Conference Is Set for Afternoon of June 4 at Mercantile Club Building.

PROGRAM IS PREPARED

Various Phases of the Profession to Be Discussed by Speakers of St. Louis and Elsewhere.

Advertising women will have a part in the thirteenth annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World which will be held in St. Louis this week. The Advertising Women's Conference will meet in the Advertising Club headquarters, Mercantile Club building, Seventh and Locust streets, Monday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, June 4.

Conference is composed of six distinctive advertising women's organizations affiliated with the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World. Some of the men's affiliated advertising clubs admit women actively engaged in the advertising profession to full membership. This privilege is a matter of local policy.

The Advertising Club of St. Louis does not admit women to membership. The member of the Women's Advertising Club of St. Louis, however, are admitted to all business sesions, and entertainments, and to all departmentals of the A. A. C. of W. at its thirteenth annual convention.

Many Women Succeed.

A large number of women have entered the advertising field and many are entirely successful. It is but natural that a woman should succeed in the advertising profession, in that 80 per cent of the incomes are dispersed by women, and a clever woman advertising writer, the women argue, know better the text that would appeal to women than men. Women are writing all lines of advertising, from household commodities and conveniences to safety razors, men's wearing apparel, automobiles and heavy machinery.

Miss Jane J. Martin, New York, advertising manager for the Sperry-Hutchinson Co., is the chairman of the Advertising Women's Conference. She is one of the highest salaried advertising writers in this country, as she receives $10,000 a year. She started as a $10 a week stenographer. In a recent interview Miss Martin said.

"I believe there is a big field for women in advertising. There are about 250 advertising women in New York, including ten or a dozen managers. The rest are agency women, artists, layout women and solicitors. Women have official standing in the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

"There has been a prejudice against women in advertising, but it is disappearing. More than 50 per cent of the business men of today are willing to let a woman go just as far as her ability will take her.

"The business woman needs the man's point of view, which means, in my opinion, breadth, tolerance and impersonality. Personally, I do not believe women will get anywhere by believing they can do without a man's point of view."

What One Has Done.

Miss Olive Cole, Boston, Mass., is advertising manager for the Gillette Razor Co. Miss Cole's latest advertising venture for her company has been the invasion of Russia, where she expects to "whisk the whiskers" off of the Russians. She has recently sent 25,000 razors and 3,000,000 blades into the land of bewhiskered men.

Miss Sara I. Black, corresponding secretary of the Philadelphia Club of Advertising Women, began publicity work as a writer on the Public Ledger, Philadelphia. Her first advertising experience was in Los Angeles. She now has an advertising agency of her own.

The officers and members of the Women's Advertising Club of St. Louis, which is the youngest organization, are: Miss Daisy E. Nirdlinger, president; Miss Elizabeth Cueny, vice president; Miss Florence Burk, secretary, and Miss Mabel Copley, treasurer. Other members are Misses A. Avery, Edna Amrein, Anita Moore, Mary Semple Scott, Lillian Dudley, V. A. L. Jones, I. N. Bohannon, Mrs. Julia S. Carroll, Miss Mamie Gerhard, Mrs. M. W. Huyette, Mrs. S. M. Beers, Mrs. H. E. Wagoner and Miss Louise LeNoir Thomas.

Three of its members have been honored by the National Program Commitee by being placed on the program for the women's conference. They are Miss Anita Moore, press representative of the convention board of the Advertising Club of St. Louis for the thirteenth annual convention, who conducts her own publicity bureau in the Railway Exchange Building; Miss Daisy E. Nirdlinger, one of the most successful and best-known advertising solicitors in the city and secretary of the Fisher-Steinbruegge Advertising Co., and Miss Mamie Gerhard of the Gerhard Sisters, photographers.

Program of Session.

The afternoon program for the women's conference is as follows:

2:00 Reports.
2:15 Selling the thirteenth annual convention to St. Louis as a community, Miss Anita Moore, St. Louis.
2:30 "The Awakened Woman," Miss D. E. Nirdlinger, St. Louis.

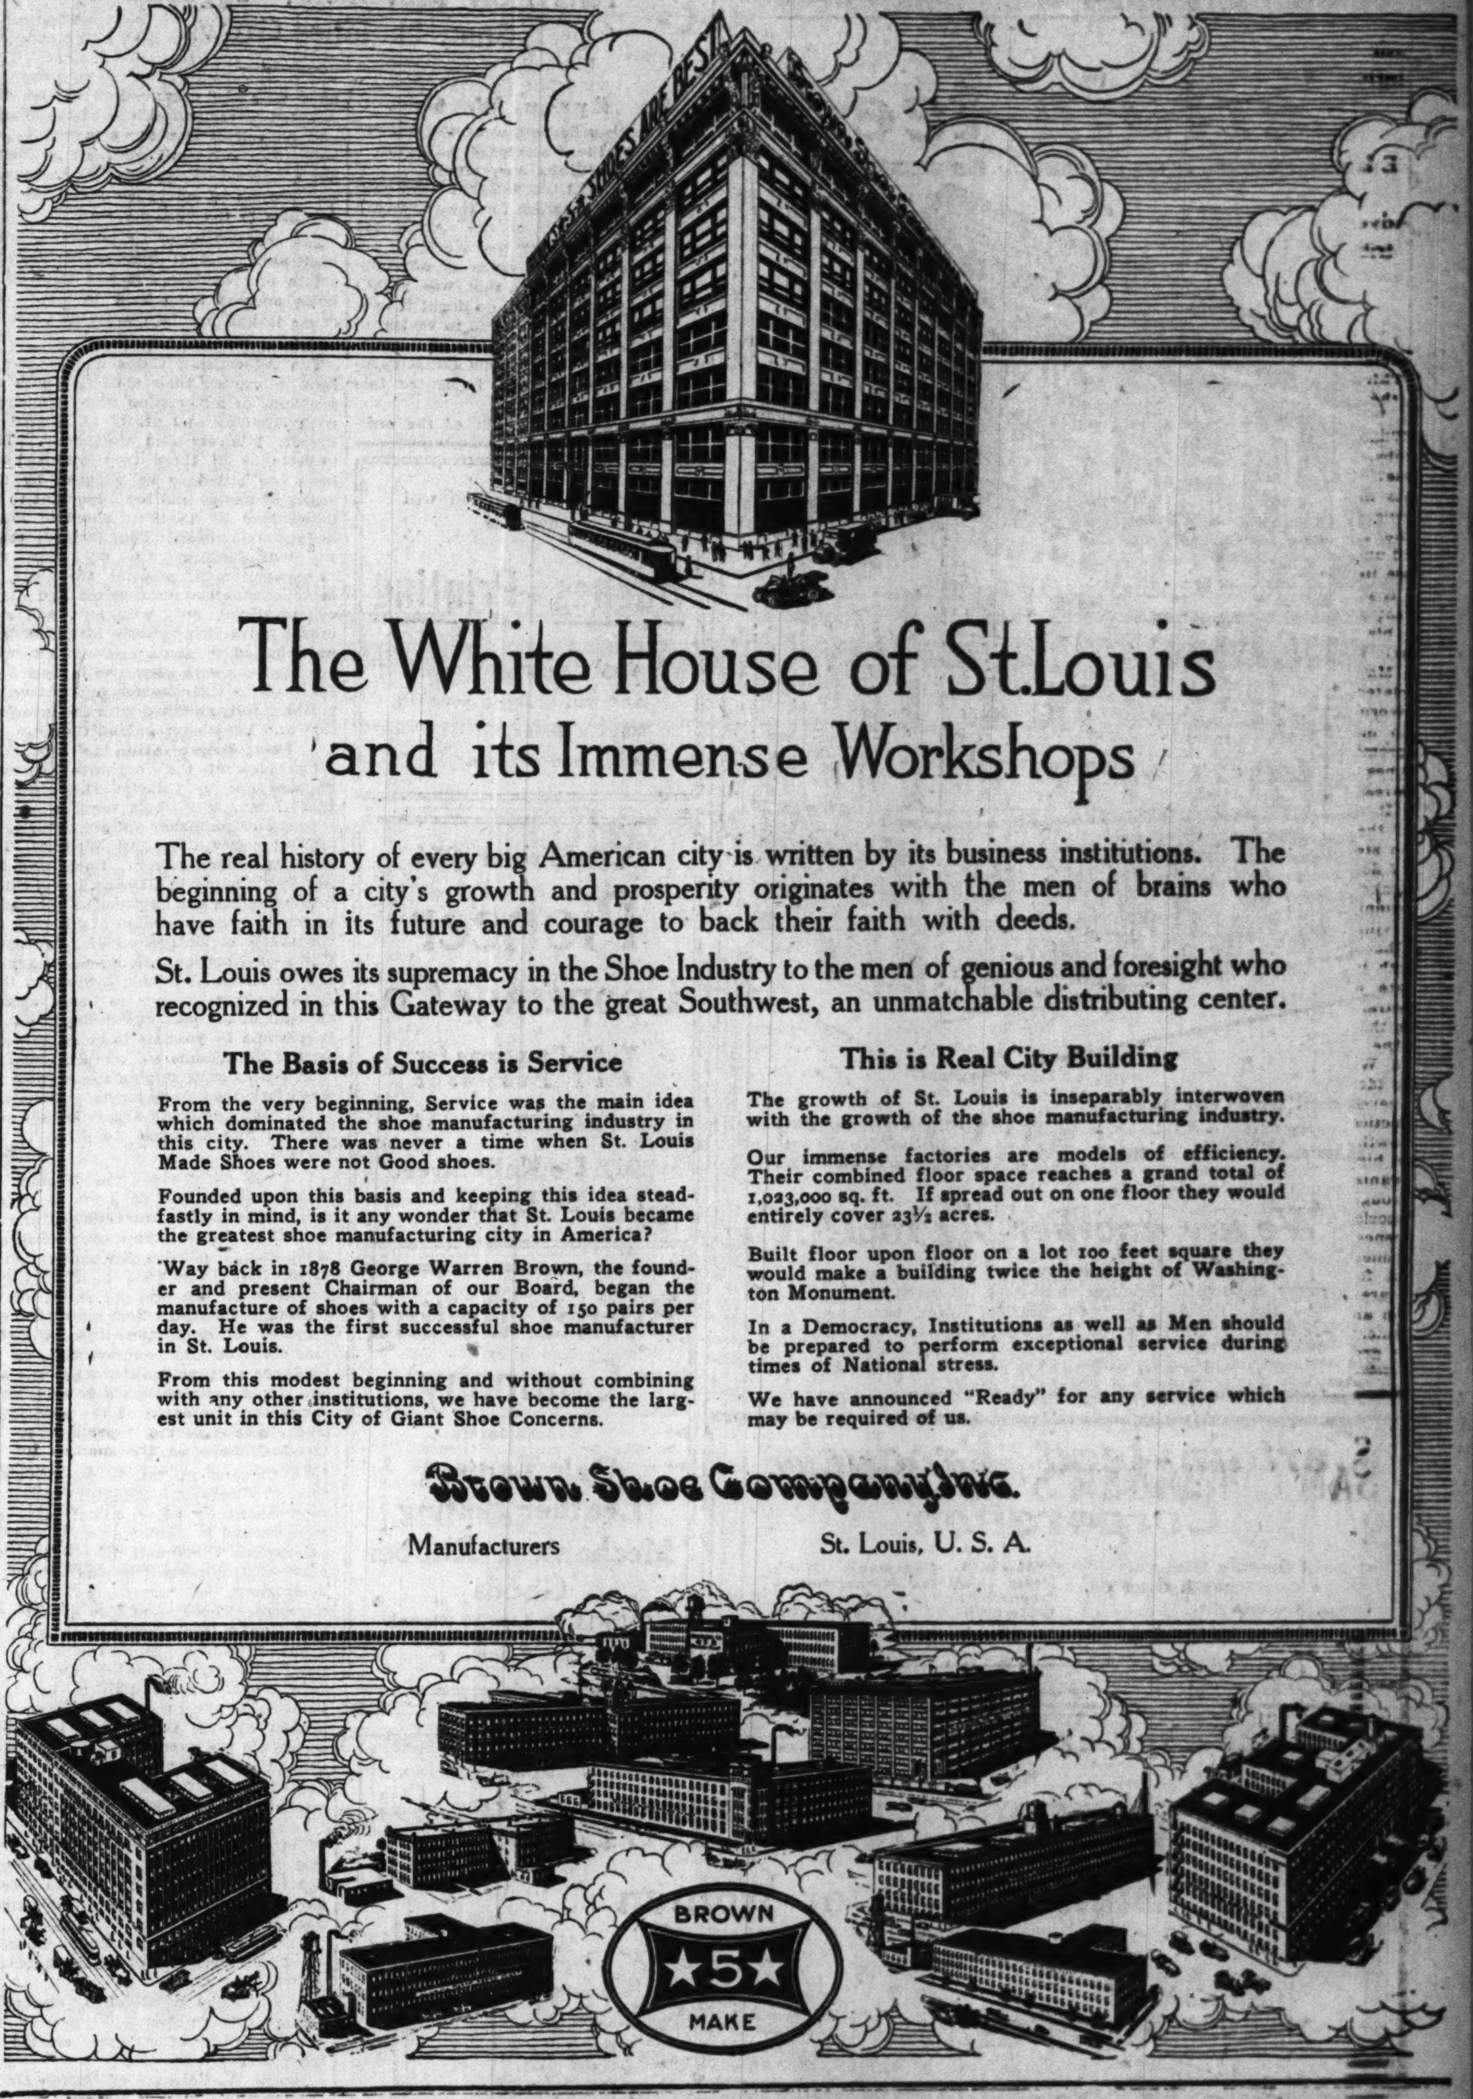
ELECTRICAL SUPPLIES INDUSTRY REPORTS 40 PER CENT INCREASE

Year Closed With Steady Gain Under Way, and 1917 Prospect Is for New High Record.

With the general prosperity which was so marked throughout the year, the business in the electrical supplies industry in St. Louis in 1916 was the largest on record, and exceeded the volume of business transacted in 1915 by over 40 per cent. Manufacturers and jobbers estimate that their business easily could have been doubled if they had been able to get the necessary materials.

While a few companies were busy on war orders, the war had a detrimental effect on a majority of St. Louis firms, as it caused an abnormal increase in the cost of all kinds of metals and supplies used in this line of business while contracts, as a rule, were made on a basis of lower priced materials.

The year opened with a good business and the volume increased steadily until the close of the year, causing the new year to open with the promise of breaking another record. Estimated output of all lines under this caption, $25,000,000.—Merchants' Exchange Annual.



SHOES ARE BEST
BROWN 5 MAKE

The White House of St. Louis and its Immense Workshops

The real history of every big American city is written by its business institutions. The beginning of a city's growth and prosperity originates with the men of brains who have faith in its future and courage to back their faith with deeds.

St. Louis owes its supremacy in the Shoe Industry to the men of genious and foresight who recognized in this Gateway to the great Southwest, an unmatchable distributing center.

The Basis of Success is Service

From the very beginning, Service was the main idea which dominated the shoe manufacturing industry in this city. There was never a time when St. Louis Made Shoes were not Good shoes.

Founded upon this basis and keeping this idea steadfastly in mind, is it any wonder that St. Louis became the greatest shoe manufacturing city in America?

'Way back in 1878 George Warren Brown, the founder and present Chairman of our Board, began the manufacture of shoes with a capacity of 150 pairs per day. He was the first successful shoe manufacturer in St. Louis.

From this modest beginning and without combining with any other institutions, we have become the largest unit in this City of Giant Shoe Concerns.

This is Real City Building

The growth of St. Louis is inseparably interwoven with the growth of the shoe manufacturing industry.

Our immense factories are models of efficiency. Their combined floor space reaches a grand total of 1,023,000 sq. ft. If spread out on one floor they would entirely cover 23½ acres.

Built floor upon floor on a lot 100 feet square they would make a building twice the height of Washington Monument.

In a Democracy, Institutions as well as Men should be prepared to perform exceptional service during times of National stress.

We have announced "Ready" for any service which may be required of us.

BEAUMONT AND PINE PARIS MEDICINE CO., BUILDING G. F. A BRUEGGEMANN, ARCHITECT

THE NEW HOME OF LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE

GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC, PAZO OINTMENT, AND OTHER STANDARD PREPARATIONS MANUFACTURED BY THE PARIS MEDICINE COMPANY

The building has a frontage on Pine Street of 225 feet with an average depth of 100 feet and is three stories and basement, having 91,500 square feet of floor area. It is entirely fireproof of reinforced concrete construction. A complete Power Plant supplies all the Electric Power and Lighting for the building. Special Rest Rooms are provided for the employees. The interior is finished in white enamel, giving maximum of light and sanitary efficiency. The women employees will wear white linen uniforms.

The advertising for LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE, a well-known St. Louis-made product, has achieved probably one of the greatest international advertising successes in its line during the commercial history of this country. More than Twelve Thousand newspapers all over the world now publish this advertising during season as regularly as their weather forecasts.

This advertising, appearing in nearly every known language and reaching between Two and Three Hundred Millions of readers, has established an enormous worldwide demand for LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE, that universally popular proprietary remedy which was originated in St. Louis by Mr. E. W. Grove, founder and president of the Paris Medicine Company, Manufacturing Chemists of this City.

From the palatial Drug Store of the American Metropolis, where thousands of packages are purchased, to the crossroads store in the backwoods, or the souvenir stand on the top of Pike's Peak, there will be found LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE with its regular increasing demand, brought about through general advertising in the newspapers. There is probably no other proprietary medicine in the United States which has a greater distribution or larger per capita consumption.

TWELVE TONS OF QUININE USED EVERY YEAR

This enormous quantity of Quinine alone (representing about 1-30th of all the Quinine produced in the world), is required for the preparation of Laxative Bromo Quinine. Nine million (9,000,000) Boxes of which are used every year because of its extraordinary merit. —ADV.

PAPER TRADE EXHIBITS GAIN

Notwithstanding the shortage of supplies and consequent high prices of stock, St. Louis easily maintained her position as the leading distributing market in the United States for all kinds of paper, and the business for the year showed a gratifying increase over the total volume of sales for the preceding year.

The war, by making it difficult to procure raw material and supplies, such as dyes and chemicals, proved a serious handicap, but local paper houses by their energy and persistence succeeded in equaling the tonnage of 1915, while the advanced prices made the volume of sales much larger.

Collections were good, and indications point to another record-breaking year in 1917.—Merchants' Exchange Annual.

ASSOCIATED AD CLUB WAS PLANNED BY ST. LOUISAN

First Secretary of Present Great Organization Tells How Movement, Suggested by Chas. H. Jones Grows.

By Byron W. Orr.

First Acting Secretary of the Organizers of the Associated Advertising Clubs Movement.

With the final touches that have been given to the program for the thirteenth annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World as arranged for the vast army of advertising men and women that will gather in St. Louis this week, no doubt it may be of interest at this time to review in a way the wonderful growth of a movement that is bringing such a vast gathering of people to St. Louis for this great convention.

There was nothing out of the ordinary with the organization of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World and no veil of mystery attached to its beginning; it wasn't even an accident, but a natural development of the needs and growth of advertising and its importance to the business world.

The conclusions of its present attainment as a national organization are absolute and obvious. It has enjoyed a large success from year to year because it has put into practice what it has preached and advertised.

The Advertising Clubs of the World have concerned their activities with all problems of advertising with efficiency, with economy and utility as related to human progress and prosperity. The importance of these conventions have been too broad to be weighed by the scales of money and too important to be determined by anything short of manhood development. The business man, the manufacturer, the publisher, the newspaper man, men at the head of large commercial enterprises and other organizations, men who buy, sell and create advertising have attended and participated in these conventions from year to year with increased interest and returned to their homes and places of business fully satisfied with the information and knowledge gained thereby.

First Organization in 1905.

The idea of the organization was planned out by Charles H. Jones, at that time a St. Louis man, who was editor and publisher of an advertising journal called "The Ad Writer." Before Mr. Jones left St. Louis and removed his paper to Chicago I was called into his office one day and he proceeded to read to me an outline of his plan for the proposed Federation of Advertising Clubs of America. Being Secretary of the St. Louis Ad Men's League at that time, he was anxious to know what I thought of the plan and desired to know if it would be possible to enlist the support of the members of the St. Louis Ad Men's League in helping to organize the Association as soon as he was located in Chicago and could also enlist the support of the Chicago Ad Club in the movement.

The call went out from Chicago. It was a clarion call to arms to defend and promote good advertising, and on Oct. 12-14, 1905, the first convention and organization of the Federated Advertising Clubs was held in Chicago, at the time of the first ad show, in the Coliseum Building, and where several hundred advertising men from different parts of the country were in attendance at that time. In 1906 the second annual convention was held in St. Louis and the name of the association was changed to the Associated Advertising Clubs of America.

At Chicago at the initial formation the St. Louis Ad Men's League was represented by some 25 delegates and were second in numbers to the Chicago delegation. Cincinnati, Indianapolis and other cities promised to send good-sized delegations, but were quite limited in numbers. There were also a scattering of delegates from Peoria, Cleveland, Detroit, Pittsburg, Minneapolis, Davenport, Elkhart, Milwaukee, Quincy and New York. In addition to St. Louis being selected as the city for the second annual convention for 1906, the writer served as the first secretary at the organization in Chicago and John Phillips of the St. Louis Ad Men's League was elected as the first treasurer.

Jones First President.

Charles H. Jones was elected as the first president at the Chicago convention. Since, these conventions elected as presidents prominent advertising men, as follows:

W. N. Aubuchon, St. Louis, in 1906.

Smith B. Queal, elected at Cincinnati in 1907.

E. D. Gibbs of Chicago, elected at Kansas City in 1908.

S. C. Dobbs of Atlanta, elected for 1909 and 1910.

George W. Coleman of Boston elected for 1911-1912.

William Woodhead of San Francisco, elected for 1913-1914; Herbert S. Houston, New York, elected for 1915-1916; his second term expiring at the St. Louis (1917) convention.

Since the organization of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, which received its present title at Toronto in 1914, conventions were held in cities as follows:

Chicago.	1905	Dallas.	1912
St. Louis.	1906	Baltimore.	1913
Cincinnati.	1907	Toronto.	1914
Kansas City.	1908	Chicago.	1915
Louisville.	1909	Philadelphia.	1916
Omaha.	1910	St. Louis.	1917
Boston.	1911

Growing Membership.

At the Cincinnati convention in 1907, W. N. Aubuchon, then president of the St. Louis Ad Men's League, completed his term as president of the Associated Advertising Clubs and Smith B. Queal, then connected with a Cincinnati newspaper, was elected as president and Byron W. Orr, secretary of the Ad Men's League of St. Louis, as national secretary. The principal work of the administration of this year was the addition of 25 new advertising clubs being added to the membership of the association as the official report showed at the Kansas City convention in 1908. At the Louisville convention in 1909 P. S. Florea of Indianapolis was elected as secretary and has served in this office successively up to the present year.

J. O. Young of Kansas City served one year as secretary, being elected at the St. Louis convention in 1906, and Seth Brown of Chicago elected in Chicago in 1905 served only a few months as secretary and Byron W. Orr of St. Louis was appointed to serve out this unexpired term.

There are now more than 185 advertising clubs included in the membership of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, with a total membership of some 15,000 advertising men and business men interested in the problems and occupations connected with advertising in all its legitimate forms and methods.

Entertainment Features for Visitors and Public

MUCH of the entertainment for the Advertising Convention is for the St. Louis public as well, especially the two great evening features, the parade on Monday night and the performance of "Aida" in the municipal theater in Forest Park on Tuesday Night. The official entertainment program says:

Sunday Evening.

Advertising Plaza (opposite Jefferson Hotel).

7:30 to 10:00—Grand Patriotic Concert by Seymour's Famous Military Band. Charles Seymour, Conductor.

Monday Evening.

7:00—The Night Parade, under direction of the Ninth Parade Committee. Arthur Siegel, Chairman.

A gathering of marchers of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, including a display of Illuminated Floats typical of Modern Advertising.

The first section of the parade will include the Marching Clubs in distinctive dress. Upon passing the Reviewing Stand, the marchers forming this section will countermarch to the Grand Stand on Advertising Plaza, Twelfth street, where they will be seated to enable them to view the second section, which will include the illuminated Advertising Floats.

The Grand Stand will extend two blocks on both sides of Advertising Plaza (Twelfth street), north of Market street, with ample capacity to accommodate all registered visitors.

Tuesday Evening.

6:00—Nomination Board Banquet, Moolah Temple, 3821 Lindell boulevard.

Banquet to official members of the Nomination Board of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World tendered by the Advertising Clubs of St. Louis and its Convention Board. Admission by ticket only. Business session for the nomination of three members of the Executive Committee of the Association Advertising Clubs of the World, each for a period of two years, and for the nomination and selection of the 1918 Convention City.

8:00—Spectacular pageant production of the grand opera "Aida" at the new Municipal Open-Air Theater, Forest Park.

The St. Louis production will be the most pretentious "Aida" ever given in America, and will for the first time approach the splendor of its original production, Dec. 24, 1871, when it was presented at the command of the Kehdive Ismail Pasha, as a premiere at the Italian Theater in Cairo, Egypt, and in celebration of the opening of the Suez Canal.

Two complete casts of eminent operatic artists; a chorus of 500 voices; orchestra of 100 musicians under a noted operatic conductor. For the first time since the original production, a complete ballet of 75 dancers will be introduced into the opera as originally written by Verdi.

The setting of the Municipal Open-Air Theater in Forest Park is ideal for this special production.

"Aida," as it was originally written by Verdi, is exceedingly spectacular and lends itself particularly to al fresco production, a form of entertainment in which St. Louis has achieved marked success and won world fame as a city whose people have learned the art of playing together in a big community way.

Note—Should inclement weather prevail, the production of "Aida" will be postponed until Wednesday evening and Tuesday evening will be declared "open time"—to give convention visitors an opportunity to follow their own inclinations. Seats reserved for "Aida" on Tuesday evening, in case of a postponed performance (weather), will be good Wednesday evening.

Wednesday Afternoon.

12:00—Rose luncheon—other entertainment features. Return by trolley about 4 o'clock.

Wednesday Evening.

"Open Time"—Inaugurated for the purpose of meeting a general demand to give Convention visitors an opportunity to follow their own inclinations. (See booklet, "What to See and How to See It," for list of amusements.)

8:00—The Junior Advertising Club of St. Louis will entertain visiting Juniors with a Boat Ride on the Mississippi River aboard the palatial steamer Alton. Dancing, cabaret and a royal good time promised. Boat leaves wharf, foot of Locust street, at 8 p. m. sharp. Take Olive street car to Fourth street, walk four blocks east and half block north to wharf.

Thursday Morning.

10:30—Motor trip.

By automobile to Shaw's Garden, containing the greatest collection of plant life in America, ranking second among the five great gardens of the world. Then through Tower Grove and Forest parks. Stop will be made at the World's Fair pavilion, Forest Park.

12:30—Ourdoor picnic.

Will be held here and a daintily prepared box luncheon with liquid refreshments will be served to each guest.

Motor ride through the suburbs.

4:00—Arrival at hotels.

Special for Women Visitors

The entertainment program for the women visitors is under the guidance of the Women Associates, Advertising Club of St. Louis. The entertainment Committee is Mrs. George M. Burbach, chairman; Mrs. Walter S. Donaldson, Mrs. Max Koenigsburg, Mrs. John Ring Jr. and Mrs W. F. Hartley, secretary.

Monday Morning.

10:30—Motor trip. "Seeing St. Louis." To start from Advertising Club of St. Louis, Seventh and Locust streets, covering the business, residential, automobile and park districts.

Monday Afternoon.

2.00—"Souvenir Luncheon," at the Missouri Athletic Association, Fourth street and Washington avenue.

Special entertainment features have been planned. Souvenirs will be distributed at this luncheon.

Tuesday Morning.

"Retail Store Morning." An opportunity to visit the retail stores, taking their luncheon as desired. The various large department stores will put on a special A. A. C. of W. luncheon.

Tuesday Afternoon.

2:30—"Advertising Exhibit Matinee." At the national exhibit of advertising. Special features, moving pictures and other interesting and enjoyable entertainment. Rooms 207 and 208 city hall. Music by Sarli's Italian Orchestra.

Wednesday Morning.

11:00—Special trip by trolley to the Century Boat Club, starting at Advertising Club of St. Louis, Seventh and Locust streets.

INDUSTRIES OF ST. LOUIS ARE GOING AT CAPACITY

As Factories Make Chiefly Staples They Will Be Little Affected by Country's Entry in War.

By EDGAR GENGENBACH,
Industrial Commissioner of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce.

Industrial dog days are over so far as St. Louis is concerned. No more of those lean seasons of the year when the force is cut down and the extra help is laid off. Unprecedented prosperity, scarcity of workmen, amazing foreign trade and stupendous production are the stylish phrases in industrial St. Louis these days.

The entrance of the United States into the war has not affected this situation, because no necessity exists for retrenchment as applied to the production of goods in common demand, and St. Louis is mainly a manufacturer of "staples."

St. Louis has prospered wonderfully in the last decade in an industrial way because of two facts: The development of new markets with a great purchasing power, and the dispatch and cheapness with which raw material can be assembled and the finished product sent out.

There is a universal law which controls the location of industries, and that is: Humanity ever follows the trend of the greatest profits in return for the energies expended. Factories depend upon the easiest available market. Whence comes this consuming population with the cash to buy? Let's find out.

City's Best Customers.

The best customers for any great city market are direct producers from the soil and the retail merchants of their country market, and power of a great city to increase its sales depends on the increase of their power to buy. They are increasing their power in the St. Louis territory faster than this city can deliver the goods. It is no wonder that St Louis is the great home market of the North American continent, when the city is commercially and geographically the center of such a vast and rich market.

Proximity to and cost of raw material, proximity to an economic selling market of consumption, available domestic labor and good living conditions are briefly the reasons for St. Louis' supremacy in an industrial way.

The Mississippi Valley, in which St. Louis is the great recognized central market, is the chief producing section of this great country. Of all the farms in the United States, 70 per cent are found in the valley; of the farm value, 69 per cent; of the wheat production, 76 per cent; of livestock, 72 per cent; of corn, 85 per cent; of cattle, 74 per cent; of sheep, 52 per cent, and of hogs, 81 per cent.

Aside from this great centralization of food production, 55 per cent of the wool is purchased in the valley, 70 per cent of the cotton, 47 per cent of the lumber, 69 per cent of the petroleum and 60 per cent of the bitumninous coal.

There are 40,000,000 persons living within 500 miles of St. Louis, who can be reached by the shortest haul over its waterways and its 27 trunk lines of railroad. To haul merchandise from without the zone of St. Louis' trade market from the East and West means a loss of money, because these people can only be reached economically from their great central source of supplies, St. Louis.

The trade territory of St. Louis is thus an ideal home market for manufactured goods; first, it has the largest local demand with the least local competition, and, second, the largest supply of foodstuffs and raw materials.

Industrial St. Louis, as much a part of the city as any other unit, covers part of St. Clair and Madison Counties in Illinois. East St. Louis is as much a part of Greater St. Louis as Brooklyn is of New York. The population in this Greater St. Louis district, which covers over 260 square miles, is more than a million.

St. Louis has 3300 factories, employing 150,000 persons, and pays to them $105,000,000 a year. The products manufactured in the St. Louis district yearly are valued at $641,185,423.

Grain in Railroad Tonnage.

Railroad tonnage is an excellent yardstick by which to measure a city's greatness. The receipts and shipments for 1916 show a gain of 25 per cent. The gain in bank clearings in a like time was more than 29 per cent.

Perhaps the greatest asset St. Louis has for future greatness is the solid and growing purchasing power developing daily in its trade territory.

Where else has there been such development, such progress? There is the mid-continent oil field, in which within a few years sprang up 100 refineries; the Miami zinc fields, a short time ago pasture land, and now shipping 7,000,000 and more pounds of ore weekly; the drainage district in Southern Missouri, where one single project is opening up half a million acres of new land at a cost of $6,000,000; two counties in Missouri raised over 60,000 bales of cotton last year—at $90 a bale that would be $5,000,000 in spending money.

It takes 29 through package cars daily to carry goods into this one drainage section alone. This development is creating an enormously large and wealthy market for St. Louis-made goods.

The city has a 19-mile water frontage on the Mississippi River, with over 350 miles of single-track electric lines inside the city limits and 120 miles of electric railway in St. Louis County, connecting it with Missouri suburbs. St. Louis uses 60,000-horsepower of electricity from the Keokuk Dam, and has available an unlimited supply from this source at a very cheap rate.

St. Louis right now is working to its capacity industrially. Orders for the army, for ordinary demand and for foreign trade are crowding the production of the local factories. The floor space has been increased, new machines added and capitalization increased in a large number of established concerns.

While the war is creating a great amount of business, its cessation will not in any great degree affect the demand for St. Louis products. The 20 cities into which St. Louis goods are sent are making new records of improvement every day, and they are seeking the best of everything. Their means are increasing faster than their powers to organize it, because they have developed in this decade much more than they expected to. For this reason the future of the Fourth City is assured. Its growth has not been of the overnight variety—neither has its future the aspect of a boom. It is the permanent, steady progress that spells insured prosperity of that measured sort that means "good, every-day business."

BANK CLEARINGS PROVIDE PROOF OF CITY'S PROSPERITY

Growth Has Been Steady and Increase in Deposits Has Been Marked.

WAR TRADE PROFITABLE

Expansion of River Traffic Expected to Prove a Valuable Trade Adjunct.

By R. O. JOHNSON

Financial Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Financiers and business men agree that the best index of a city's prosperity is its bank clearings. They invariably reflect not only money passing from hand to hand in settlement and expansion of business contracts, but the actual advancement in development, improvement and growth of the city. There is a familiar maxim in banking circles that "as bank clearings go so the city goes," and this is considered almost an axiom.

St. Louis' bank clearings have more than demonstrated this maxim since the beginning of the year. Every month has shown increased clearings not only with the preceding month, but with the corresponding month of last year, regardless of the fact that last year's totals reached $5,370,977,892, a new high record since the clearing house was organized, and compared with $4,153,529,836, the previous record in 1915, and with $3,888,851,608 in 1914.

From the first of the year to May 1, St. Louis bank clearings have totaled $2,179,505,196, compared with $1,586,918,326 last year.

Better Showing Each Month.

In January clearings totaled $590,495,304, compared with $429,456,675 last year; February, $472,390,212, compared with $356,799,066; March, $566,679,732, compared with $407,980,696; April, $549,939,938, against $392,681,880.

While bank clearings have been steadily increasing, deposits of the local banks and trust companies also have expanded materially which invariably reflects business activity and prosperity. Recent statements compiled by the St. Louis Clearing House give the total deposits of 44 banks and trust companies at $409,706,661, compared with $351,081,043 at the corresponding time a year ago.

The steady increase in clearings and deposits have taken place in the face of an unusually poor grain crop in St. Louis territory last fall. But this was partly offset by the enhancement in value of all products of the farm, and especially cotton, which is largely financed in the South by money from St. Louis banks and financial institutions.

Bankers expect the new liberty loan of $2,000,000,000, of which St. Louis territory will take approximately $100,000,000, will mean increased activity in business and industry here, after the money is placed. They declare that the proceeds of the loan will be spent almost entirely in the United States in supplies and equipment for army and navy needs and that St. Louis industries will be benefited materially through purchases.

Benefit in War Trade.

Dry goods and shoe houses here should reap unusual benefits from Government purchases in those lines, and as St. Louis leads in both branches of these trades, benefits for both owners of the industries and employes should be large.

Purchases of flour, grain, horses and mules and other products should also center here, as the city is ideally located for shipments South to Mexican border and Southern training camps, as well as to the camps and training quarters in the West.

One of the striking developments of the present war has been the strength of Germany's economic and financial position for the past two years, when surrounded by enemies and practically dependent on her own purchases of supplies and material to stimulate her trade and industry. The result has demonstrated that money raised by a Government and spent in its own country benefits home trade and industry to an abnormal extent. The money stays at home, business and industrial activity is stimulated by its expenditure and profits immediately find their way into circulation and further increased business activity.

The spending of the liberty loan largely in the United States should have the same economic influence in this country as has been observed in Germany and bankers and financiers predict on this account that business in St. Louis will continue to advance throughout the summer and fall. There is an unusual note of optimism prevalent in banking, financial and business circles as to the future of St. Louis trade and industry.

River Traffic to Be Boomed.

Organization here recently at the River Conference, of a $2,000,000 transportation line to operate boats on the Mississippi River between here and New Orleans and of a $1,500,000 company for a line between here and St. Paul, suggests that the Mississippi River is shortly to come into its own.

At the River Conference it was emphatically declared that railroad congestion would be materially benefited by opening of transportation on the Mississippi River to New Orleans and the Twin Cities. Railroad officials stated that they could not now handle their traffic, and that the recent freight congestion, which worked such a hardship on the producer and consumer, could be materially improved by the boat lines.

The Merchants' Exchange has appropriated $25,000 of the funds of the organization to be invested in the New Orleans line, and the Chamber of Commerce and other civic organizations have pledged their support of the new enterprise. The movement is backed by exchanges and business organizations throughout the Mississippi Valley, and $25,000 has also been raised by the New Orleans Board of Trade.

Millers and grain men have pledged their support to the company, and plan to raise $25,000 in addition to the money raised by the Merchants' Exchange. Grain dealers declare that the river is a natural outlook for grain and flour shipments South and North, and point to the days when 50 per cent of this business was carried by boats on the Mississippi River.

St. Louis' receipts of grain in 1916, 83,-669,146 bushels. Shipments of grain in 1916, 55,613,320 bushels.

St. Louis has the largest brewery in the United States, and is first in output of beer.

The Browns are prepared for the first invasion of the East. Every member of the large squad is determined to make a great fight in the struggle that is being waged for baseball supremacy of the American League.

Fielder Jones, manager of the team, makes the assertion that no club in the Johnsonian organization has any thing on his aggregation. The leader of the St. Louis team, whose slogan is known to every baseball fan—"give me a pitcher and one run and I'll win any game ever played"—has had a year's experience in the American League. Therefore he feels sure that he knows the players of the opposition. Fielder prepared.

ST. LOUIS CENTER OF RAIL AND RIVER TRANSPORTATION

Approximtely 20,000 Cars Move in and Out of City Daily.

By P. W. COYLE,
Traffic Commissioner, St. Louis Chamber of Commerce.

Obviously to feed, clothe and shelter the family and to furnish to the individual and the community the means of recreation, education and worship are the fundamental functions of commerce.

Could Pierre Laclede have devined the potential elements of this country, or could his vision have extended to its present commercial development, he could not have selected a location more favorably adapted to the exercise of these functions for the benefit of the nation, than he did in founding St. Louis.

Situated midway between the headwaters of the Mississippi and the Gulf of Mexico, at the confluence of the Missouri, the Illinois and the Mississippi, in the most fertile valley in the world, within a few miles of the center of population and virtually at the center of the grain producing territory, it is the source of supply for a larger surrounding territory than any city in the United States and has, within its borders and adjacent to it, virtually all the potential elements of commerce.

20,000 Cars More Daily.

As a nation increases in population and its commerce expands, there must necessarily be held in suspense large quantities of the necessary articles within easy reach of the consumer, and the distribution of such commodities safely and expeditiously becomes the important feature of transportation. The merchants and manufacturers of St. Louis are amply prepared to supply all such demands, and through their activities in connection with the Chamber of Commerce, their customers' interests are guarded until the goods are delivered.

St. Louis is peculiarly fortunate in being served by 25 steam railroads and a very extensive trolley system, reaching by direct lines, under single management, the Atlantic, Pacific, Gulf and Great Lakes. These railroads thus serving St. Louis directly, own and have under their immediate control, 750,000 cars. They move in and out of this city daily approximately 20,000 cars, carrying an aggregate annual tonnage of 66,000,000 tons. Of these St. Louis distributes independently of carload shipments, to approximately 800 principal points in the United States, between 1200 and 1500 package cars daily. These cars are loaded to a minimum of 10,000 pounds each. Less than carload shipments are handled inbound on fast trains, thus giving to the patrons of this market express service at freight rates. The Traffic Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce was the first in this country to establish this package car system. It is the only one which carefully and systematically supervises the service and reports results monthly to its members. It also employs a traveling service agent, who personally investigates acute conditions with respect to delay to shipments.

Chamber of Commerce Work.

The railroads and the shippers of St. Louis also are served by a terminal system the superior of which does not exist in any other city in this country. This terminal with its 325 miles of track and 152 locomotives, may be said to be the heart of the transportation system of St. Louis, as through it are handled over 10,000 cars daily for distribution to the different railroads and industries in this district.

The St. Louis Chamber of Commerce has played a very important part in contributing to the efficiency of transportation by co-operating with the carriers through joint standing committees, representing the several departments of the railroads and the shippers, working in conjunction with the Traffic Bureau of the Chamber. This earnest, systematic co-operation which has prevailed here virtually since the Traffic Bureau was established 10 years ago, has resulted in bringing the carriers and shippers so close together that they work as a unit with respect to transportation as it effects the commerce of St. Louis.

Another result of this co-operation is the fact that now, when we are in the midst of the world-wide struggle, these two important elements of commerce are so well prepared, and have so effectually met the present emergency that it can be said of St. Louis that it is the only important city which has not been seriously affected by congestion of freight traffic. It is the only city or important gateway which has escaped embargoes.

In addition to these rail facilities, St. Louis has the benefit of regular boat service between St. Louis, Peoria, Kansas City and intermediate points, and between St. Louis and New Orleans and intermediate points and points on the Tennessee River. The efficiency of this service will be greatly increased when our $300,000 municipal dock now under construction is completed.

ONLY IMPORTANT CITY FREE OF EMBARGOES

ST. LOUIS is the only important gateway in the United States which has escaped embargoes in this present transportation emergency attendant on the war preparations. In the midst of the world-wide struggle the two important factors of commerce—carriers and the shippers—are so well prepared and have co-operated to such an extent in this city that they have effectually met the present emergency. It can be said of St. Louis that it is the only important city which has not been seriously affected by the congestion of freight traffic. P. W. COYLE.

WIFE AND BROTHERS.

In Memoriam.

Ella Baals passed away one year ago today, June 3 1916. Sadly missed by parents, sisters and brothers.

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE BAALS AND FAMILY.

In Memoriam.

Mrs. Katherine Johnson (nee Ehrmann), died Dec. 3, 1916.

Gone but not forgotten,
In silence you suffered,
In patience you bore,
Till God called you home
To suffer no more.

HER FATHER, MOTHER and SISTERS. (c)

In Memoriam.

In memory of my dear wife and mother, Jane Browner, who was laid away two years ago, June 2, 1915.

In the graveyard, softly sleeping,
Where the flowers softly wave,
Lies the one we loved so dearly,
In her lonely, silent grave.

Sadly missed by
HUSBAND AND CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of my dear husband and our dear father, John Boenig, who went to eternal rest, May 31, 1916.

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.
And while he lies in peaceful sleep,
His memory we shall always keep.

Sadly missed by
HIS WIFE AND CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of Emelie Schroeck, who departed this life May 30, 1916.

We miss thee from our home, dear mother,
We miss thee from thy place;
A shadow o'er our life is cast,
We miss the sunshine of thy face.
We miss thy kind and willing hand,
Thy fond and earnest care;
Our home is dark without thee,
We miss thee everywhere.

Sadly missed by her CHILDREN.

DEATHS

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of Ernest Wiele, who died suddenly on June 5, 1916.

One year ago he passed away.
We grieved when he departed,
Time was too short to say farewell.
We miss his coming footsteps; we miss him everywhere.
Home is not what it used to be since he is not there.

WIFE AND CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of my beloved husband and father, John Keller, who passed away May 29, 1912.

Loving father, true and kind,
No friend on earth like him we'll find;
God called him home, it was his will;
But in our hearts he lingers still;
For all of us he did his best,
May God grant him eternal rest.

Sadly missed by
WIFE AND CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In memory of my dear niece, Miss Amelia Murphy.

Dear Amelia, how we miss you,
None but us can know;
The saddest day in our whole life,
Was the day we saw you go.
Dear Amelia, may you rest in peace,
Our prayers for you shall never cease.

MRS. FREDERICH SCHUMANN, Aunt.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of my beloved wife and our dear mother, Margaret Flood, who passed away, June 1, 1916.

Loving mother, true and kind,
No friend on earth like her we'll find;
God called her home, it was His will,
But in our hearts she lingers still.
For all of us she did her best,
May God grant her eternal rest.

Missed by JOHN FLOOD AND FAMILY.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our dear daughter, Millie Bertelt, who departed this life one year ago, June 2, 1916.

One long year ago today,
Since our dear Millie passed away;
We saw her suffer and heard her sigh
With aching heart and weeping eye;
We saw her sinking hour by hour,
Yet could not stay death's awful power.
Millie calmly sleeps at last;
All pain, all aches, all suffering past;
The stars are shining on the solemn grave
Of Millie whom we could not save.

Sadly missed by her father and mother,
MR. AND MRS. BERTELT.

LEADING THE SIMPLE LIFE —CLOSE TO NATURE

After the day's work is done and your nerves are on edge, it's a great thing to be able to hop into one of our good used cars.

Better still, live out in Clayton or some other good suburb and drive back and forth to work each day. Come in—let us shoy you how you can make one of our cars practically pay for itself.

If you want a good low-priced car for the boys to knock around in, this Maxwell at $175 should just about fill the bill. It is in good running condition and considering the price, is an excellent bargain at $175.

Detroiter with electric lights, starter and seat covering, is in good condition and will make a very serviceable car for running around town. It is specially priced for the coming week at $325.

American Underslung Coupe. This car is mechanically right and would make an excellent doctor's car. Leather upholstery throughout with electric lights and air starter. Specially priced and worth every cent asked, $400.

Late model Hupmobile, 5-passenger, has just been through paint shop. In fact, the whole car is in good condition. It would be hard to tell this car from a new car. In order to make a quick turn over, it is priced at $650.

Studebaker Roadster, 1917 model, in strictly first-class condition. This is a mighty good car and is easily worth the price asked, $650.

We have an 8-cylinder Oldsmobile, 44, that any man should be proud to own. This is priced at $850 and is worth every cent of it.

If you want a good, small, low-priced car to knock around in, this Metz Roadster should meet with every requirement. We are pricing it at $275 and consider it an exceptional value. Better come in and see it.

Here is a 5-passenger Overland which, while it is an old car, has lots of good stuff in it and should stand up over hard service. The price is made $250 because we want to sell it this coming week.

5-passenger Reo, is in excellent condition with elctric lights and starter. In getting this car you are not paying for depreciation. The paint is in good condition and with reasonable use, the car should give you excellent service, $350.

Chandler, 5-passenger, 1915 model. Has been through the paint shop and thoroughly overhauled from start to finish. This is really a good car and you would hardly know it from a new car unless we told you. It is worth every cent asked, $700.

Cadillac, 5-passenger, is in good condition with electric lights and starter. Has been thoroughly gone over and we believe it would be an exceptional value for $335.

Oldsmobile, 43, 5-passenger. Like everyone of our Oldsmobiles, this is a strictly high-grade car and at the price is an exceptional bargain, $750.

Hupmobile Touring car. Late model. Is a regular bear cat to climb hills. The boys around the shop say it s one of the best cars they have had for some time, $600.

Cars sold on easy payment. Satisfaction guaranteed. 25 hours free service with every used car.

WE have authentic information that lumber sold from new stock cannot be replaced within 25 per cent of sales. This means a serious shortage in new lumber, which causes weekly advances in price. Let us help you relieve this situation by supplying you from our stock of 300,000 feet of good used, seasoned white pine lumber now being taken from the 5-story mercantile building formerly known as the Laclede Gas Light Co.'s building, 714-718 Locust st.

Also 500,000 strictly hard machine-pressed brick, which can be bought very reasonably on account of short space of time in which to make room for the New American Trust Bank Building.

We also have a large number of flush tanks and closet bowls, washstands, radiators, etc.

Notice to out of town buyers: We are in a position to make prompt carload shipments in either brick or lumber.

For prices on the above material see the ANDREW SCHAEFER SUPPLY & WRECKING CO., Inc., Clarence av. from Natural Bridge to Lexington. Both phones.

The Most Expensive Habit on Earth Is Bargain Hunting

Last June, five thousand advertising men—the aeroplane corps of business—agreed that bargain-hunting costs more money to consumers than drinking whiskey, smoking cigarettes and playing the races—all combined.

You might be able to pick up a bargain in food, clothing, household goods, or a hundred other things, because the outlay is small, but, Mr. Homebuyer, with a wife and family, you cannot afford to take a flyer in the location of your home.

You can build an economical house on valuable ground.

But you can't build a valuable house on cheap ground.

Your house may cost a lot, but, if its site was ill-chosen, you can never never get that cost out of it.

You can save a little money at first, perhaps, by buying cheap ground.

But every dollar you save on the lot may mean $100 lost on the finished home property. The lot represents about 20% of the producing cost of the average home.

But the location of that lot decides about 80% of the selling value.

You don't want to save at the spigot and lose at the barrel head?

We are selling the most expensive—but restrictions, improvements and surroundings considered, the most reasonably priced—subdivision on the market today. It is located due west and just west of the best residence property in St. Louis. It was laid out at a cost to the owners of over $160,000. It is restricted for all time, to costly improvements.

It is offered to you at $60 a foot.

There is cheaper ground on the market—if you can afford to buy it. But if you are an economical person who cuts the corners and makes every dollar buy a hundred cents' worth of satisfaction, go out today and look at

Profit-Sharing Is Southampton Lots Sale Plan

Twabrigs Realty Co. Drives Big Bargain in Acquiring Unsold Sites in Eligible Subdivision, and Will Give Public the Benefit.

MORE THAN 300 HOMES ERECTED

Restrictions Assure Maintenance of High-Class Buildings, Big School Definitely Planned, and Churches Already There ---Excellent Car Service.

The Twabrigs Realty Co., of which W. C. Ferris is president, has purchased all the unsold lots in Southampton of the Southampton Realty Co., comprising 30,000 front feet. The company has driven a bargain in the purchase of these lots and is in a position to resell them at extraordinary prices—ranging from $10 to $30 a front foot.

The lots will be offered for sale on a new and original profit-sharing plan, which will be explained at the company's office in the Boatmen's Bank Building, and which will appeal to small investors as well as to homeseekers.

Southampton is a model subdivision, most attractively situated on South King's highway at the intersection of Bancroft avenue, which is 4300 south. The tract was laid out and improved by the Southhampton Realty Co. under the direct supervision of the Mercantile Trust Co., and has complete municipal advantages, including both district and local sewers, gas and electric mains, and fire plugs.

Avenues of maple trees, which were set out at considerable expense, form an attractive feature of the subdivision, the major portion of which has granitoid walks and telford streets of the highest order.

MORE THAN 300 HOMES.

There have been erected in this addition, which is comparatively new, more than 318 substantial homes, both of the bungalow and dwelling types, also cottages, ranging in cost from $3500 to $6000, besides many flats costing from $5500 to $8000. In addition, there are 21 houses of various kinds in process of construction.

The high character of this subdivision is assured by restrictions which in one part forbid the erection of any building costing less than $2000, and in another of any costing less than $1000, which, accordingly, place a ban on shacks.

The Board of Education has established portable school buildings in the addition pending the erection of a big school building on a site 400x300 feet at the northeast corner of Macklind and Lansdowne avenues, a central point of the subdivision, recently acquired for this purpose.

There is also a Catholic church and school in the district, together with a Presbyterian and a Lutheran church.

The more advantageously situated corners of the subdivision have been improved with business buildings to provide for stores for this flourishing community. The Kroger Grocery Co. is erecting here a building which will be a credit to this district.

EXCELLENT CAR SERVICE.

The subdivision is served by the Southampton cars, which run on a six-minute schedule during the morning and evening hours, and on a 15-minute schedule between these periods, having their terminus in the center of the subdivision, and running direct to Broadway and Olive streets in 45 minutes.

Before the purchase of this property by the Twabrigs company, a committee composed of S. Niccolls, vice-president of the American Trust Co.; John F. Schopflin of the Mercantile Trust Co., and George W. Taylor of the New York Life Insurance Co., was appointed by its president to investigate the Southampton proposition, and the foregoing gives a resume of their report.

Southampton, according to experts, compares favorably with, and in some instances excels in point of surface improvements and in natural advantages, some of the more exclusive residence additions of the city, wherein ground is commanding from $60 to $80 a front foot.

This is undoubtedly an unprecedented opportunity for wage-earners or for business men to obtain a home site, or for persons seeking a safe and advantageous investment.

"If a man does not provide for his children, if he does not provide for all those dependent upon him, and if he has not that vision of conditions to come, and that care for the days that have not yet dawned, which we sum up in the whole idea of thrift and saving, then he has not opened his eyes to any adequate conception of human life. We are in this world not to provide for ourselves but for others, and that is the basis of economy."

MISSOURI

REITZ'S FARM BARGAINS

150 acres, $6000, half cash, balance to suit; 85 acres clover and timothy meadow, 30 in timber, balance cultivation and pasture, all level and tillable, practically valley, very fertile, all fenced with woven wire, 6-room house, large barn, cellar, and outbuildings, fruit, well, cistern and spring water, rural facilities; 5 miles to good town, good community; owner sick and must sacrifice.

80 acres, $3000, half cash, balance time; 40 in cultivation, balance timber, mostly valley and creek bottom, creek, well and spring water, 4-room frame house, barn, cellar and outbuildings, fruit, rural facilities, 2 miles to good town, an exceptionally good farm bargain.

120 acres, $4000; good terms, 60 in cultivation, balance timber, mostly all tillable, 4-room frame house, barn, poultry house, fruit, well, spring and creek water, quarter mile Meramec and Dry Fork river front, in a good community, a good stock farm, and very desirable for a club or outing place, 2 miles to station, rural facilities.

160 acres, $3000; terms on part; 50 in cultivation, balance timber pasture, all tillable, 4-room house, barn and necessary outbuildings, family fruit, well watered, rural facilities, 6 miles to town, near school and store, will make a good stock farm, a real sacrifice at the price.

80 acres, including stock and implements, $7000; 70 in cultivation, balance timber, all dark sandy loam soil, no stone, very productive land, good 6-room house, large barn and other outbuildings, rural route and phone, good road one mile to good town, farm includes team, 15 hogs, crop, implements, poultry, etc.

86 acres, $3200; 70 in cultivation, 15 in grass, good 5-room house, barn, fruit and outbuildings, good water, rural facilities, one mile to Catholic church, 3 miles to good town, 45 miles from St. Louis; terms if wanted.

10-acre tracts, $25 down, $5 monthly, part in cultivation, part timber; 2 miles to good town; made road; ideal poultry truck and fruit farms.

Timbered lands, 40 and 80 acre tracts, $2.50 per acre; $1 cash, balance time.

In offering the above I have given big values for the prices asked, an investment as secure as the best bonds and at the same time something with a larger profit, as the values will not decrease but without a doubt will increase from 25 to 50 per cent in a short time, at the same time bring good interest on money invested. There are very desirable as a farm home or an investment.

Write or call for further details. Or get a free list, if you are in the market for a farm I can satisfy your desires.

SOUTHEAS[illegible] just on the eve of being discovered. For years the outside world has heard nothing whatever of it or the stories of its swamps that it has heard have created an altogether erroneous impression. Within the past 2 years prices at which lands have changed hands have advanced somewhat, but the prices for even its most wonderful soils are still absurdly low. We have well located tracts in the Little River Drainage District which we are selling to discriminating buyers at from $48 to $62, with some absolutely perfect soil as low as $50. Lands more or less developed at correspondingly low figures. It is our judgment that these lands will advance presently in much livelier fashion to two or three times the figures at which they can be acquired at the moment. Box A-5, Post-Dispatch. (c99)

FARM—For sale, 200 acres, 186 in cultivation, balance in virgin timber and hog pasture; good water and fairly improved; 6 rooms, cellar, barn and outbuildings; on State highway, 3 miles from Warrenton, county seat of Warren County; good soil; land lies fine; will make loan; price only $40 per acre; come at once to see it; owner is 72 years old and wants to retire; this is a bargain; also have other fine farms for sale, large and small; come out and spend the day looking them over. Wm. Crews, Wright City, Mo.

213 ACRES on Little River ditch; 20 cleared, 40 fenced; no improvements; price only $60. Box A-7, Post-Dispatch. (c99)

LAND—For sale, 277 acres improved, good bottom land. 211 N. 7th, room 1123.

LAND—For sale, 40 acres of timber; will cut over 500 cords, 3 miles to haul; if interested, write to Box M-160, Post-Dispatch.

LAND—For sale or exchange, 32 acres, Stanton, Mo.; 15 acres bottom; 3-room house, barn, chicken house; consider cottage. 607 Wainwright.

LAND—For sale, 160 acres unimproved timber land, near Lebanon, Mo.; will sell at a bargain. Write J. E. Wellig, 2234 Williams av., Norwood, O.

LAND—For sale, 25 acres, on Clayton rd.; all kinds of fruit, berries and grapes; good 8-room house, barn, etc.; price $500 per acre. THE TRUST CO., Clayton, Mo.

LAND—For sale, 6½ acres, all or part, 3 miles from Wellston on Woodson and St. Charles Rock rd.; crops planted; 2 houses, 2 wells and outbuildings; 1 block from St. Charles car. D. Clump.

SUMMER HOME—For sale; 8 acres, 7-room up-to-date frame house, with bath, big basement for furnace; big barn; nice vineyard; beautifully located; in suburbs of De Soto Mo.; price $3700. T. B. Eaves, De Soto, Mo.

LAND—For sale, 40 acres unimproved timber land, Laclede County, Mo., suitable for fruit, truck and poultry farming, price $250; terms, $5 down, $5 per month. T. J. Holt, Lebanon, Mo.

YOU will buy this land if you see it. Now is the time to buy land in the Little River Drainage District, Southeast Missouri, Stoddard County, while prices are low and terms easy. No. 3, 80 acres cutover, ½ mile of Ardeola on Cotton Belt R. R.; drainage ditch on north line; county road on east line; 1½ miles of Toppertown on Frisco R. R.; N½NE 15-27-11, $41 per acre. No. 37, 200 acres, 80 acres in cultivation; good 4-room house, good 30x40 barn, ¼ mile of Avert on main line Cotton Belt R. R. Lot No. 1, northwest of river and lot 1 northwest location and Lots 8 and 9 located 35-27-11, $65 per acre. No. 34, 120 acres, 25 acres in cultivation, ¾ mile of Cline's Island, E½NE and NE SE 7-26-12, $55 per acre. No. 64, 15,000 acres, $450,000. Griff Glover, 5070 Waterman av., St. Louis, Mo. (c99)

LITTLE RIVER DRAINING DISTRICT

In tracts of 80 acres up; $45 to $60 for unimproved land, $80 to $175 for land in cultivation; these are the cheapest agricultural lands in the world today; terms, half cash, 5 years on remainder; 6 per cent interest. Box A-15, Post-Dispatch. (c99)

83½-ACRE FARM

Fifteen miles from city, on street car, electric; good soil, house, barn, granary, etc.; fine well and cistern, orchard; good school; $225 per acre. W. VOGT, 3942 Florissant.

YOUR LAST CHANCE

I believe unimproved land in the Little River Drainage District, now selling from $40 to $75, will not be obtainable below $125 before the close of 1918. I and my correspondents have listed over 12,000 acres of cutover, unimproved land, which we will sell at $45 to $60. Some of this land is as fine as there is in the entire district, and is today well worth double what we are selling it for; terms, one-fourth to one-half cash, balance to suit. Box A-13, Post-Dispatch.

SUMMING UP THE EVIDENCE FOR AND AGAINST "DOCTORED" FOODS

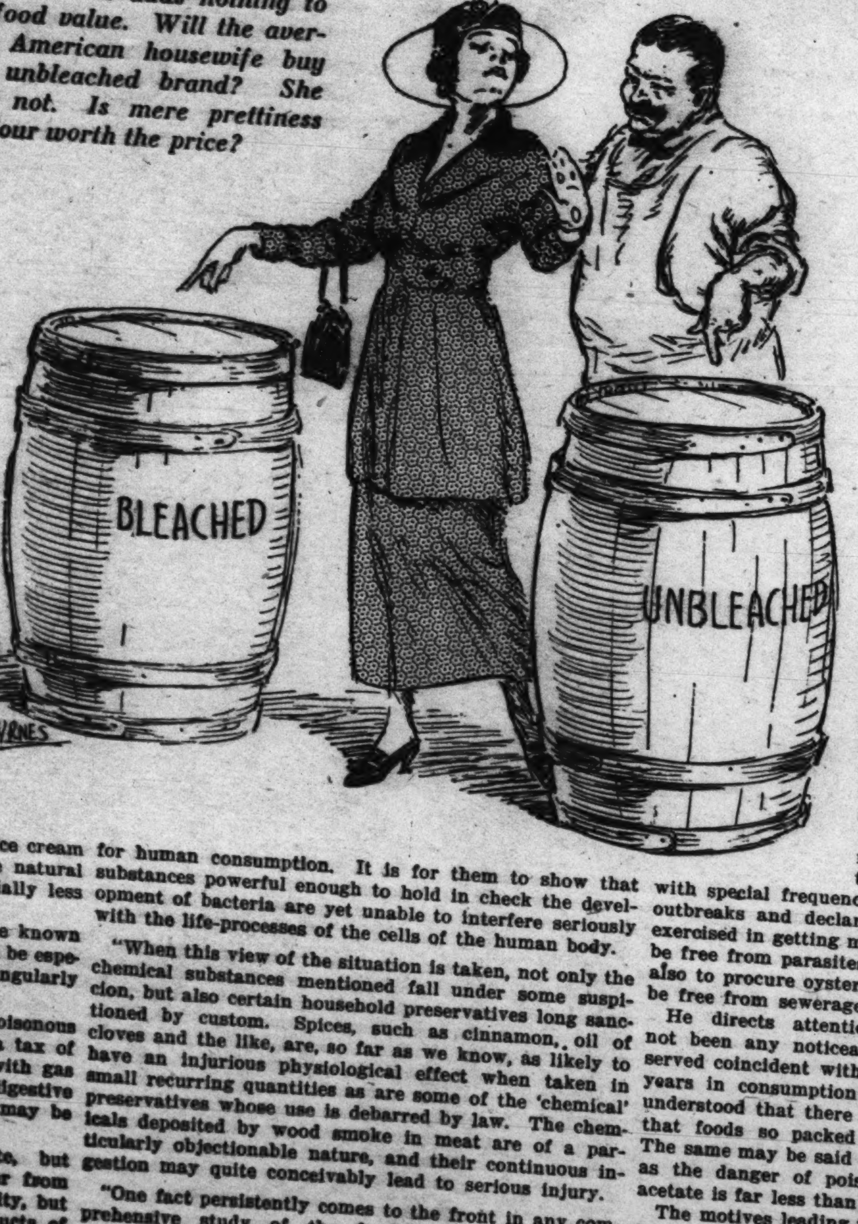
University of Chicago scientist finds a few common adulterations harmless but condemns most of those which are employed merely to please the eye or the palate without regard to food value—High cost of merely bleaching flour—Some poisons wrongfully used in preservation—Tin cans get fairly clean bill of health

PURE food, for more than a decade, has been the subject of intense investigation and legislation. Diet squads have supplemented the researches of the chemists in their laboratories. Tests on animals, and then on humans, have been made to determine the value or harm of this and that ingredient. What, finally, has been the net result? They are summed up in a report made to the University of Chicago in a paper called "Food Poisoning," written by Prof. Edwin Oakes Jordan, chairman of the Department of Hygiene and Bacteriology. In his report the following conclusions are stated:

WELL-DEFINED cases of food poisoning cause the death of many persons each year, despite the precautionary propaganda of pure food advocates, with which most people are more or less familiar. How frequently actual poisoning from food occurs is not definitely known, but almost everybody is aware that certain articles of food are now and again held responsible for severe "attacks of indigestion," other physiological disturbances and even death. No doubt can be entertained, however, that intestinal and other disorders, due to particular articles of food, occur more frequently than recorded.

Cases of poisoning by articles of food may be distinguished as those caused by some injurious constituent in the food itself, such as toadstools, and those caused by a peculiar condition of the individual consuming the food, by virtue of which essentially wholesome food substances are capable of producing illness in certain individuals. The latter group includes persons apparently normal in other respects, who are more or less injuriously affected by some particular article of diet, such as eggs or milk, which are ordinarily freely eaten without trouble by all normal beings.

The tendency to color wholesome foods with artificial matter, in most cases to make the article more tempting and thus promote a great demand for commercial reasons, is condemned as foolish.



One barrel of flour is bleached snow white, the other is the natural color of the wheat after milling. The process of bleaching increases the cost of the flour from fifty cents to one dollar, but it adds nothing to its food value. Will the average American housewife buy the unbleached brand? She will not. Is mere prettiness of flour worth the price?

"Copper sulphate is but one of a host of chemical substances applied to various foods for the purpose of altering the color which the foods would otherwise possess," Prof. Jordan writes. "In some cases, perhaps, it may be the general opinion that by special treatment the attractiveness of a food product is increased, as when dark flour is bleached with nitrogen peroxide, but in many instances the modification of color is based on preposterously artificial standards. The use of aniline dyes for staining candies all colors of the rainbow must be defended, if at all, on esthetic rather than on sanitary grounds.

"Some coloring matters in common use, such as the annatto, universally employed in coloring butter, are believed to be without harmful effect, but others are to be viewed with suspicion, and still others, like copper sulphate, are unquestionably dangerous.

"The whole practice of food coloration at best involves waste and may entail serious danger to health. Broadly speaking, all modifications of the natural color of foodstuffs is based on an idle convention and should be prohibited in the interest of public welfare. Bleached flour, stained butter, dyed jelly and ice cream are no whit more desirable as foods than the natural untreated substances; in fact, they are essentially less desirable.

"If the whole process of food coloration were known to the public, artificially colored foods would not be especially appetizing. Economically the practice is singularly futile.

"The artificial whitening of flour with the poisonous nitrogen peroxide seems hardly worth the extra tax of 50 cents to a dollar a barrel. Such bleaching with gas certainly does not improve the nutritive or digestive qualities of flour, and Prof. Jordan believes it may be insidiously injurious."

He admits that it is not only legitimate, but in every way most desirable, to keep food over from a season of superabundance to a season of scarcity, but does not countenance the addition to food products of antiseptic chemicals in wide variety and of dubious physiological effect.

"It is not so easy and simple as it might appear to declare that no substance that is poisonous shall be added to food," he writes. "The scientific conception of a poison is one involving the amount as well as the kind of substance. Common salt itself is poisonous in large doses, but, as everyone knows, small amounts are not only not injurious, but absolutely necessary to health. Well-known and very powerful protoplasmic poisons, such as strychnine and quinine, are frequently administered in minute doses for medicinal purposes without causing serious results.

"How complicated the question of using food preservatives really is appears in the case of smoked meats and fish, which owe their keeping qualities to the creosote and other substances with which they are impregnated by the smoke. Although these substances are much more highly poisonous than chemical preservatives like benzoic acid, over which much concern has been expressed, but little if any objection has been made to the use of smoked foods."

With respect to familiar and more or less poisonous substances used to preserve foods, Prof. Jordan holds that "formaldehyde, salicylic acid, sulphurous acid and sulphite are compounds definitely poisonous in relatively small amounts, their injurious action in minute successive doses in animal experiments is quite marked, and their use in human food products practically without justification."

"Boric acid and borax are perhaps on a slightly different footing," he continues, "but are never present in natural foods, and there is no good evidence that their long-continued ingestion in small doses is without injurious effect.

"It must not be forgotten that all such substances owe their preservative or antiseptic power to the poisonous effect they have upon bacterial protoplasm. It is fair to assume that, in general, bacterial protoplasm is no more easily injured than human protoplasm, and this raises at once the propriety of bringing into repeated contact with human tissues substances likely to produce injury, even if such injury is slight and recovery from it is ordinarily easy. In every case the burden of proof should be properly placed on those who advocate the addition of bacterial-restraining substances to food intended for human consumption. It is for them to show that substances powerful enough to hold in check the development of bacteria are yet unable to interfere seriously with the life-processes of the cells of the human body.

"When this view of the situation is taken, not only the chemical substances mentioned fall under some suspicion, but also certain household preservatives long sanctioned by custom. Spices, such as cinnamon, oil of cloves and the like, are, so far as we know, as likely to have an injurious physiological effect when taken in small recurring quantities as are some of the 'chemical' preservatives whose use is debarred by law. The chemicals deposited by wood smoke in meat are of a particularly objectionable nature, and their continuous ingestion may quite conceivably lead to serious injury.

"One fact persistently comes to the front in any comprehensive study of the food-preservative question, namely, the need of further experiment and observation. We do not at present know what effect is produced in human beings of different ages and varying degrees of strength by the long-continued consumption of food preserved with particular chemicals.

"Until such information is forthcoming we do well to err on the side of caution. * * * For aught we know to the contrary, the relatively high death rates from degenerative changes in the kidneys, blood vessels and other organs may be in part caused by the use of irritating chemical substances in food. Although no one chemical by itself and in the quantities in which it is commonly present in food can perhaps be reasonably accused of producing serious and permanent injury, yet when to its effect is superadded the effect of still other poisonous ingredients in spiced, smoked and preserved foods of all kinds, the total burden laid upon the excretory and other organs may be distinctly too great. There can be no escape from the conclusion that the more extensive and widespread the use of preservatives in food the greater the likelihood of injurious consequences to the public health."

Mineral or organic poisons—chemical poisons—sometimes find their way into food, either accidentally in the process of manufacture or preparation, or being added deliberately with intent to improve the appearance or keeping qualities of the food, Prof. Jordan points out.

"So powerful a poison as arsenic has been occasionally introduced into food by stupidity or carelessness. Arsenic has been found by English authorities to be generally present in food materials dried or roasted with gases arising from combustion of coal, and in materials treated with sulphuric acid during process of preparation.

"A celebrated epidemic of 'peripheral neuritis' in the English Midlands, in 1900, was traced to the presence of dangerous quantities of arsenic in beer. About 6000 persons were affected * * * and there were 70 deaths. The beer coming from the suspected breweries had all been manufactured with the use of brewing sugars * * * found to have been impregnated with arsenic by the sulphuric acid used in their preparation.

"The use of glucose, not only in beer, but as an admixture or adulterant in jams, syrups, candies and the like is open to serious objection unless the glucose is known to have been prepared with sulphuric acid freed from arsenical impurity.

"The cheaper grades of enameled cooking utensils in use in this country contain antimony, and this is dissolved out in noteworthy amounts in cooking various foods. The rubber nipples used for infants' milk bottles also sometimes contain antimony. Although the poisonous qualities of antimony are well known, there is little information about the toxic effect of repeated very minute doses. Recognized instances of chronic antimony poisoning are very rare. Further investigation is needed.

"The well-known poisonousness of lead and its compounds prevents, as a rule, the deliberate addition of lead salts to food substances, although it is true that lead chromate is sometimes used for imparting a yellow color to candy and for decorating sugars. Foods wrapped in foil, however, such as chocolate and soft cheese, contain traces of lead, as do the contents of preserve jars with metallic caps and the 'soft drinks' vended in bottles with quantities of lead is probably a matter of little physiological importance, but since lead is a cumulative poison, frequent taking into the body of even very small amounts entails danger. * * *

"In consequence of the fact that many natural waters attack lead, the use of lead service pipes for wells, cisterns and public water supplies has given rise to numerous outbreaks of lead poisoning. It is now generally recognized that water intended for drinking purposes should not be drawn through lead pipes."

The use of copper sulphate for imparting a green color to certain vegetables, such as peas, beans and asparagus, is condemned by Prof. Jordan as an esthetic gratification fraught with some degree of danger to health. The United States Government, he points out, now prohibits the importation of foods colored with copper and also the interstate trade in these substances.

Prof. Jordan classes raw meat, raw milk, cheese and shellfish as the articles of food which figure with special frequency in the reports of food poisoning outbreaks and declares that too much care cannot be exercised in getting milk and meat from cattle known to be free from parasites harmful to the human body, and also to procure oysters and clams from water known to be free from sewerage or other pollution.

He directs attention to the fact that there has not been any noticeable amount of tin poisoning observed coincident with the enormous increase in recent years in consumption of canned foods, and lets it be understood that there is no ground for the assumption that foods so packed are likely to be contaminated. The same may be said of foods cooked in copper vessels, as the danger of poisoning from verdigris or copper acetate is far less than it was once imagined to be.

The motives leading to the tampering with food, Prof. Jordan writes, fall mainly under three heads: (1) A desire to preserve food from spoiling or deterioration; (2) a peurile-fancy—often skillfully fostered for mercenary reasons—for a conventional appearance, as for polished rice, bleached flour and grass-green peas; and (3) intent to make the less valuable appear more valuable—deliberate fraud.

Only the first-named motive can claim any legitimate justification, and its gratification by the use of chemical preservatives is surrounded with hygienic difficulties and uncertainty.

From the unbiased view of human physiology, the dangers of slow poisoning from chemically treated foods must be regarded as no less real, because they are insidious and not easily traced.

The solution of the problem of driving unfit foods from the market, he maintains, lies in a policy of educational enlightenment of the masses in the value of good things to eat, and the danger that often lurks in the colored, chemically treated substances prepared principally to please the eye and with less thought for nutrients and physiological effect.

AMERICA'S WEALTHIEST TENT-DWELLER

OF all the Missouri expatriates who dot the great Southwest, it is doubtful if anyone has more fun than Harold Bell Wright, the novelist. He lives the simple life, almost a primitively simple life, in a very elaborate and luxurious manner.

That a man whose income exceeds $100,000 a year should choose to live in a tent winter and summer is striking, but an acquaintance with the author reveals more striking characteristics.

Ten years ago Mr. Wright was pastor of the Christian Church at Lebanon, Mo. The success of his second book convinced him that he had a bigger ministry in literature, so he came West, where he felt sure he would be in better health. One day he and Mrs. Wright were riding horseback in the Imperial Valley, California, and an automobile ran into them at high speed. Mr. Wright was injured internally, but he soon recovered. Mrs. Wright was not so badly hurt. He found that during his convalescence he was more comfortable in the dry climate of Arizona Since then he has lived in the desert

His winter camp is 12 miles from Tucson, over a frightful road. The camp is on a headland at the base of the Catalina Mountains. A canyon which ends in a waterfall, dry in summer, is just behind it Thirteen khaki-colored tents compose the home of the novelist and his family. The two youngest boys insist that the thirteenth tent is the school tent.

Each member of the family has a sleeping tent. There is a kitchen and dining-room tent and a big sitting-room tent These are grouped around a little plaza, in which is a bird fountain, built of rock and fed with water brought in pipes from the canyon.

A hundred yards from the fountain, toward the mountains, is the school tent. A hundred yards in the other direction is the study. Here Mr. Wright works. The stiff wind from the high mesa whips the walls and cracks the fly, but he is not afflicted with nerves.

The walls have celluloid windows, and the whole wall rolls up like an awning. Mr. Wright likes lots of sun, and when he has reached the writing stage of a novel, he frequently sits out in the open, using a table of his own invention for a desk. This table has a bowed canvas top, like a prairie schooner, to keep the light off the paper, and serve as windshield.

Behind the study is the rifle range. We spent more than an hour there, and the novelist beat me with both rifle and revolver at all distances, but he kept his victories down to a few polite points in each contest, as becomes a host.

Then he displayed the pets. A magnificent white-breasted and red-tailed hawk, with four-foot spread of wing was slowly circling above the camp. Round and round he went, and finally lit on a mesquite near by.

"That is Hawkins," said Mr. Wright, pointing to the hawk "I took him out of a nest in a giant tree cactus last year, just before he learned to fly. I raised him here, and he was the spoiled pet of the camp. When he was grown, other hawks flew over and talked to him, and he grew more and more restless, until finally he flew away. We never kept him in a cage or tied him. He comes back occasionally, and George feeds him, but he does not come in my tent any more."

George is the Japanese cook and major domo. He and a chauffeur, a tutor and a secretary make up the equipment of the camp, outside of the Wright family. The Wrights have three sons, but only two of them are at the camp, Paul and Norman. The oldest, Gilbert, is at the Army and Navy Academy at Pacific Beach, Cal.

Mr. Wright says his camp is just "two looks" from the sea. From his study many mountains are visible. Old Baldy, which seems, a few leagues distant, to rise from the plain, is 50 miles away. To the right of Baldy may be seen a dim peak of the Baboquivari Mountains, from the top of which, it is said, the Gulf of California may be seen.

Resting in the comfortable camp, it seemed strange to think that this houseless, homeless man was the most widely read of all American authors, and that his profits from his pen are greater than the salary of the President of the United States.

He produces a novel every two years, every other August. His next one is to be a story of the Ozark Mountains, the scene of the "Shepherd of the Hills." He will go back to the scene in Missouri this fall to put the book together.

The Dangers of Dover

had seen the smoke and flames and were coming up full speed. They rescued the two men in the nick of time, for the matloe lost consciousness before they had hauled him into the small boat which put off from one of the patrols.

That's the type of men they get in the navy. This matloe was just an ordinary enlisted man. He would have been expected to do his duty, even in the face of almost certain death, but he was ready and did more than his duty in saving his superior. And yet a party of British sailors who landed after the Jutland battle were mobbed and several persons were hurt, because the people thought the British had lost from the first reports received.

It wasn't long after this experience of the destroyer with the mine that I went on a run in an M. L. (motor launch for submarine chasing) from Dover. The subaltern in command of the boat was as nervy as the best of them, but he hadn't had much nautical experience. What he knew about navigation and the King's regulations could have been engraved on the face of a dime. As we were running back into the harbor, they began signaling us from shore. The subaltern looked at the signals through his glasses, peeped in the book, grunted and went blissfully ahead. I rather felt at the time he didn't know what the signals meant, just from the sort of self-conscious way in which he put his glasses down. Of course, I did not know the British code.

Those fellows hate to let on they are stumped. They'll race neck and neck with death rather than let it be known they lack any of the qualifications. A moment later the signal flags were hauled down and run up again. We held our course and the flags were lowered and raised several times, as if trying to attract our attention to them on shore. Presently a man began wigwagging frantically, while the flag signals were still at masthead. Then a gun boomed.

"What in the deuce is all the row?" inquired our sub, innocently.

Right on we blazed our way, without changing our course a hair, and, before we were well into the harbor, a whole swarm of M. L.'s and other craft came swooping down on us.

"What you got the navy with you for?" asked our sub through the megaphone when he was within speaking distance of the leading craft.

"To pick up the pieces of you, you blithering idiot," said the Brass Hat in command. "Run alongside here for orders."

We ran alongside, and, if orders is what our smart young sub got, I don't want any.

"You've just come over a new mine field, you young numbskull," roared the Brass Hat. "It's only luck—bad luck for us, I'm thinkin'—that saved you from being blown higher than a kite. You go ashore. Didn't you see those signals?"

"Yes, sir," said the sub.

"Well, you go ashore and don't you get within 50 yards of the water again till you know the book and can read signals backwards and upside down. The navy wouldn't lose much in you, but you've got a few men on board with you that we'd like to keep."

And, as the Brass Hat chug-chugged away in his launch, there was indignation in the lines of the very boat itself.

"What's all the bally row about signals?" said our sub in a grieved tone of voice. "We're here all right, aren't we? I say!"

He had been about as near death as he will come before he actually goes over, but that was all he had to say about it. I know I was pale. I felt it. And my knees had a tendency to drum against each other.

I think the average person could get excitement enough during a short stay in Dover to last almost a lifetime. There is almost always something doing at sea, ashore or in the air. You can hear the big guns in Belgium and France on a still day.

One morning I was talking with some acquaintances on the parade grounds. Someone shouted, "Aeroplanes!" Everybody's head went back and all eyes began to stare into the sky. Sure enough, there were a number of them, so high they were little more than specks. Out of the hangars on the cliffs our own planes began to be run. The anti-aircraft guns—Archies, they call them in England, began to bark, but bark was all they did, for we could see the shrapnel burst way short of the enemy fliers.

The British were quick in getting up, but the planes were so high that they had passed over us before our boys were close enough to do them any damage. We had mostly heavy hydroplanes at that time, not speedy enough to keep up with the swift German war machines, but the flotilla went in chase anyway. The British navy will take a chance with anything—proven when two destroyers tackled six the other day.

Presently there was another cry. Two more machines had been spotted. They were flying low.

"Must be a couple of our own," says someone.

"No; they're Boches, all right," reports an officer with glasses.

They must be traveling about 100 miles an hour. One swerves out over the harbor. Something shoots out from beneath it. There is the roar of an explosion. A bomb has burst 40 yards or so from a destroyer lying at anchor.

Anti-aircraft guns begin sprinkling shrapnel around the plane which is over the harbor. It is almost close enough now for machine guns. Several begin to drum. The aeroplane itself is using a machine gun against the destroyers. It swoops down.

"Must be hit," says a man at my elbow.

It does seem so, for the plane is careening straight for the wireless mast of another destroyer, just skimming the water. It is splendid flying—magnificent.

With machine gun spitting, the pilot shoots gracefully upward, just clearing the wireless mast and spraying lead all over the deck of the vessel. Then he sweeps on over the shore in the direction his fellows had gone.

"They'll get," begins the man at my elbow; but whatever else he was going to say was lost in a roar that shook the earth we stood on.

We turn round and gape at a jagged pit which has been blown in the parade ground, too close to us to be comfortable. In our interest in the aeroplane fight with the destroyers, we had forgotten the one which circled over the bluffs.

The people of Dover must be accustomed to such raids, for there is no excitement—no scurrying for protection. Everyone now turns his attention to the second plane. Straight over the town it flies. There is another roar—rather a muffled one. It has reduced to dust and splinters several rooms in the hotel, including the suite de luxe.

One more crash before the Boche becomes a speck in the distance. This time the bomb leaves a hole in the paved street where before there had been a cart and horse.

One by one our planes returned without having caught the enemy. One fellow, the fastest of them all, was out until 4 o'clock that evening, but he had not been able to overtake the Boches.

This was some time ago. I am not permitted to tell the date, and I believe that such a raid has been made almost impossible today. The British were not equipped to combat such powerful and speedy planes in the early months of the war.—(Copyright.)

First Teuton Account of the Battle of the Marne

French began to attack in mass formation. The occupants of those trenches, who had already beaten back several of those attacks, spurred us on to shoot and then began to fire themselves into the on-rushing crowd as if demented. Amidst the shouting and the noise one could hear the cries of the officers of the infantry: 'Fire! Fire! More lively!' We fired until the barrels of our rifles became quite hot. The enemy turned to flee. The heap of victims lying between us and our opponents had again been augmented by hundreds. The attack had been beaten back.

"It was dark, and it rained and rained. From all directions one heard in the darkness the wounded calling, crying and moaning. The wounded we had with us were likewise moaning and crying. All wanted to have their wounds dressed, but we had no more bandages. We tore off pieces of our dirty shirts and placed the rags on those sickening wounds. Men were dying one after the other. There were no doctors, no bandages; we had nothing whatever. You had to help the wounded and keep the French off at the same time. It was an unbearable, impossible state of things. It rained harder and harder. We were wet to our skins. We fired blindly into the darkness. The rolling fire of the rifles increased, then died away, then increased again. * * *

"We continued shooting without any aim. The crying of the wounded became louder and louder. * * * Nobody could help them, for it would have been madness to venture between the lines. Louder and more imploring became the voices that were calling out, 'Stretcher bearer. Help! Help! Water!' For an answer they got at most a curse or a malediction.

"Our trench was filled with water for about a foot—water and mud. The dead and wounded lay in that mire where they had dropped. We had to make room. So we threw the dead out of the trench. At 1 o'clock n the night people came with stretchers and took away nost of the wounded. But there was no help at all for he poor fellows between the lines. To fill the cup of nisery we received orders, in the course of the night, o attack the enemy's lines at 4:15 a. m. At the time et, in a pouring rain, we got ready for storming. Reeived by a terrible fire from the machine guns, we had to turn back half way. Again we sacrificed uselessly a great number of men. Scarcely had we arranged ourselves again in our trench when the French began a new attack. * * * Three times more the French attacked within two hours, each time suffering great losses and achieving not the slightest success.

"We did not know what to do. If help did not arrive soon it would be impossible for us to maintain our positions. We were tormented by hunger and thirst; were wet to the skin, and tired enough to drop down. At 10 o'clock the French attacked a fourth time. They came up in immense masses. Our leaders recognized at last the danger in which we were and withdrew us. We retreated in waves, abandoning the wounded and our material. By exerting our whole strength we succeeded in saving the machine guns and ammunition.

"We went back a thousand yards and established ourselves in our old trenches. The officers called to us that we would have to stay there, whatever happened; reinforcements would soon come up. Our opponents, who were following us, were treated to a hail of bullets. * * * The reinforcements we had been promised did not arrive. Some 800 yards behind us were six German batteries, which, however, maintained but a feeble fire.

"An officer of the artillery appeared in our midst and asked the commander of our section whether it would not be wise to withdraw the batteries. He said he had been informed by telephone that the whole German line was wavering. Before the commander had time to answer another attack in mass formation took place, the enemy being five or seven times as numerous as we were. As if by command, we quitted our position without having been told to do so, completely demoralized. We retired in full flight, leaving the six batteries (36 guns) to the enemy."

The French then ceased their curtain of fire, fearing to endanger their own troops, which gave the Germans opportunity to bring up reserves, and a counter attack for posssion of the guns was launched. A bloody, hand-to-hand fight followed, and the Germans recovered them, and were reinforced as well.

"The horses of the guns now arrived at a mad gallop, to take away the guns. At the same moment the French artillery opened a murderous fire, with all sizes of guns, on that column of more than 30 teams. * * * Confusion arose. The six horses of the various teams reared and fled in all directions, drawing the overturned limbers behind them with wheels uppermost. Some of the maddest animals ran straight into the hottest fire, to be torn to pieces, together with their drivers."

Notwithstanding these reverses, the hard-pressed Germans were ordered to attack and gain possession of their lost trenches, though the whole line, for miles, at this time was wavering under fierce attacks of the French. They ran forward, but were surprised at meeting no resistance. They continued still farther, almost to their lost trenches, when they encountered a murderous machine-gun fire, poured into them from all quarters.

They halted again, exhausted, and before they could take up positions, were attacked on front and flank. The German left wing had been cut off and was surrendering in masses. However, the French gave no quarter, precisely as the Germans had behaved a few days before at Sommepy, where they mercilessly slaughtered great numbers of surrendering French.

"We in the center could give them no help. We were getting less from minute to minute. 'Revenge for Sommepy!' I heard it ringing in my ears. The right wing turned, drew us along, and a wild stampede began. Our direct retreat being cut off, we ran backwards across the open fields, everyone for himself, with beating hearts that seemed ready to burst, all the time under the enemy's fire. * * *

"Was that the terrible German war machine? Were those the cowardly, degenerated Frenchmen whom we had driven before us for days? No, it was war, terrible, horrid war, in which fortune is fickle. Today it smiles upon you; tomorrow the other fellow's turn comes."

The Germans managed to reach Vitrey-le-Francois, in the rear, but the whole army on that front lost all its stores, guns and ammunition to the French. Only 12 men were left of the author's company.

From Vitrey-le-Francois the Germans gave way under the pursuit of the French and retreated farther from the river which gives its name to the great battle that upset German strategy and saved Paris.

The Last Testament of the American Poet Who Gave His Life for France

Alan Seeger's diary and letters form an extraordinary prose record of the great war and reveal that, in addition to his love for France, he enlisted through a desire to experience every human emotion —. Doomed to months of trench warfare, he fretted for bigger things and when finally his supreme moment came he fell in a charge of the famous Foreign Legion—Letters to his mother are beautiful messages of philosophical comment on his attitude toward the conflict and adjurations to her to be a "Spartan"

-:- -:- -:-

SAID Alan Seeger, the young American poet who died fighting for France, in a letter to his mother:

"The winter in the trenches was certainly hard; but it is already far enough away for the miseries to fade out of the picture, and for the rest to become tinged with the iridescence of romance. What is Virgil's line about the pleasure it will be some time to recall having once done these things? I have known that all along, through no matter what fatigue and monotony. Never have I regretted doing what I am doing, nor would I at this moment be anywhere else than where I am. I pity the poor civilians who shall never have seen or known the things that we have seen and known. Great as are the pleasures that they are continuing to enjoy and that we have renounced, the sense of being the instrument of Destiny is to me a source of greater satisfaction.

"Nothing but good can befall the soldier, so he plays his part well. Come out of the ordeal safe and sound, he has had an experience in the light of which all life thereafter will be three times richer and more beautiful; wounded, he will have the esteem and admiration of all men and the approbation of his own conscience; killed, more than any other man, he can face the unknown without misgiving—that is, so long as death comes upon him in a moment of courage and enthusiasm, not of faltering or fear; and that this may, if necessary, be the case, I shall strain all my will the day that it comes around to our turn to go into the furnace. I have a feeling that that day is near at hand."

Here we have Alan Seeger's attitude toward the war and his share in it. Primarily inspired by a desire to experience every human emotion, he also was moved by a love for France and especially for Paris. A remarkable record of the young poet's experiences and his philosophical comment upon them, has just been compiled by his father and published by Charles Scribner's Sons. They consist of a diary and letters written by young Seeger himself in the trenches, in billets and in halts on the march.

Alan Seeger died as a "poilu" in the famous French Foreign Legion in the charge on Belloy-en-Santerre on July 4, 1916—a fitting date for the death of an American. The public already is familiar with his name through the publication of his war sonnets and poems. The diary and letters were collected by his father after his death and arranged by him in chronological order.

AFTER six weeks of hard drilling—12 hours a day at 1 sou a day—Alan Seeger suffered the cruel disappointment—to him—of being sent with his battalion of the legion to the trenches in the French center, where, after the battle of the Marne, there was a deadlock for more than a year. There followed months of the montony of trench warfare—guard duty at night, artillery duels and the keen discomforts of life in the vermin-infested dugouts.

"Five days and nights of pure misery," he says in his diary Nov. 10, 1914. "It is a miserable life to be condemned to, shivering in these wretched holes, in the cold and dirt and the semi-darkness. It is impossible to cross the open spaces in daylight, so that we can only get food by going down to the kitchens before dawn and after sundown. The increasing cold will make this kind of existence almost insupportable, with its accompaniments of vermin and dysentery. Could we only attack or be attacked! I would hear the order with delight. The real courage of the soldier is not in facing the balls, but the fatigue and discomfort and misery."

But he found compensations even in this life; indeed, throughout his writings he makes plain his determination to cheerfully take what may come, like a good soldier. "This experience," he wrote his mother, "will teach me the sweetness and worth of the common things of life. The world will be more beautiful to me in consequence." The tedium of sentry duty was relieved for him when he was privileged to watch the dawn. He says:

"There is something fascinating * * * in watching the dawn slowly illumine one of these new landscapes from a position taken up under cover of darkness. The other section has been relieved and departs, We are given the consigne by the preceding sentinel and are left alone behind a mound of dirt facing the north and the blank, perilous night. Slowly the mystery that it shrouds resolves as the gray light steals over the eastern hills. Like a photograph in the washing, its high lights and shadows come gradually forth. The light splash in the foreground becomes a ruined chateau, the gray streak a demolished village.

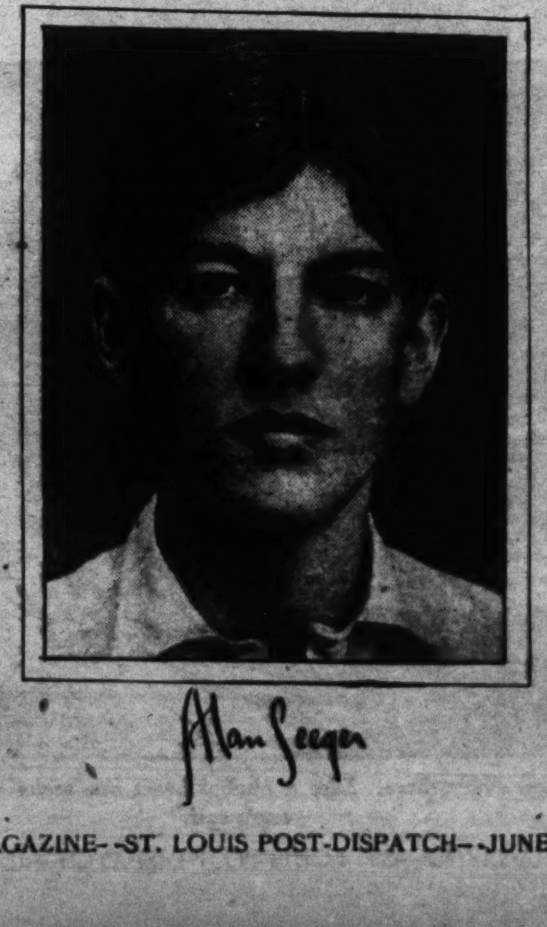
"Sentry duty, which may be all that is melancholy if the night is bad, and the winter wind moans through the pines, may bring moments of exaltation if the cloud bank rolls back, if the moonlight breaks over the windless hills or the heavens blaze with the beauty of the northern stars."

Once, after five days in the trenches, he "played truant," so that he could have a free afternoon. It was "an afternoon of memorable beauty. I shall never forget the beauty of this winter landscape, the delicate skies, the little villages under their smoking roofs. Am feeling perfectly happy and contented. This life agrees with me; there will be war for many years to come in Europe, and I shall continue to be a soldier as long as there is war."

But, as he explained in a previous letter to his mother, nature to him was not only hills and blue skies and flowers, but "the universe, the totality of things, reality as it most obviously presents itself to us, and in this universe strife and sternness play as big a part as love and tenderness, and cannot be shirked by one whose will it is to rule his life in accordance with the cosmic forces he sees in play about him. I hope you see the thing as I do and think that I have done well, being without responsibilities and with no one to suffer materially by my decision, in taking upon my shoulders, too, the burden that so much of humanity is suffering under and, rather than stand ingloriously aside when the opportunity was given me, doing my share for the side that I think right."

In January, 1915, he had his first real encounter with the Germans, when his company was removed to the most dangerous sector of the line they were holding. He tells of being under fire in a small engagement in which a Corporal was killed. Their quarters were in the cellar of a ruined chateau, and he tells how, after a nerve-racking night on sentry duty, the men were served with a hot soup of coffee and heated their day's ration of wine, which, with a little sugar, made an excellent sleeping potion. But most precious was the little measure of sweet rum. "There is nothing like it for reviving the spirits after a night in the cold. A delicious languor steals through the limbs. Gradually the conversation subsides. One by one the candles are blown out. The soldier lays out his sleeping place carefully, lingers over his preparations, so as to know in its fullness of sensual delight the bliss of falling to sleep.

"How insipid beside it seem all the refinements of comfort that peace permits! Though we return to them once more, we will never think without fondness of the luxury it was in these days of strenuous toil and robust health to lie down after a night's watch in the straw-covered cellar bottom of our ruined chateau."



Alan Seeger

Replying to a letter from his mother chiding him for having enlisted in a war that was much longer than he could have foreseen, he wrote:

"You are quite wrong about my not realizing what I was going into when I enlisted. I had not been living for two years in Europe without coming to understand the situation very well and I was under no illusion that the conflict which was to decide the fate of empires and remake the map of Europe would be a matter of a few months. I knew that it would be a fight to a finish, just as our Civil War was. * * * Personally, I can see no end at present."

He writes to his father, describing how a German bullet "grazed my arm, tore the sleeve of my capote and raised a lump on the biceps which is still sore, but the skin was not broken." On a postcard he assured his mother that "we are just nightwatchmen at present, which does not please me."

When the news of the sinking of the Lusitania had reached the trenches, Alan wrote his mother:

"I suppose American public sentiment is terribly wrought up, but I have no hope that Washington will do anything, and I was not surprised to see that Ambassador Gerard had been instructed to ask for an official report, on the basis of which a new note will be drawn. Why, in the name of all dignity, does not the American Government act or shut up, for the Gazette de Cologne explicitly states that all indignant protestations will be received with absolute coldness?

"I cannot understand the American state of mind, nor why Americans have the temerity to venture into a declared war zone, much less let their wives and children go there, when anyone with a grain of sense might have foreseen what has happened. They might just as well come over here and go out Maying in front of our barbed wires."

At this point in Alan's writings there is a sentence here and there which seems to show that he has received a premonition of what his end is to be. Some of it was reflected in his letters home, and to his mother he said:

"You must not be anxous about my not coming back. The chances are about ten to one that I will. But if I should not, you must be proud, like a Spartan mother, and feel that it is your contribution to the triumph of the cause whose righteousness you feel so keenly. Everybody should take part in this struggle, which is to have so decisive an effect, not only on the nations engaged, but on all humanity. There should be no neutrals, but each one should bear some part of the burden. If so large a part should fall to your share, you would be in so far superior to other women and should be correspondingly proud. There would be nothing to regret, for I could not have done otherwise than what I did, and I think I could not have done better. Death is nothing terrible after all. It may mean something even more wonderful than life. It cannot possibly mean anything worse to the good soldier. So do not be unhappy, but no matter what happens walk with your head high and glory in your large share of whatever credit the world may give me."

Just a few days later he wrote again to his mother:

"Had I the choice, I would be nowhere else in the world than where I am. Even had I the chance to be liberated, I would not take it. So do not be sorrowful then. It is the shirkers and slackers alone in this war who are to be lamented. The tears for those who take part in it and who do not return should be sweetened by the sense that theirs was the death which beyond all others they would have chosen for themselves, that they went into it smiling and without regret, feeling that whatever value their continued presence in the world might be to humanity, it could not be greater than the example and inspiration they were to it in so departing. We to whom the idea of death is familiar, walking always among the little mounds and crosses of the men 'mort au champ d'honneur,' know what this means. If I thought that you could feel about me as I feel about them, the single self-reproach I have, that of causing you possible unhappiness, would be mitigated."

He speaks in his diary of meeting his friend, Victor Chapman, then in the machine-gun section of the French army and later killed when a member of the American air squadron. In July came the news of the fall of Warsaw and the pages of the diary take on a gloomy tone:

"Perhaps historic fatality has decreed that the German people shall dominate in the twentieth century, as French, English, Spanish and Italian have in preceding centuries. To me the matter of supreme importance is not to be on the winning side, but on the side where my sympathies lie. * * * But let it be understood that I never took arms out of any hatred against Germany or Germans, but purely out of love for France. The German contribution to civilization is too large and German ideals too generally in accord with my own, to allow me to join in the chorus of hate against a people whom I frankly admire. It was only that the France, and especially the Paris, that I love should not cease to be the glory that they are that I engaged."

Again he wrote, in response to the expressed fears of his mother:

"Given my nature, I could not have done otherwise than I have done. Anything conceivable that I might have done had I not enlisted would have been less than what I am doing now, and anything that I may do after

The Voodoo Mystery

"What is this thing?" asked Aux Cayes, as Collette drew back, and he caught her by the arm.

For a moment Kennedy said nothing, but opened a carefully sealed door and slid the pallet out, unhinging it, while I saw Castine trembling and actually turning ashen about the lips.

"This," Kennedy replied at length, "is what is known as a respiration calorimeter, which I have constructed after the ideas of Profs. Atwater and Benedict of Wesleyan, with some improvements of my own. It is used, as you know, in studying food values, both by the Government and by other investigators. A man could live in that room for 10 or 12 days. My idea, however, was to make use of it for other things than that for which it was intended."

He took a few steps over to the complicated apparatus which had so mystified me, now at rest, as he turned a switch on opening the carefully sealed door.

"It is what is known as a closed circuit calorimeter," he went on. "For instance, through this tube air leaves the chamber. Here is a blower. At this point, the water in the air is absorbed by sulphuric acid. Next the carbon dioxide is absorbed by soda lime. Here a little oxygen is introduced to keep the composition normal and at this point the air is returned to the chamber."

He traced the circuit as he spoke, then paused and remarked: "Thus, you see, it is possible to measure the carbon dioxide and the other respiration products. As for heat, the walls are constructed so that the gain or loss of heat in the chamber is prevented. Heat cannot escape in any other way than that provided for carrying it off and measuring it. Any heat is collected by this stream of water which keeps the temperature constant and in that way we can measure any energy that is given off. The walls are of concentric shells of copper and zinc, with two of wood, between which is 'dead air,' an effective heat insulator. In other words," he concluded, "it is like a huge thermos bottle."

It was all very weird and fascinating. But what he could have been doing with a dead body, I could not imagine. Was there some subtle, unknown poison which had hitherto baffled science, but which now he was about to reveal to us?

He seemed to be in no hurry to overcome the psychological effect his words had on his auditors, for as he picked up and glanced at a number of sheets of figures, he went on: "In the case of live persons, there is a food aperture here, a little window, with air lock arranged for the passage of food and drink. That large window through which you looked admits light. There is also a telephone. Everything is arranged so that all that enters, no matter how minute, is weighted and measured. The same is true of all that leaves. Nothing is too small to take into account."

He shook the sheaf of papers before us. "Here I have some records which have been made by myself and, in my absence, by one of my students. In them the most surprising thing that I have discovered is that in the body of Leon metabolism seems still to be going on."

I listened to him in utter amazement, wondering toward what his argument was tending.

"I got my first clew from an injection of fluoriscine," he resumed. "You know there are many people who have a horror of being buried alive. It is a favorite theme of the creepy-creep writers. As you know, the heart may stop beating, but that does not necessarily mean that the person is dead. There are on record innumerable cases where the use of stimulants has started again the beating of a heart that has stopped.

"Still, burial alive is hardly likely among civilized people, for the simple reason that the practice of embalming makes death practically certain. At once, when I heard that there had been objection to the embalming of this body, I began to wonder why they had been made.

"Then it occurred to me that one certain proof of death was the absolute cessation of circulation. You may not know, but scientists have devised this fluoriscine test to take advantage of that. I injected about 10 grains. If there is any circulation, there should be an emerald green discoloration of the cornea of the eye. If not, the eye should remain perfectly white.

"I tried the test. The green eyeball gave me a hint. Then I decided to make sure with a respiration calorimeter that would measure whatever heat, what breath, no matter how minute they were."

Collette gave a start as she began to realize vaguely what Craig was driving at.

"It was not the voodoo sign, Madamoiselle," he said turning to her. "It was a sign, however, of something that suggested at once to be the connection of voodoo practices."

There was something so uncanny about it that my own heart almost skipped beating, while Burke, by my other side, muttered something which was not meant to be profane.

Collette was now trembling violently, and I took her arm, so that if she should faint she would not fall either on my side or on that of her guardian, who seemed himself on the verge of keeling over. Castine was mumbling. Only his wife seemed to retain her defiance.

"The skill of the voodoo priests in the concoction of strange drafts from the native herbs of Haiti is well known," Kennedy began again. "There are among them fast and slow poisons, poisons that are gauged in strength and accumulate and resemble wasting away and slow death.

"I know that in all such communities today no one will admit that there is such a thing still as the human sacrifice, 'the lamb without horns.' But there is on record a case where a servant was supposed to have died. The master was robbed. Later the victim was resuscitated and sacrificed.

"Most uncanny of the poisons is that which will cause the victim to pass into an unconscious condition so profound that it may easily be mistaken for death. It is almost cataleptic. Such is the case here. My respiration calorimeter shows that from that body there are still coming the products of respiration, that there is still heat in it. It must have been that peculiar poison of the voodoo priests that was used."

Racing on now, not giving any of us a chance even to think of the weird thing, except to shudder instinctively, Kennedy drew from his pocket and slapped down on a table the photographic records that had been taken by his home-made wireless recording apparatus.

"From Mr. Burke," he said, as he did so, "I received the hint that many messages were being transmitted by wireless, secretly perhaps, from the Haytien. I wanted to read those messages that were flashing so quietly and secretly through the air. How could it be done? I managed to install down at the dock an apparatus known as the capillary electrometer. By the use of this almost unimaginably delicate instrument I was able to drag down literally out of the air the secrets that seemed so well hidden from all except those for whom they were intended. Listen."

He took the roll of paper from the drum and ran his finger along it hastily, translating to himself the Morse code as he passed from one point to another.

"Here," cried Craig excitedly. " 'Leon out of way for time safely. Revolution suppressed before Forsythe can make other arrangements. Conspiracy frustrated.' Just a moment. Here's another: 'Have engaged bridal suite at Hotel La Coste. Communicate with me there after tomorrow.' "

Still holding the wireless record, Kennedy swung about to Burke and myself. "Burke, stand over by the door," he shouted. "Walter—that tank of oxygen, please."

I dragged over the heavy tank which he had ordered as he had adjusted a sort of pulmotor breather apparatus over Leon. Then I dropped back to my place beside Collette, as the oxygen hissed out.

Castine was now on his knees, his aged arms outstretched.

"Before God, Mr. Kennedy—I didn't do it. I didn't give Leon the poison!"

Kennedy, however, engrossed in what he was doing, paid no attention to the appeal.

Suddenly I saw what might have been a faint tremor of an eyelid on the pallid body before us.

I felt Collette spring forward from my side.

"He lives! He lives!" she cried, falling on her knees before the still cataleptic form. "Guillaume!"

There was a faint movement of the lips, as though as the man came back from another world he would have called "Collette."

"Seize that man—it is his name signed to the wireless messages!' 'shouted Kennedy, extending his accusing forefinger at Aux Cayes, who had plotted so devilishly to use his voodoo knowledge both to suppress the revolution and at the same time to win his beautiful ward for himself from her real lover.

The Last Testament of an American Poet

the war is over, if I survive, will be less, too. I have always had the passion to play the biggest part within my reach and it is really in a sense a supreme success to be allowed to play this. If I do not come out I will share the good fortune of those who disappear at the pinnacle of their careers. Come to love France and understand the almost unexampled nobility of the effort this admirable people is making, for that will be the surest way of your finding comfort for anything that I am ready to suffer in their cause."

In September, 1915, Alan's regiment went into the great Champagne offensive of that month. His part was a small one, but in his diary, the day before the advance, he wrote:

"I have been waiting for this moment for more than a year. It will be the greatest moment in my life. I shall take good care to live up to it."

The diary ends here with the words: "This diary continued in another which I will carry in the pocket of my capote." But all efforts by his father and other kin to find that diary failed.

He continued to write letters home, and send souvenirs.

Then came the lull on the western front in November, 1915. Rumors of his death had reached his mother, and to her he wrote that "here one has a wholesome notion of the unimportance of the individual. * * * Philosophy, I know, cannot modify the natural sentiments of the heart, so I will refrain from commenting on your letter. I can only say that I am perfectly content here and happier than I could possibly be anywhere else. I was a spectator, now I am an actor. * * * It is better in every respect, and since it was inevitable, there is no use lamenting."

In the winter he passed several weeks in a hospital, recovering from an attack of la grippe, but spring found him back with the legion. Then came the impending battle of the Somme. Finally there came his last communication, written to a friend on June 28, 1917:

"We go up to the attack tomorrow. This will probably be the biggest thing yet. I will write you soon if I get through all right. If not, my only earthly care is for my poems. I am glad to be going in the first wave. If you are in this thing at all it is best to be in to the limit. And this is the supreme experience."

Six days later Alan Seeger "caught it," when just a few days over 28 years of age. A friend in the regiment has told that he caught sight of Seeger when the Foreign Legion charged.

"I called to him, making a sign with my hand," he said. "He answered with a smile. How pale he was! His tall silhouette stood out on the green of the cornfield. He was the tallest man in his section. His head erect, and pride in his eye. I saw him running forward with bayonet fixed. Soon he disappeared and that was the last I saw of my friend."

Seeger had applied for leave to visit Paris on July 4, but had been refused. His battalion moved up to the attack, and the same friend says of those hours:

"I passed almost all the day with Alan. He was perfectly happy.

" 'My dream is coming true,' he said to me, 'and perhaps tomorrow we shall attack. I am more than satisfied, but it's too bad about our July 4 leave. I cannot hope to see Paris again before the 6th or 7th but if this leave is not granted me, maktoob, maktoob,' he finished with a smile.

"The field of battle was relatively calm, a few shells fired by the enemy in retreat, and our troops were advancing on all sides. The Colonials had taken Assevillers and the next day we were to take their places in the first line. Alan and I visited Assevillers, picking up souvenirs, postcards, letters, soldiers' notebooks, and chatting all the time, when suddenly a voice called out: 'The company will fall in to go to the first line.' "

Seeger was not instantly killed. Word has reached this country that when he lay in his death's agony he cheered on the fresh files as they came up, listening anxiously for the cries of triumph which should tell him that the objective was won. He heard them, and then went with the thousands of others who had died for France.

The Retired Colonel Who Became Commander in Chief of the French Armies

but when the time comes, discipline is discipline, I can assure you."

When Gen. Nivelle was given command of the French armies, the place had been offered to Gen. Petain, but the latter declined it because he could not have full power. He detests politicians and refused to go to Paris when asked to do so, to confer with civilian heads of the Government. The answer of the officer to the question of why Petain was only a Colonel when the war broke out, therefore, is apropos in connection with his first refusal of the command.

"He has a horror of advertising," the officer said. "He hates politicians, is a man of uncompromising opinions and has made enemies. He believes he is right and the men who differ from him wrong. He has always been correct before his superiors and nothing else. While other officers have been busy with the fanfaronade and brass buttons and fancy ceremonies of garrison life, and were bent on getting their names and photographs in the newspapers, Petain was only occupied with one thing—training his officers and training himself. When an editor asked him for some account of his military career, he sent back three dates and that was all. He was urged to put his wonderful lectures at the Ecole de Guerre into book form, but he only replied: 'What's the use?' And finally, when Ferdinand of Bulgaria decorated him for these same lectures, he put the decoration in his pocket. That's why Petain is unknown; because he has willed it. Even today he has asked the censor to cut all mention of his name."

TOO FAT?

Here's a Simple, Safe and Reliable Way to Reduce Your Weight

Maybe you have nearly worn out body and patience trying to secure satisfactory weight reduction by following drastic rules requiring starvation dieting or tiresome, troublesome exercises, or drugging.

Even so, you should not lose hope and imagine that you must carry through life a load of burdensome, unhealthy flesh. Here's a very simple easy-to-follow system of treatment that is said to bring truly remarkable results for others, and it will be easy to prove what it can do for you.

Go to your druggist and get a small box of oil of korein capsules. Take one capsule after each meal and one before retiring at night; also follow the other simple directions that come with the capsules.

This method should reduce your weight ten to sixty pounds (or whatever you wish) in a short time and leave your general health and figure greatly improved.

You will be amazed at the improvement in your mind as well as your body when you have begun to reduce your weight.

Oil of korein is absolutely harmless, is pleasant to take, and this treatment is surely worthy of a fair trial if you want to become thinner, healthier and younger in appearance.—ADVERTISEMENT.

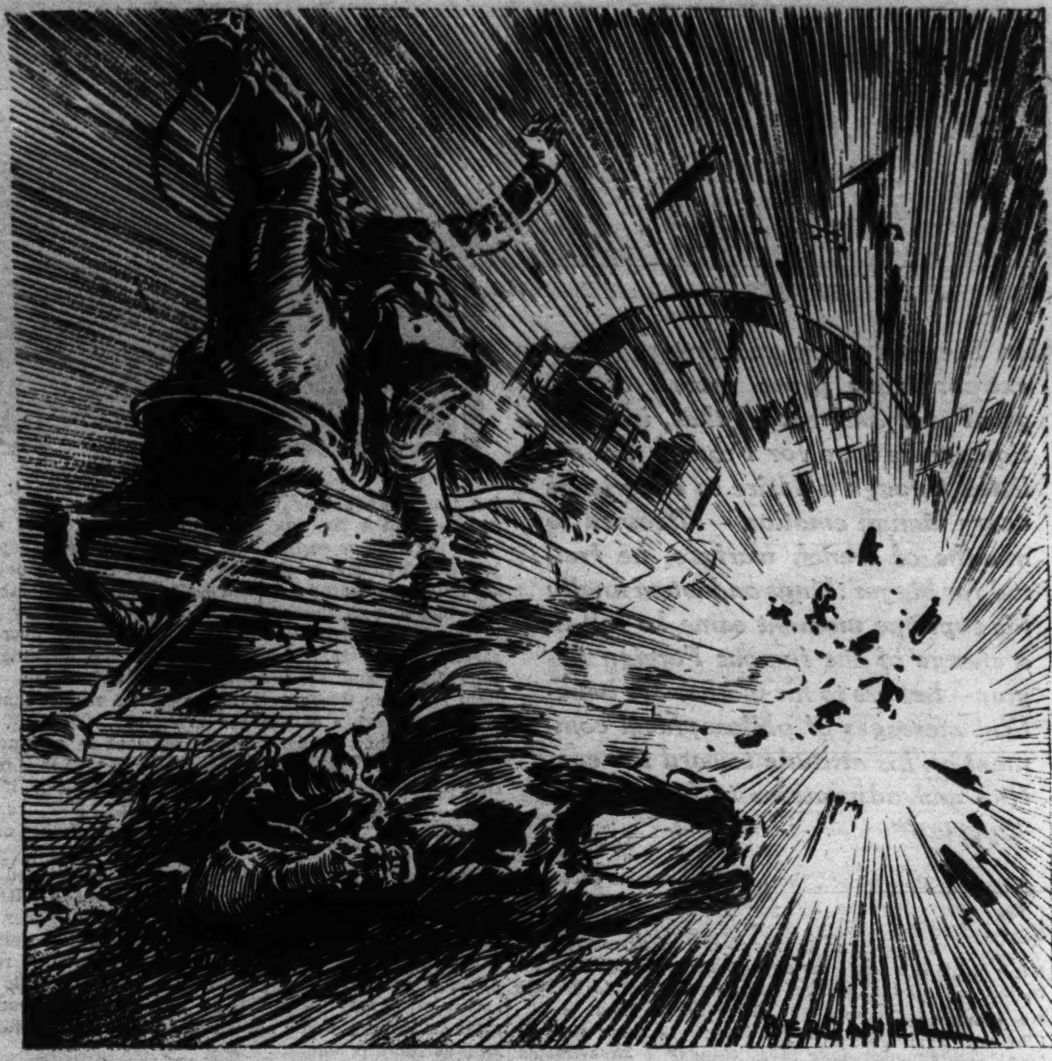
German Deserter Gives First Teutonic Account of the Battle of the Marne

Was one of the first of Kaiser's army to set foot on Belgium soil, and his unit participated in many of the deeds on that violated territory that set the world aghast—How the "Boches" were beaten in the great fight that upset German strategy and saved Paris



Some of the maddest animals ran straight into the hottest fire to be torn to pieces with their drivers.

AT the beginning of the war the subject of this story, a young German miner and Socialist, called to the colors, was among the first German soldiers to put foot on Belgium soil and remained actively engaged in front line work continuously for 14 months, when he was granted a furlough, during which he deserted by escaping to Holland, and came to America as a stowaway in the coal bunker of a Dutch ship.

His experiences as a common soldier in the German army first appeared serially in the New Yorker Volkzeitung, the principal organ of the German-speaking Socialists in the United States, and are now issued in book form as "A German Deserter's War Experiences," translated into English by J. Koettgen (Huebsch).

The narrative is a most eloquent description of the horrors of war. The author, being a Socialist and a foe of militarism, and having been compelled to fight, naturally handles his subject with bitterness and caustic comment on and criticism of the system; but his story is valuable for its candor in relating the depredations and crimes of Germany, in which he participated, in Belgium, from the very beginning of the war, and is especially valuable and interesting as the first German version of the terrible beating administered by the French at the battle of the Marne, the crucial battle of the war, and of the German rout that followed, which finally marked the beginning of trench warfare.

Near the end of July, 1914, the garrison at Koblenz had already been mobilized, for war was in the air, but the formal order of mobilization did not come until Aug. 1. The men did not know who their enemy was to be, but they were told to be ready, and a few days later found themselves crossing the Belgian frontier. In that garrison was a young student of technology, who was serving his third year in the German army. He was an anti-militarist and hated the whole system of employment of force to justify an end, but being a German boy of military age, was pressed into the army. He must fight now, not only in defense of the Fatherland, but in self-defense as well.

"We are making war only against the armed forces; that is, the Belgium army," the commanding officer told the men as they stepped across the frontier in Germany's first violation of international law. "The lives and property of civilians are under the protection of international treaties, but you soldiers must not forget that it is your duty to defend your lives as long as possible for the protection of the Fatherland, and to sell them as dearly as possible. We want to prevent useless shedding of blood as far as the civilians are concerned, but I want to remind you that a too great considerateness borders on cowardice, and cowardice in the face of the enemy is punished very severely."

This "humane" admonition the men accepted as a veiled invitation to put sentiment aside and steel themselves for the worst. All that the officer may have implied has happened to unfortunate Belgium, as is well known, and more, too, according to the narrative of this young soldier, for he was a forced participant in many unprovoked outrages against the rights and persons of those people.

Within a few days after violation of Belgian neutrality, he saw his own comrades shoot down civilians in village streets; saw a comrade hurl a stone through a window and strike a child, whose mother cried to the soldiers for bread, and himself was one of a firing squad which executed five civilians. He saw villages sacked and pillaged, and his own comrades severely punished for the least show of mercy to women and children, and relates instances of the most ruthless and brutal conduct of German officers toward the unoffending, helpless population of villages and towns in the path of the German war machine, and how German soldiers pillaged and desecrated homes without serious interference by their superiors.

Reaching Vitrey-le-Francois after days of forced marching, the division to which the author was attached found the whole town crowded with wounded soldiers and a fierce battle (the battle of the Marne) raging west of the town. Here follows his description of that memorable fight:

"We had approached the firing line a little more than two miles when we got within reach of the enemy's curtain of fire. A terrific hail of shells was plowing up every foot of ground. Thousands of corpses of German soldiers were witnesses of the immense losses the Germans had suffered in bringing up all available reserves. The French tried their utmost to prevent this and increased their artillery fire to an unheard-of violence.

"It seemed impossible for us to break through that barricade of fire. Hundreds of shells were bursting every minute. We were ordered to pass that hell singly and at a running pace. We were lying on the ground and observed how the first of our men tried to get through. Some ran forward like mad, not heeding the shells that were bursting around them, and got through. Others were entirely buried by dirt, dug up by the shells, or were torn to pieces by shell splinters. Two men had scarcely reached the line when a heavy shell exploded at their feet, leaving nothing of them.

"Who can imagine what we were feeling during those harrowing minutes as we lay crouching on the ground, not quite a hundred feet away, seeing everything and only waiting for our turn to come? One had entangled one's self in a maze of thoughts. Suddenly one of the officers would cry: 'The next one!' That meant me!

"Just as if roused out of a bad dream, I jump up and race away like mad, holding the rifle in my right hand and the bayonet in my left. I jumped aside a few steps in front of two bursting shells and run into two others which are bursting at the same time. I leap back several times; run forward again, race about wildly to find a gap through which to escape. But—fire and iron everywhere. Like a hunted beast one seeks some opening to save one's self. Hell is in front of me and behind me, the officer's revolver, kept ready to shoot.

"The lumps of steel fall down like a heavy shower from high above. I blindly run, and run, and run, until somebody gets me by my coat. 'We're there,' somebody roars in my ear. 'Stop!' Are you wounded? Have a look; perhaps you are and don't know it!' Here I am, trembling all over. 'Sit down; you will feel better; we are trembling, too.' Slowly I become more quiet. One after the other arrived; many were wounded. We were about 40 when the Sergeants took over the command. Nothing was again to be seen of the officers.

"We proceeded and passed several German batteries. Many had suffered great losses. The crews were lying dead or wounded around their demolished guns. Others could not fire, as they had no ammunition. We rested. Some men of the artillery who 'had nothing to do' for lack of ammunition came up to us. A Sergeant asked why they did not fire. 'Because we have used up all our ammunition,' a gunner replied. 'Oh, yes, it would be quite impossible to bring up ammunition through that curtain of fire.' 'It is not that,' announced the gunner; 'it's because there isn't any more to bring up.' And then he went on: 'We started at Neufchateau to drive the French before us like hunted beasts; we rushed headlong after them like savages. Men and beasts were used up in the heat; all the destroyed railroads and means of transportation could not be repaired in those few days; everything was left in the condition we found it; and in a wild intoxication of victory we ventured to penetrate into the heart of France. We rushed on without thinking or caring, all the lines of communication in our rear were interrupted—we confidently marched into the traps the French had set for us. Before the first ammunition and the other accessories, which had all to be transported by wagon have reached us we shall be done for.'

"Up to that time we had had blind confidence in the invincible strategy of our 'Great General Staff,' and now they told us this. We simply did not believe it. And yet it struck us that the French (as made clear by everything around us) were in their own country, in the closest proximity of their largest depot, Paris, and were in possession of excellent railroad communications. The French were, besides, maintaining a terrible artillery fire with guns of such large size as had never yet been used by them. All that led to the conclusion that they had taken up positions prepared long before, and that the French guns had been placed in such manner that we could not reach them. In spite of all, we continued to believe that the gunner had seen things in too dark a light. We were soon to be taught better.

"We got in the neighborhood of the line of defense, and were received by a rolling fire from the machine guns. We went up to the improvised trenches that were to protest us, at double-quick. It was raining hard. The fields around were covered with dead and wounded men who impeded the work of the defenders. Many of the wounded contracted tetanus in consequence of contact with the clayey soil, for most of them had not been bandaged. They all begged for water and bread, but we had none ourselves. In fact, they implored us to give them a bit of bread. They had been in that hell for two days without having eaten a mouthful.

"We had scarcely been shown our places when the

"It was not the voodoo sign, Mademoiselle," he said, "it was a sign, however, of something that suggested at once to be the connection of voodoo practices."

then turned to him with a voluble explanation of something in French.

Aux Cayes was a rather distinguished looking Haytian of the better class and one who commanded respect among the natives.

"It is quite extraordinary," he said with a marked accent, taking up the surgeon's remark. "As for these people"—he threw out his hands in a deprecating gesture—"one cannot blame them for being perplexed when you doctors disagree."

Kennedy had covered up Leon's face again and Collette was crying softly.

"Don't, my dear child," soothed Aux Cayes, patting her shoulder gently. "Please try to calm yourself."

It was evident that he adored his beautiful ward and would have done anything to relieve her grief. Kennedy evidently thought it best to leave the two together, as Aux Cayes continued to talk to her in diminutive and familiar French phrases.

"Were there any other people on the boat who might be worth watching?" he asked as we rejoined Burke, who was looking about at the gaping crowd.

Burke indicated a group. "Well, there was an old man, Castine, and the woman he calls his wife," he replied. "They were the ones who really kept the rest from throwing the body overboard."

"Oh, yes," assented Kennedy. "She told me about them. Are they here now?"

Burke moved over to the group and beckoned someone aside toward us. Castine was an old man with gray hair and a beard which gave him quite an appearance of wisdom, besides being a matter of distinction among those who were beardless. With him was Mme. Castine, much younger and not unattractive.

"You knew M. Leon well?" asked Kennedy.

"We knew him in Port au Prince, like everybody," replied Castine, without committing himself to undue familiarity.

"Do you know of any enemies of his on the boat?" cut in Burke. "You were present when they were demanding that his body be thrown over, were you not? Who was foremost in that?"

Castine shrugged his shoulders in a deprecatory manner. "I do not speak English very well," he replied. "It was only those who fear the dead."

I turned and saw that Collette and Aux Cayes had come out of the cabin to the deck together, he holding her arm while she dabbed the tears away from her wonderful eyes.

At the sight of us talking to Castine and the other woman she seemed to catch her breath. She did not speak to us, but I saw the two women exchange a glance of appraisal, and I determined that "Madame" Castine was at least worth observing.

By the attitude of the group from which we had drawn them, Castine, it seemed, exercised some kind of influence over all, rich and poor, revolutionist and Government supporter.

The appearance of Collette occasioned a buzz of conversation and glances, and it was only a moment before she retreated into the cabin again. Apparently she did not wish to lose anything, as long as Kennedy and Burke were about.

Kennedy did not seem to be so much interested in quizzing Castine just yet, now that he had seen him, as he was in passing the time profitably for a few minutes. He looked at his watch, snapped it back into his pocket and walked deliberately into the cabin again.

There he drew back the cover over Leon's face, bent over it, raised the lids of the eyes and gazed into them.

Collette, who had been standing near him, watching every motion, drew back with an exclamation of horror and surprise.

"The voodoo sign is on him!" she cried. "It must be that."

Almost in panic she fled, dragging her guardian with her.

I, too, looked. The man's eyes were actually green, now. What did it mean?

"Burke," remarked Kennedy decisively, "I shall take the responsibility of having the body transferred to my laboratory, where I can observe it. I'll leave you to attend to the formalities with the Coroner. Then I want you to get in touch with Forsyth & Co. Watch them without letting them know you are doing so—and watch their visitors, particularly."

A private ambulance was called and, with much wagging of heads and tongues, the body of Leon was carried on a stretcher, covered by a sheet, down the gangplank and placed in it. We followed closely in a taxicab, across the bridge and uptown.

For some days, I may say, Kennedy had been at work in his laboratory in a little anteroom, where he was installing some new apparatus for which he had received an appropriation from the trustees of the university.

It was a very complicated affair, one part of which seemed to be a veritable room within a room. Into this chamber, as it were, he now directed the men to carry Leon's body and lay it on a sort of bed or pallet that was let down from the side wall of the compartment.

Outside the small chamber I have spoken of, in the room itself, were several large pieces of machinery, huge cylinders with wheels and belts, run by electric motors. No sooner had the body been placed in the little chamber and the door carefully closed than Kennedy threw a switch, setting the apparatus in motion.

"How could Leon have been killed?" I asked, as he rejoined me in the outside laboratory. "What did Collette mean by her frightened cry of the 'voodoo sign'?"

The incident had made a marked impression on me and I had been unable quite to arrive at any sensible explanation.

"Of course, you know that voodoo means literally anything that inspires fear," remarked Kennedy, after a moment's thought. "The god of voodoo is the snake. I cannot say now what it was she feared. But to see the eyeballs turn green is uncanny, isn't it?"

"I should say so," I agreed. "But is that all?"

He shook his head. "No, I don't believe it is. Haiti is the hotbed of voodoo worship. The cult has inaugurated a sort of priesthood—often a priest and a priestess, called 'papaloi' and 'mammaloi'—papa and mamma, probably with a corruption of the French word, 'roi,' king. They are, as it were, heads of the community, father and mother, King and Queen. Some of the leading men of the communities in the islands of the Caribbean are secret voodooists and leaders. As to just what is going on under the surface in this case, I cannot even hazard a guess. But there is some deviltry afoot."

Just then the telephone rang and Craig answered it.

"It was from Burke," he said as he hung up the receiver. "Confidential agents of his have been about. No one from the ship seems to have been down to see Forsythe, but Forsythe has had people over at the ship. Burke says someone is sending off great bunches of messages to Haiti—he thinks the powerful wireless apparatus of the Haytien is being used."

For a moment Kennedy stood in the center of the laboratory thinking. Then he appeared to make up his mind to something.

"Has the taxicab gone?" he asked, opening a cabinet, from which he took several packages.

I looked out the window. The ambulance had gone back, but the driver of the car had evidently waited to call up his office for instructions. I beckoned to him, and together Kennedy and I placed the packages in the car.

Thus we were able quickly to get back again to the wharf where the Haytien was berthed. Instead of going aboard again, however, Kennedy stopped just outside, where he was not observed and got out of the car, dismissing it.

In the office of the steamship company he sought one of the employes and handed him a card, explaining that we were aiding Burke in the case. The result of the parley was that Kennedy succeeded in getting to the roof of the covered pier on the opposite side from that where the ship lay.

There he set to work on a strange apparatus, wires from which ran up to a flagpole on which he was constructing what looked like a hastily improvised wireless aerial. That part arranged, Kennedy followed his wires down again and took them in by a window to a sort of lumber room behind the office. Outside everyone was too busy to watch what we were doing there and Craig could work uninterrupted.

"What are you doing?" I asked. "Installing a wireless plant?"

"Not quite," he smiled quietly. "This is a homemade wireless photo-recording set. Of course, wireless aerials of amateurs don't hum any more since the war has caused the strict censorship of all wireless. But there is no reason why one can't receive messages, even if they can't be sent by everybody.

"This is a fairly easy and inexpensive means by which automatic records can be taken. It involves no delicate instruments and the principal part of it can be made in a few hours from materials that I have in my laboratory. The basis is the capillary electrometer."

"Sounds very simple," I volunteered, trying not to be sarcastic.

"Well, here it is," he indicated, touching what looked like an ordinary soft glass tube of perhaps a quarter of an inch in diameter, bent U-shaped, with one limb shorter than the other.

"It is filled nearly to the top of the shorter limb with chemically pure mercury," he went on. "On the top of it I have poured a little 20 per cent sulphuric acid. Dipping into the acid is a small piece of capillary tube, drawn out to a very fine point at the lower end."

He filled the little tube with mercury also. "The point of this," he observed, "is fine enough to prevent the mercury running through from its own weight—about as fine as a hair."

He dipped the point and held it in the sulphuric acid and blew through the capillary tube. When the mercury bubbled through the point in minute drops, he stopped blowing. It drew back for a short distance by capillary attraction and the acid followed it up.

"You can see that connections are made to the mercury in the arm and the tube by a short piece of platinum wire," he continued. "It isn't necessary to go into the theory of the instrument. But the most minute difference of potential between the two masses of mercury will cause the fine point at the juncture of the liquids to move up and down.

"Connected to the aerial and the earth, with a crystal detector in series, it is only a matter of applying an ordinary photo-recording drum, and the machine is made."

He had been setting up a light-tight box, inside of which was a little electric lamp. Opposite was a drum covered with bromide paper. He started the clockwork going and after a few moments' careful observation, we went away and left the thing, trusting that no one was the wiser.

Nothing further occurred that day, except for frequent reports from Burke, who told us how his men were getting on in their shadowing of Forsythe & Co. Apparently, the death of Leon had put a stop to revolutionary plots, or at least had caused the plotters to change their methods radically.

The time was shortening, too, during which Burke could keep the passengers of the Haytien under such close surveillance, and it was finally decided that on the next morning they should be released by secret service agents, in the hope that once free they would commit some overt act that might lead to a clew.

It was early next morning, about half an hour after the time set for the release of the passengers, that our laboratory door was flung open and Collette Aux Cayes rushed in, wildly excited.

"What's the matter?" asked Kennedy anxiously.

"Someone has been trying to keep me on the boat," she panted. "And all the way over here a man has been following me."

Kennedy looked at her a minute calmly. We could understand why she might have been shadowed, though it must have been a bungling job of Burke's operative. But who could have wanted her kept on the boat?

"I don't know," she replied in answer to Kennedy's question. "But somehow I was the only one not told that we could go. And when I did go one of the secret service men stopped me."

"Are you sure it was a secret service man?"

"He said he was."

"Yes, but if he had been he would not have done that, nor let you get away, if he had. Can't you imagine anyone who might want you detained longer?"

She looked at us, half frightened. "N—not unless it is that man—or the woman with him," she replied, clasping her hands.

"You mean Castine?"

"Yes," she replied, avoiding the use of his name. "Ever since you had the body removed, he has been in great fear. I have heard him ask 50 times, 'Where have they taken him?' and 'Is he to be embalmed?' "

"That's strange," remarked Kennedy. "Why that anxiety from him? I remember that it was he who wanted the body left alone. Is it fear that we might discover something which might be covered up?"

Kennedy disappeared into the anteroom and I heard him making a great fuss as he regulated the various pieces of machinery that surrounded the little chamber.

Some minutes later he emerged.

"Meet us here in an hour," he directed Collette, "with your guardian."

Quickly Craig telephoned for a tank of oxygen to be sent over to the laboratory, then got Burke on the wire and asked him to meet us down at the dock.

We arrived first and Craig hurried into the lumber room, where, fortunately, he found everything undisturbed. He tore the strip of paper from the drum and held it up. On it was a series of marks, which looked like dots and dashes, of a peculiar kind, along a sort of base line. Carefully he ran his eye over the strip, then he shoved it into his pocket in great excitement.

"Hello," greeted Burke, as he came up puffing from the hurried trip over from the Customs House, where his office was. "What's doing now?"

"A great deal, I think," returned Kennedy. "Can you locate Castine and that woman and come up to the laboratory—right away?"

"I can put my finger on them in five minutes and be there in half an hour," he returned, not pausing to inquire further, for, like me, Burke had learned that Kennedy could not be hurried in any of his revelations.

Together, Craig and I returned to the laboratory to find that Collette Aux Cayes was already there with her guardian, as solicitous as ever for her comfort, and breathing fire and slaughter against the miscreants who had tried to detain her, without his knowledge.

Some minutes later Castine and "Madame" Castine arrived. At sight of Collette she seemed both defiant and restless, as though sensing trouble, I thought. Few words were spoken now by anyone, as Burke and I completed the party.

"Will you be so kind as to step into the little anteroom with me?" invited Craig, holding open the door for us.

We entered and he followed; then, as he led the way, stopped before a little glass window in the compartment which I have described. Collette was next to me. I could feel the tenseness of her senses as she gazed through the window at the body on the shelf-like pallet inside.

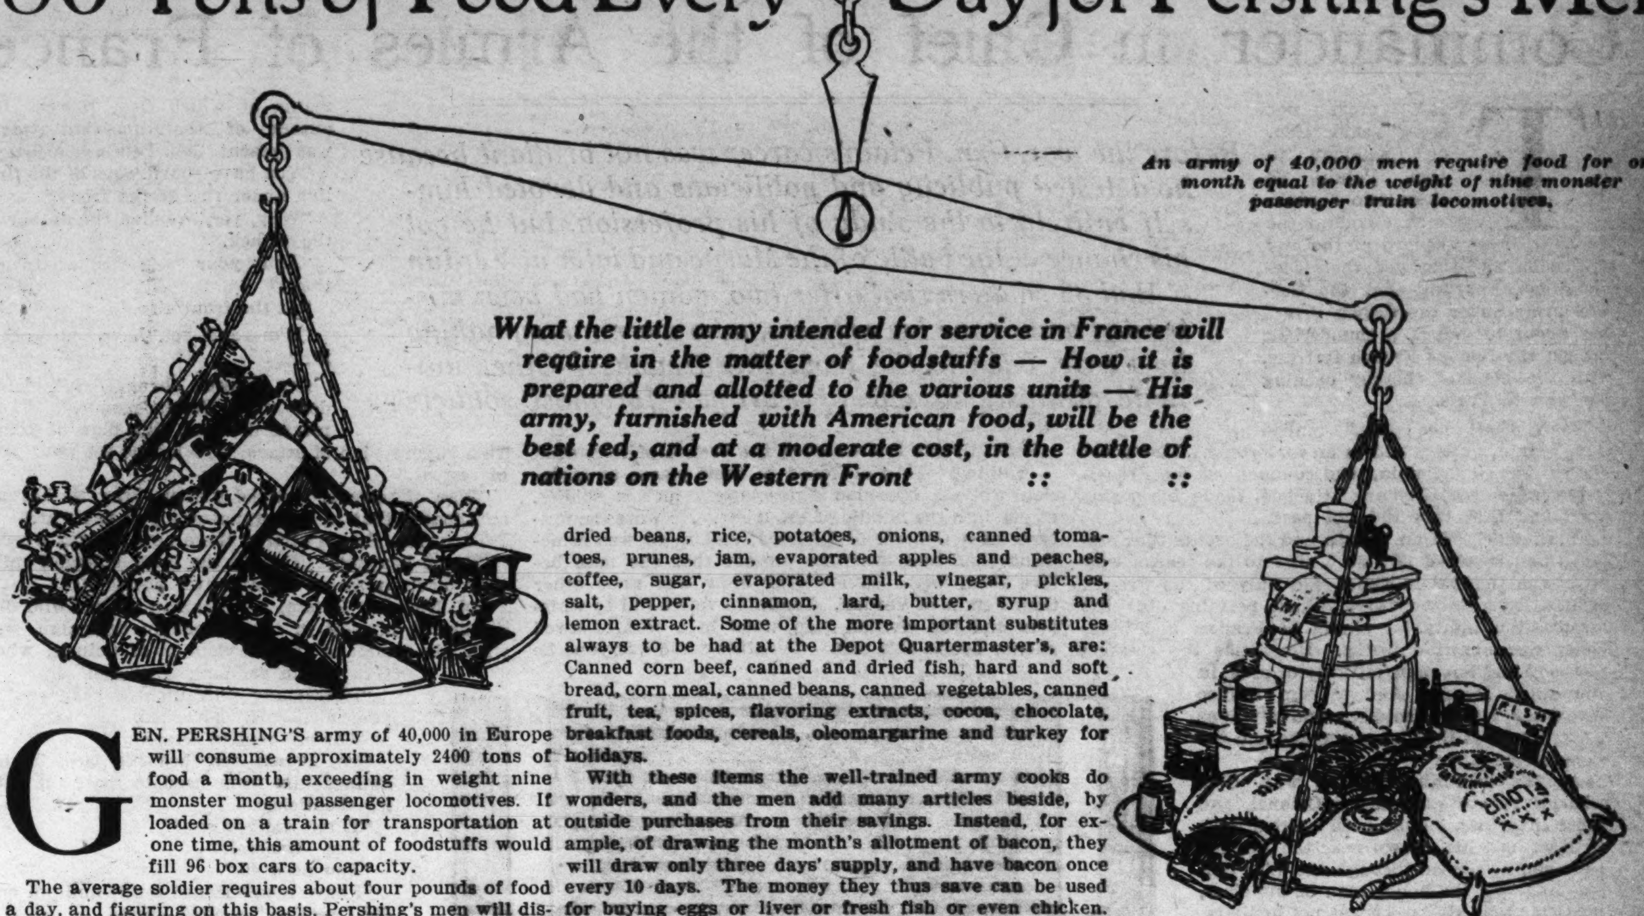
80 Tons of Food Every Day for Pershing's Men



An army of 40,000 men require food for one month equal to the weight of nine monster passenger train locomotives.

What the little army intended for service in France will require in the matter of foodstuffs — How it is prepared and allotted to the various units — His army, furnished with American food, will be the best fed, and at a moderate cost, in the battle of nations on the Western Front :: ::

GEN. PERSHING'S army of 40,000 in Europe will consume approximately 2400 tons of food a month, exceeding in weight nine monster mogul passenger locomotives. If loaded on a train for transportation at one time, this amount of foodstuffs would fill 96 box cars to capacity.

The average soldier requires about four pounds of food a day, and figuring on this basis, Pershing's men will dispose of 80 tons every 24 hours. Thus it can be seen that the provisioning of an army of 40,000 men, far from its base, becomes a nice little problem in itself for the War Department. These figures, of course, do not take into account other necessities of an army, such as munitions, guns and ordnance, clothing and shoes, which make an item as large or greater than the food supply. One ship of 10,000 tons, carrying foodstuffs to capacity, sunk by a submarine or mine, would mean the loss of provisions sufficient to feed such an army for four months.

As Pershing's men will be supplied with American food, destined solely for their consumption, the Quartermaster and Commissary Departments have long been at work on this detail of the expedition and naturally will exercise every precaution against disaster to the line of communication between here and France, in order that the men may be kept will fed and fit for the fight.

An army ration, technically, is the allowance for the subsistence of one person for one day. On this basis the food consumption of whole armies are figured to the fraction of a cent. The individual ration weighs four pounds and costs today from 31 to 38 cents, varying with the fluctuation of army contract food prices. It contains 25 standard articles of food, to which is added a list of what are called "substitutive articles."

There are five kinds of rations—garrison, haversack, Filipino, travel and emergency. The garrison ration, the one with which this article will deal—is the food supplied to soldiers in barracks or permanent camp, such as Pershing's men will occupy in France.

The haversack ration is carried in the field when the men are separated from the usual company field kitchen. The Filipino ration is that given to the little brown soldiers of our Pacific possessions, who need a lot of rice and fish and much less bacon and beef. The travel ration is the canned and boxed food, supplied for use on trains, when there are no cooking facilities at all, or very limited ones, and the emergency ration consists of prepared tablets of pressed dried beef, chocolate and bread wafers, of highly nutritive value, which the men carry for use only in the greatest emergency or when isolated from the regular food supply.

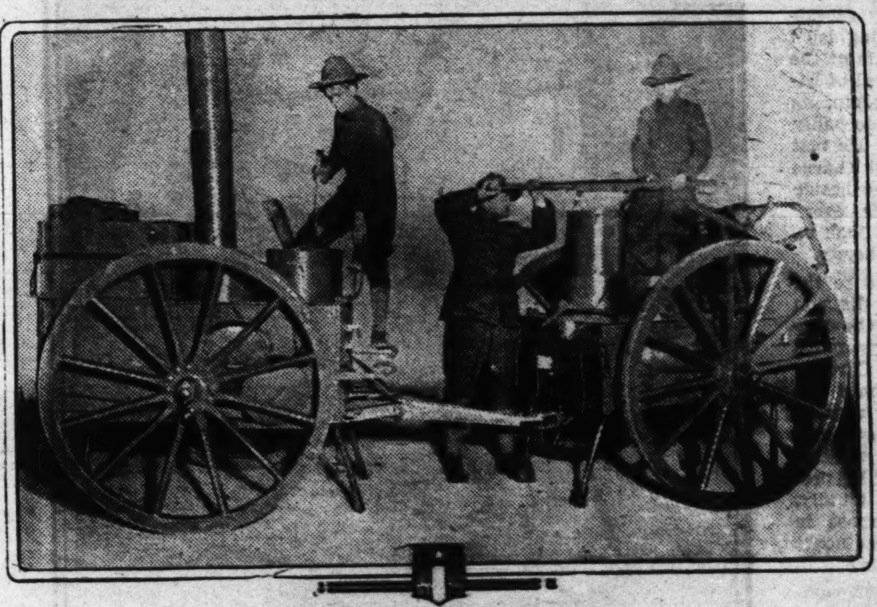
The value of a single ration is based upon the current prices of the various components of the army ration and their substitutes, and varies from month to month. Of late years it has been steadily increasing in price, having advanced more than 2 cents since last summer. The Chief Quartermaster of the department prepares the ration each month, figuring in the amount that all the authorized articles cost and the quantity allowed by the subsistence tables. Each unit that messes together—company, troop or battery—is allowed one ration for every enlisted man (officers pay for their own food).

The general mess draws its food from the supply officer, and against the amount drawn a charge sales slip is issued. At the end of each month the mess gets back in cash the allowance not drawn in food. If a unit has drawn more than its allowance, the company must pay back in cash the cost of the food overdrawn. This seldom occurs; never, if the Mess Sergeant knows his business and the Captain keeps a sharp watch. As a matter of fact, it requires no uncomfortable economy for a well-regulated company to save a hundred dollars a month from their mess allowance, which may be utilized for specials and delicacies.

The 25 items of the garrison ration are: Fresh beef, bacon, flour, baking powder, dried beans, rice, potatoes, onions, canned tomatoes, prunes, jam, evaporated apples and peaches, coffee, sugar, evaporated milk, vinegar, pickles, salt, pepper, cinnamon, lard, butter, syrup and lemon extract. Some of the more important substitutes always to be had at the Depot Quartermaster's, are: Canned corn beef, canned and dried fish, hard and soft bread, corn meal, canned beans, canned vegetables, canned fruit, tea, spices, flavoring extracts, cocoa, chocolate, breakfast foods, cereals, oleomargarine and turkey for holidays.

With these items the well-trained army cooks do wonders, and the men add many articles beside, by outside purchases from their savings. Instead, for example, of drawing the month's allotment of bacon, they will draw only three days' supply, and have bacon once every 10 days. The money they thus save can be used for buying eggs or liver or fresh fish or even chicken.

Pershing's little army will be allowed almost one pound of bread to each man for his daily ration and thus will consume about 18 tons daily. When bacon is served they will eat five tons at a meal, and when they have beefsteak, five and one-half tons will be consumed at one sitting. Chicken is served about four times a month, requiring 5000 chickens for a single ration, about 10 tons being eaten at a meal. It requires five tons of potatoes for a meal, or the amount that can be raised on one and a half acres of ground.



The new field kitchen, which changes the old-time method of feeding large bodies of troops in the field, is divided into two carriages. On one is the "stove" and on the other, reserve bins in which food already cooked is kept hot. The hot food, already in cylindrical containers, is placed in receptacles and the covers are clamped on air-tight, the food remaining hot for about 24 hours. The forward part of the kitchen holds the fire over the huge boiling pots. Each kitchen can cook food for 250 men at one time.

Six and a quarter tons of fish are served at one time, one and a quarter tons of coffee and three and quarter tons of jam. Of course, bacon, fish, beef and chicken are not served at the same time; they are served alternately to give variety to the menus. Still further variety is obtained by the occasional use of beans, sausage, macaroni, dried fruits, vegetables, puddings, syrups, etc., thus making Uncle Sam's soldier the best fed fighter in the world, and at a cost to the Government of less than 40 cents a day.

Army experts for years have been studying the soldier's diet. He is a man who does a lot of hard work and must have a lot of good fuel in order to produce the best results. His ration must be well balanced and there must be a suitable variety as well as appropriate quantity. Waste is scrupulously guarded against, and, though food is plentiful for the fighting man as a rule, he is discouraged from overtaxing his assimilative capacity.

Here is what the army provides for the three daily meals in a climate like that of St. Louis:

Breakfast—Fruit or a breakfast food; meat in some form, with a vegetable; hot bread with butter, or battercakes and syrup; coffee.

Dinner—Soup, meat, roasted, boiled or fried, or fish; two vegetables, a vegetable or pickle salad, dessert, bread and coffee, tea or chocolate.

Supper—Meat or fish, one vegetable, hot rolls, stewed fruit or jam; bread and coffee, tea or chocolate.

In the army the average amount of food consumed by one man at one meal has been figured out as follows:

Bacon, 4 ounces; liver, 3 1-2 ounces; steak, 4 ounces; sausage, 4 1-2 ounces; beef, 5 ounces; fish, 5 ounces; chicken, 8 ounces; beans, 3 ounces; macaroni, 1 ounce; onions, 3 ounces; potatoes, 4 ounces; rice, 1 ounce; tomatoes, 3 ounces; turnips, 3 ounces; dried fruits, 1 ounce; jam, 3 ounces.

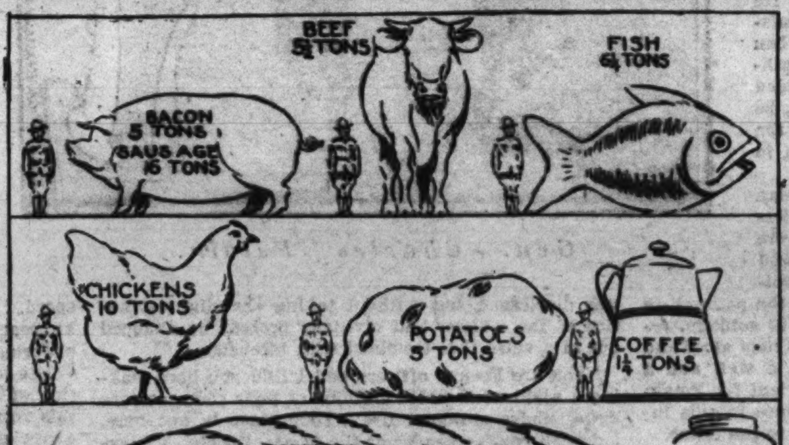
"Each day, immediately after dinner, the menu is made out for supper, in order to use up all portions of food left over from breakfast and dinner while they are still fresh, and at the same time the bills of fare are prepared for breakfast and dinner for the following day. For example: Mush left over from breakfast may be sliced when cold and served with syrup; or, fritters may be made from it. There may be material for creamed potatoes, fried potatoes, potato balls, a salad, meat balls, croquettes, beef loaf, etc., left over from breakfast and dinner, or by preparing a small amount of food and that left over, the whole may be used to advantage."

Certain food fundamentals must also be borne in mind. That most people generally crave the different kinds of food as their seasons approach or is at its height; that winter is the time for more meat; that repetitions in the same bill of fare must be avoided; that well-seasoned food is half the battle; that heavy foods are the rule in winter and light ones in summer; that soup and salad are quite as important as roast and vegetables, and much cheaper; that supper is the meal for made dishes and left-overs and all sweet dough mixtures and rolls.

From army rules may be deduced these hints for thrifty housewives:

A weekly cash allowance should be fixed as the food expenditure of the family and never exceeded. Should the day's allowance be exceeded then there must be a cheap day in the week to make up for the excess expenditure or consumption. It is a fine plan to save out a little each week and have an "army savings fund" for the purchase of extras or to take care of company. Even a few cents a day will mount up in a month. If you have chicken one day, balance its cost another day.

The foregoing forms a part of the system that will feed Pershing and his little army on the momentous mission upon which he is about to embark.



The above diagram shows the total quantity of staples eaten by 40,000 men AT ONE MEAL when distributed according to the army ration schedule. Of course bacon, fish, beef and chicken are not served at the same time. They are alternated to give variety to the menus. Still further variety is obtained by the occasional use of beans, sausage, macaroni, dried fruits, vegetables, puddings, syrups, etc. Though the best fed soldier in the world, Uncle Sam buys so economically that the cost of feeding one man, per day, is only about 33 cents.

The Voodoo Mystery

Newest Craig Kennedy Stories

By ARTHUR B. REEVE

"EVERYBODY'S crazy, Kennedy. The whole world is going mad!"

Our old friend, Burke, of the secret service, scowled at the innocent objects in Craig's library as he mopped his broad forehead.

"And the secret service is as bad as the rest," he went on, still scowling and not waiting for any comment from us. "Why, what with these European spies and agitators, strikers and dynamiters, we're nearly dippy. Here, in less than a week, I've been shifted off war cases to Mexico and now to Haiti. I don't mean that I've been away, of course—Oh, no, you don't have to go to them. They come to us. Confound it, New York is full of plots and counterplots. I tell you, Kennedy, the whole world is crazy."

Craig listened with sympathy mixed with amusement. "Can I help you out?" he asked.

"If you don't I'll be dippy, too," returned Burke with a whimsical grimace.

"What's the trouble with Haiti, then?" encouraged Kennedy seriously.

"Trouble enough," answered Burke. "Why, here's that Carribean liner, Haytien, just in from Port au Prince. She's full of refugees—Government supporters and revolutionists—you never saw such a menagerie since the ark."

I watched Burke keenly as he cut loose with his often picturesque language. Somehow, it seemed rather fascinating to have the opera bouffe side of the Black Republic presented to us. At least it was different from anything we had had lately—and perhaps not all opera bouffe, either. Kennedy, at least, did not seem to think so, for although he was very busy at the time, he seemed prepared to lay aside his work to aid Burke.

"You haven't heard about it yet," continued the secret service man, "but on the Haytien was a man—black, of course—Guillaume Leon. He was a friend of the United States—at least so he called himself, I believe—wanted a new revolution down there, more American marines landed to bolster up a new Government that would clean things up, a new deal all around."

Burke paused, then added by way of explanation of his own attitude in the matter: "That may be all right, perhaps—may be just what they need down there, but we can't let people come here and plot revolutions like that right in New York. They're sore enough at us without our letting them think in Latin America that we're taking a hand in their troubles."

"Quite right," agreed Kennedy. "About Leon."

"Yes, Leon," resumed Burke, getting back to the subject. "Well, I was told by the Chief of the service to look out for this fellow. And I did. I thought it would make a good beginning to go down the bay in a revenue tug to meet the Haytien at Quarantine. But, by Jingo, no sooner was I over the side of the ship than what do you suppose I ran up against?"

He did not pause long enough to give us a guess, but shot out dramatically: "Leon was dead—yes, dead!"

Kennedy and I had been interested up to this point. Now we were eager to have him go on. "He died on the voyage up," continued Burke, "just after passing the Gulf Stream, suddenly and from no apparent cause. At least the ship's surgeon could not find any cause and neither could they down at Quarantine. So after some time they let the ship proceed up the bay and placed the whole thing in the hands of the secret service."

"Is there anyone you suspect?" I asked.

"Suspect?" repeated Burke. "I suspect them all. The Haytien was full of negroes—as superstitious as they make 'em. The ship's surgeon tells me that after the body of Leon was discovered there was such a scene as he had never witnessed. It was more like bedlam than a group of human beings. Some were for putting the body over into the sea immediately. Others threatened murder if it was done. Most of them didn't know what it was they wanted. Then there was a woman there. She seemed to be nearly crazy"——

There came a knock at the laboratory door.

"If you'll just go into the next room with Walter," said Craig to Burke, "I'll see you in a few minutes. Sit down and make yourself at home."

I went in with him and Burke dropped into a chair beside my typewriter. The laboratory door opened. From where we were sitting we could see in a mirror on the opposite wall that it was a girl, dark of skin, perhaps a mulatto, but extremely beautiful, with great brown eyes and just a trace of kinkiness in her black hair. But it was the worried, almost haunted, look on her face that attracted one's attention most.

I happened to glance at Burke to see whether he had noticed it. I thought his eyes would pop out of his head.

Just then Kennedy walked across the laboratory and closed our door.

"What's the matter?" I whispered.

But before Burke could reply a draft opened the door just a bit. He placed his fingers on his lips. We could not close the door, and we sat there in our corner, unintentional but no less interested eavesdroppers.

"Mlle. Collette Aux Cayes is my name," she began, with a strangely French accent, which we could just understand. "I've heard of you, Prof. Kennedy, as a great detective."

"I should be glad to do what I can for you," he returned. "But you mustn't expect too much. You seem to be in some great trouble."

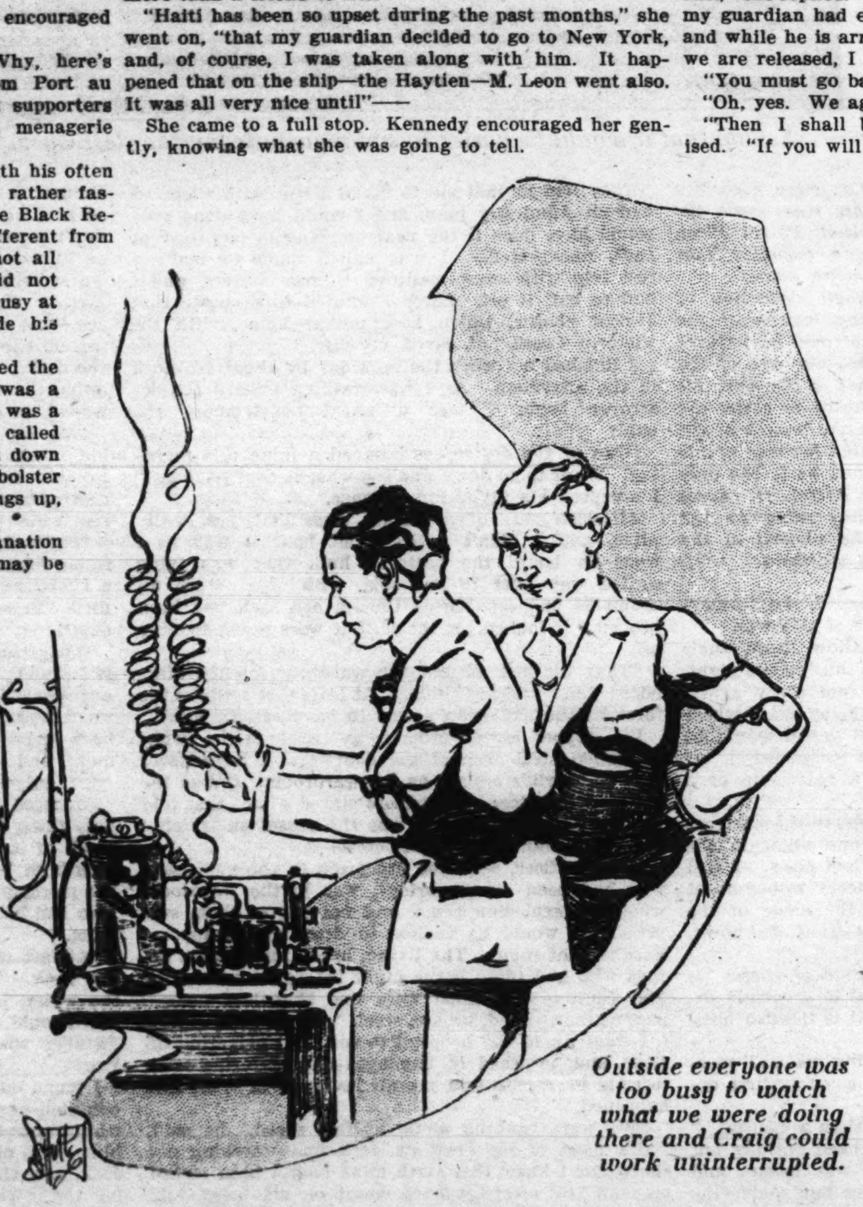
"Trouble—yes;" she replied excitedly. "My name isn't really Aux Cayes. That is the name of my guardian, a friend of my father's. Both my father and mother are dead—killed by a mob during an uprising several years ago. I was in Paris at the time, being educated in a convent, or I suppose I should have been killed, too.

"At last the time came for me to go back to Haiti," she went on. "There is nothing that would interest you about that—except that after I got back, in Port au Prince, I met a young lawyer—Guillaume Leon."

She hesitated and looked at Craig as though trying to read whether he had ever heard the name before, but Kennedy betrayed nothing. There was more than that in her tone, though. It was evident that Leon had been more than a friend to her.

"Haiti has been so upset during the past months," she went on, "that my guardian decided to go to New York, and, of course, I was taken along with him. It happened that on the ship—the Haytien—M. Leon went also. It was all very nice until"——

She came to a full stop. Kennedy encouraged her gently, knowing what she was going to tell.



Outside everyone was too busy to watch what we were doing there and Craig could work uninterrupted.

"One night, after we had been out some time," she resumed unexpectedly, "I could not sleep and I went out on the deck to walk and watch the moonlight. As I walked softly up and down I heard voices, two men, in the shadow of one of the cabins. They were talking and now and then I could catch a word. It was about Guillaume. I heard them say that he was plotting another revolution, that that was the reason he was going to New York—not because he wanted to be on the boat with me. There was something about money, too, although I couldn't get it very clearly. It had to do with an American banking house—Forsythe & Co, I think—money that was to be paid to Guillaume to start an uprising. I think they must have heard me, for I couldn't hear any more and they moved off down the deck, so that I couldn't recognize them. You see, I am not a revolutionist. My guardian belongs to the old order."

She stopped again, as though in doubt just how to go on. "Anyhow," she continued finally, "I determined to tell Guillaume. It would have made it harder for us—but it was he, not his politics, I loved." She was almost crying as she blurted out: "But it was only the next day that he was found dead in his stateroom. I never saw him alive after I overheard that talk."

It was some moments before she had calmed herself so that she could go on. "You know our people, Prof. Kennedy," she resumed, choking back her sobs. "Some said his dead body was like a Jonah, and ought to be thrown off to the sea. Then others didn't want to have it touched, said that it ought to be embalmed. And others didn't want that, either."

"What do you mean? Who are they?"

"Oh, there was one man—Castine," she replied, hesitating over the name, as though afraid even to mention it.

"He wanted it thrown overboard?" prompted Craig.

"No—no, he didn't want that, either," she replied. "He urged them not to touch it—just to leave it alone."

She was very much frightened, evidently at her own temerity in coming to Craig and saying so much. Yet something seemed to impel her to go on.

"Oh, Prof. Kennedy," she exclaimed in a sudden burst of renewed feeling, "don't you understand? I—I loved him—even after I found out about the money and what he intended to do with it. I could not see his dear body thrown in the ocean.

"He is dead!" she sobbed wildly. "Was he poisoned? Oh, can't you find out? Can't you help me?"

Suddenly her voice in wild appeal sank almost to a hoarse whisper. "You must not let anybody know that I came to you," she implored.

"Why not?"

"Oh—I—I am just afraid—that's all."

"Where is the body?" asked Kennedy, to get her mind off whatever hung like an incubus over it.

"Down on the Haytien, at the pier, over in Brooklyn, still," she replied. "They kept us all interned there. But my guardian had enough influence to get off for a time and while he is arranging for quarters for our stay after we are released, I slipped away to see you."

"You must go back to the boat?"

"Oh, yes. We agreed to go back."

"Then I shall be down immediately," Craig promised. "If you will go ahead, I will see you there. Perhaps, at first, you had better not recognize me. I will contrive in some way to meet you. Then they will not know."

"Thank you," she murmured, as she rose to go, now in doubt whether she had done the best thing to come to Craig, now glad that she had some outside assistance in which she could trust.

He accompanied her to the door, bidding her keep up her courage, then closed it, waiting until her footsteps down the hall had died away.

Then he opened our door and caught sight of Burke's face.

"That's strange, Burke," he began, before he realized what the expression on his face meant. "There's a woman—what? You don't mean to tell me that you knew her?"

"Why, yes," hastened Burke. "There was a rich old planter, Henri Aux Cayes, aboard, too. She was his ward, Mlle. Collette."

"That's right," nodded Craig, in surprise.

"She's the woman I was telling you about. She may be a little dark, but she's a beauty, all right. I heard what she said. No wonder she was so frantic then."

"What do you know of the bankers, Forsythe & Co.?" asked Craig.

"Forsythe & Co.," considered Burke. "Well, not much, perhaps. For a long time, I believe, they've been the bankers and promoters of defunct Carribean Islands, reaping a rich harvest out of the troubles of those decrepit Governments, playing one against the other."

"H-m," mused Kennedy. "Can you go over to Brooklyn with me now?"

"Of course," agreed Burke, brightening up. "That was what I hoped you'd do."

Kennedy and I were just about to leave the laboratory with Burke when an idea seemed to occur to Craig. He excused himself and went back to a cabinet where I saw him place a little vial and hypodermic needle in his vest pocket.

Our trip over to the other borough was uneventful except for the toilsome time we had to get to the docks where South and Central American ships were moored. We boarded the Haytien at last and Burke led us along the deck toward the cabin. I looked about curiously. There seemed to be the greatest air of suppressed excitement. Everyone was talking, in French, too, which seemed strange to me in people of their color. Yet everything seemed to be in whispers, as if they were in fear.

We entered the cabin after our guide. There in the dim light lay the body of Leon in a bunk. There were several people in the room already, among them the beautiful Mlle. Collette. She pretended not to recognize Kennedy, but I fancied I saw her start at finding him in company with Burke. Yet she did not exhibit anything more than surprise, which was quite natural.

Burke turned the sheet down from the face of the figure in the bunk. Leon had been a fine-looking specimen of his race, with good features, strong, and well groomed. Kennedy bent over and examined the body carefully.

"A very strange case," remarked the ship's surgeon, whom Burke beckoned over a moment later.

"Quite," agreed Craig absently, as he drew the vial and the hypodermic from his pocket, dipped the needle in and shot a dose of the stuff into the side of the body.

"I can't find out that there is any definite cause of death," resumed the surgeon.

Before Craig could reply someone else entered the darkened cabin. We turned and saw Collette run over to him and take his hand.

"My guardian, M. Aux Cayes," she introduced,

The Retired Colonel Who Became Commander in Chief of the Armies of France

Before the war, Gen. Petain's career was not brilliant because he detested publicity and politicians and devoted himself entirely to the study of his profession, but he got his chance at the battle of the Marne and later at Verdun—Had 33 soldiers shot after two women had been mistreated and drove his officers, who were merrymaking in a cafe, back to the front line trenches—Other intimate glimpses of one of Europe's foremost soldiers

"THEY must not pass," said Gen. de Castelnau to Gen. Petain, as these two Frenchmen stood in the square of the city of Verdun and surveyed their surroundings, knowing that the German army under the Crown Prince was about to launch a thunderbolt against the famous French fortress, with the hope of thereby opening the way to Paris.

"They shall not pass," replied Gen. Petain, quietly and in an undertone. The world knows that Gen. Petain, who commanded the French forces when the Germans attacked, made his words good and that they did not pass.

This remark of Gen. Petain and the events that preceded and followed furnish a clew to the reason why he is the General in Chief, not only of the French armies, but of everything which pertains to the armies—the industrial plants of France, and especially the munition works. He wields the greatest power of any one man, military or civil, in the allied forces. And to him France looks for victory, soldiers and civilians alike, for he is the idol of the one and the hope of the other.

At the beginning of the war, Gen. Charles Petain was only a Colonel, and more than that, he had been retired. Born in 1856, in a little town near the English Channel, he passed through the War College and was the honor man of his class, but after that his career was not brilliant. He did not become a Colonel until he was 55 years old. This was his grade when the war broke out.

He still retained that grade when he was put in command of a brigade which distinguished itself during the long retreat from Charleroi to the Marne by repeatedly turning and savagely beating back the enemy. Just before the battle of the Marne he was promoted to General of Division and was sent to rally the remnants of the Third Corps, which had been badly disorganized during the retreat. He met the Third Corps at the Marne, took charge at once, and, sitting on his horse beside a bridge, pistol in hand, made every man march calmly past him and look up at him as the embodiment of authority.

Gen. Petain next was promoted to the command of an army corps. A division of Moroccan troops was added to the command, giving him an army corps and a half, and he was told to take Carency and pierce the German front. Carency was considered impregnable. Petain went to the front trenches and conferred personally with his Captains, telling them what to do and instilling into them one of his precepts, which is: "Never attack blindly, but always have a definite purpose in view." Carency was taken in three hours and the German front was broken.

After this feat, Petain was given command of an army. It was Petain's army which smashed the Germans and took most of the prisoners and cannon in Champagne. For that Gen. Joffre gave him the armies of Verdun and for what he accomplished there he has succeeded Joffre himself, after Gen. Nivelle had been given a tryout and found wanting.

After Verdun, Gen. Petain was sent to Rumania with instructions to attempt to bring order out of the chaos into which that country had fallen, and several stories of what he did there have reached the United States. They can best be appreciated when a little is known of the man himself.

"He is both loved and feared by his soldiers," it has been said of him. "His commands are like whiplashes, and he stands on no ceremony or ethics. He speaks his mind fully and is seldom misunderstood. His patience is limited, when necessary, and he can be hard and scathing in his remarks. But to the wounded soldier, to one who has done his duty, he is tender as a nurse. He is fair, but the Lord help the man who crosses him in matters military."

In the environs of the little Rumanian town of Vaslui a detachment of soldiers had stopped a farm wagon in which were a peasant, his wife and their daughter, and the women had been ill-treated by the soldiers. Upon the complaint lodged by the peasant an inquiry was instituted, and all of the 33 soldiers, regardless of the fact that 28 of them had held aloof and were guiltless, were lined up against a wall and a firing squad did the rest. It was sufficient for Petain that they had not interfered; indifference in this instance was equal to being an accessory to the crime.

Russian soldiers were similarly treated by the General, and those who murdered wine sellers and ransacked drug stores for alcohol met the fate of the rifle bullet, and after a while discipline reigned in that part of the Russian and Rumanian armies that came under Petain's jurisdiction.

One night in the Hotel Athenee Palace in Bucharest several French officers, a number of Rumanian officers and ladies and civilians had congregated. Champagne and tea were flowing and the conversation was general. The Rumanians had just made one of the many halts in their retreat and their officers were swaggering about, conversing loudly in French.

Suddenly the low voices of the French officers sank to nothing. They stiffened in their places at attention while a blue-clad figure, every inch a soldier, strode into the middle of the lobby. He wore the uniform of a General of Division, and there was something that told everyone present that the man before them with the lowering brow was none other than Petain of Verdun. Feminine voices fell to whispers and the civilian men stood in a sort of awed silence before this man. Something told everyone he was displeased, but without taking the slightest notice of the women and civilians present he snapped out in a voice that trembled with intensity:

"You are French officers and I find you here making a night of it while millions of your comrades are dying under shrapnel fire. Your place is not here, but with your comrades at the front. I'll give you exactly six hours to leave the city and repair to your posts. As for the others," he continued, "I have no orders for them."

Gen. Charles Petain.

One of the Rumanian officers who had distinguished himself under fire hazarded the remark: "But, General, we have just returned from the front."

"You should have stayed there," came the acid reply. "I am not accustomed to be answered back."

There was no reply. The French officers marched off, and it is safe to say that every one was out of the city within the time limit Gen. Petain had given.

On another occasion at a council of Generals in Rumania at which Gen. Iliescu (the author of the Rumanian attack) was present, Gen. Petain queried:

"You have your troops of the first line under fire at the front?"

"Why, yes," replied the author of the attack.

"And your reserves, where are they?"

"At the front also."

"H'm—and you have no other forces?"

Gen. Iliescu shrugged his shoulders while Petain resumed. "This means disaster, this plan of yours. This is your plan of attack, now let me see your plan of retreat."

"Plan of retreat?" gasped Iliescu, "why we haven't anticipated that in the organization of the war."

Then Gen. Petain uttered these now famous words: "Great heavens! This is the most splendid military disorganization I have ever seen."

Col. Nicholas Prassa, a Rumanian officer who distinguished himself in the Rumanian campaign, was with his command in the vicinity of Caineni when Gen Petain suddenly appeared.

"How many mitrailleuses have you at your disposal?" he asked.

"Three," replied Prassa.

Gen. Petain searched his face, he examined him from head to foot, but with icy skepticism.

"Three, did you say?"

"Yes, General."

"You need 40."

"I have requisitioned for 20 and not one did I receive," replied Prassa.

"Then you should have commanded," roared Petain. "What are these Ministers for, anyway? You should have told them point blank that if you did not get what you asked for you were lost. It's astonishing how you managed to hold out as you did without the proper guns," he added in a softer voice. "I'll see to it myself," and with extraordinary rapidity he took action and the mitrailleuse arrived, but it was too late.

It is said that despite his 61 years, Gen. Petain has the vigor of a man of 50. This doubtless is true, for he keeps himself always in splendid physical trim, but one of his own officers has exploded stories about the General skipping a rope for 10 minutes every morning, climbing trees, making long hikes in the rain, and other stunts of like difficulty for a man of his years. It also has been said that he weighs his food carefully at meals.

"I have lived with him for three years," said this officer, "and I can promise you he eats a square meal like you and me and any other man. Nor is he a food crank or an athletic crank or any other kind of a crank, but an exceptionally well balanced man who has become what he has incessantly striven to make himself—a perfect military leader. If he is a remarkable horseman and fences admirably with both hands and keeps himself always in splendid trim, it is because all that is in accordance with his conception of what an officer should be. His physical proclivities are only a minor part of him. In fact, everything in him is subordinated to the demands of his profession. That is the key of his character: mastery and perfection of self. How often has he told us that it is the duty of an officer to think and dream battles! He told me himself that he had studied minutely over 500 tactical and strategic encounters and that I should do likewise.

"Of course, like all of us, he has been trained in the Napoleonic classics, but his favorite military author is Ardant du Picq. Then, too, he is a great admirer of Bushido, the code of honor of the Japanese samurai. I should say that it has had a great influence upon his own education. And I know he was always hammering into us, not to worry so much about drill and formulas of command, but to perfect ourselves as tacticians and inspire in our men three things—patience, tenacity and self-sacrifice. 'A troop becomes invincible,' he used to say, 'when, prepared in advance to sacrifice itself, it determines to make the enemy pay for its sacrifice the dearest possible price.' I think he lived up to that precept at Verdun.

"And again, he was a great stickler for speed. He incessantly advocated the reduction of the knapsack, not out of consideration for the man, you understand, but to speed up the march. Another favorite maxim with him was: 'The constant acceleration of speed is one of the laws of progress.' And in this respect I remember his injunction to us officers about our horses: 'You have a horse; use it. Don't just sit on it and let it carry you around. Get away from your men at times; be your own scout.' He is an omniverous reader of all kinds of literature and a brilliant conversationalist.

"Business is business with Petain. He hates 'hot air' and he can be as silent as the Sphinx, and when you are with him you don't speak first, but he is not a 'silent man.' Behind his frigid exterior there is a heart, as many of us can testify personally. Of course, there is a distinct line between him and his officers. We are here and he is there. He is very generous with his invitations to dine, and sociable and friendly,

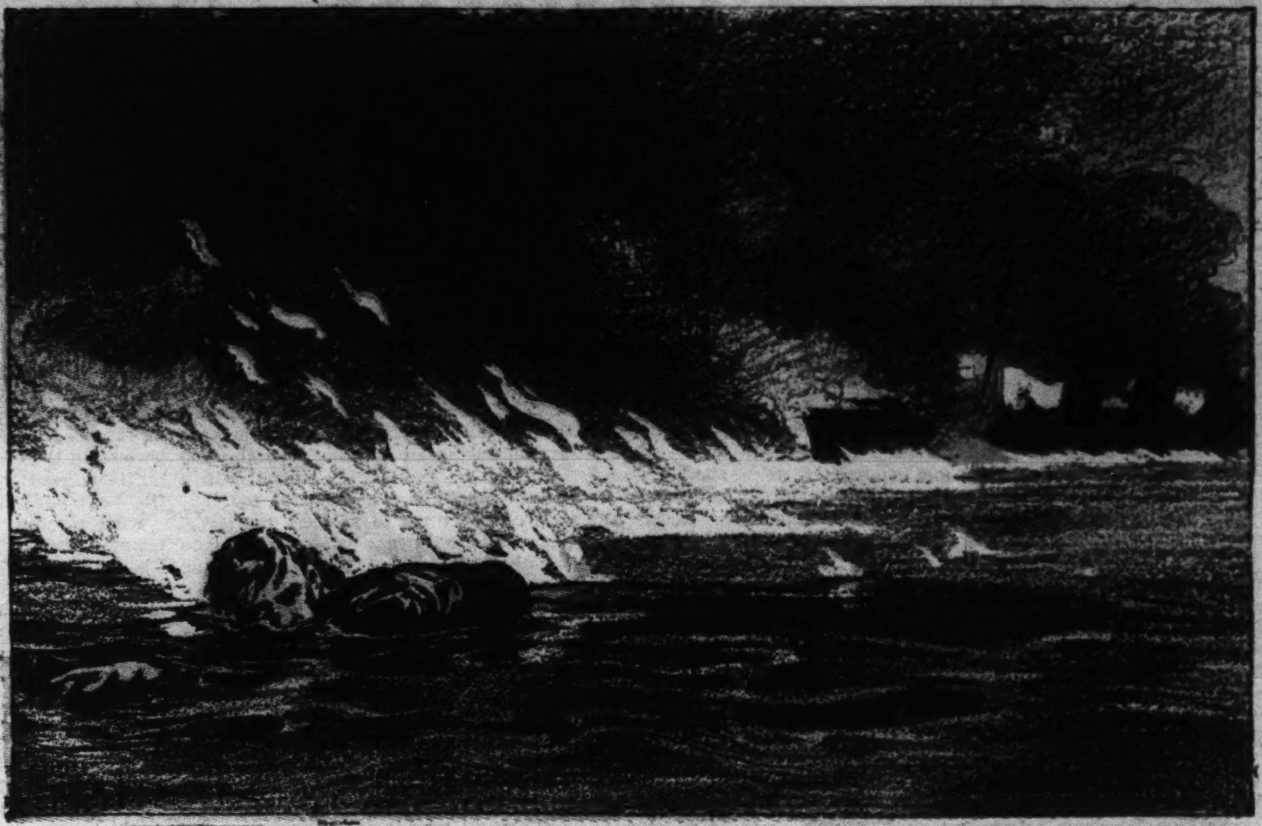
THE DANGERS OF DOVER ✣ FURTHER ADVENTURES OF AN AMERICAN "SEA SLUG"

A visit to a destroyer which ran afoul of a mine and the navigating officer's story of how he escaped from a sea of flame — A British navy subaltern's ignorance of signals brings upon him a vigorous "dressing down" when he blithely drives a "slug" into a mine field — A German air raid, which furnishes further proof that "there is always something doing in Dover" :: ::



Seeing that it would be easier to swim away from the destroyer, beyond the fire zone, he did so.

THE author of this article is a young American who has spent most of his time since the war started with the British Patrol Fleet, taking part in helping to organize that branch of the service known as the Sea Slugs.

He has accumulated a remarkable collection of anecdotes, incident to this exciting branch of the service, and many of these were personal adventures in which he took part, and which make one of the most stirring narratives to come out of the war. He recently returned to the United States to assist the American Navy in organizing the same branch of the service, and should be of great value because of his experience abroad. So far as known, he is the only American to serve with the British Patrol. Of course some of his experiences, of military value to the enemy, cannot be related. At the request of the Service, publication of his name is withheld:

SO far as the navy is concerned, the destroyers are bearing the brunt of this war.

Their speed, their shallow draft, their ability to approach like a thief in the night, smash their enemy and get away again, makes them capable of being used where a heavier, more powerful vessel would be valueless. Besides, the loss of a destroyer is as nothing compared to the loss of a battleship or a cruiser.

The best opportunity I had to observe the destroyers was at Dover. I ate dinner one night in the wardroom of a destroyer of the tribal class. I will not mention the names of the officers whose guest I was, because that would denote the name of the craft and the Admiralty would not want it known, in view of what happened.

"The worst danger to us," said one of these, "is the mines. The destroyers are used to a certain extent to search out mine fields, and it is ticklish business."

"Yes, and overhauling and searching 'neutral' merchant ships is not what you'd call a safety-first occupation," said another officer.

"I'd rather tackle a Hun any day than a 'neutral,'" said the first speaker. "There has been nothing but 'neutral' ships in Dover since the war began, and yet we frequently find German mines laid inside the harbor, near the entrance."

"Those are probably laid by submarines," said someone, "because every neutral ship that comes in and even all approaching the harbor, are carefully examined and thoroughly searched."

"Yes, and a lot of good it does. You remember Commander ———? He had just searched a neutral merchantman and was trailing along astern of her. Thought he'd keep her in sight for a few hours, just to set his mind easy. He was steaming in her very wake, perhaps half a mile astern, when, Bam! A mine blew in his starboard bow and only the men who were on deck at the time got away before the destroyer sunk, nose down."

And so the talk ran. It was all in a cheerful vein. These men discussed war and losses and probabilities and percentages as though it were all part of a great sporting game. They had only one idea behind it all—that was to beat the Germans—to out-think and outplay them.

They had invited me to make a run with them. I had an Admiralty pass, and I could have done so—would have done it the next morning in fact—except that, unexpectedly, I was called upon to make a test trip with some modified U-boat chasers, and I had to call it off. Later I wanted to decorate that U-boat chaser, which kept me at home, with the Victoria Cross. It saved my life.

I finished my work the next day by about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. As I was walking toward the destroyer basin I met a naval constructor who said:

"One of the destroyers bumped a mine this morning. Want to go down and see what it does to them?" I accepted his invitation at once.

All destroyers of a certain class look practically alike, and I didn't notice what boat it was as I went on board the battered hulk that was lying canted way over to one side, with her stern all crumpled and sagging as though her back had been broken. It looked almost as if it were going to drop off.

"They hit just abreast the wardroom on the starboard side," said my guide. "At least that's where the force of the explosion seems to have caught her."

We stooped low in order to get through the twisted, fallen steel arch of the doorway. I have never seen so horrible a sight as the wardroom. Out of the battered, splattered mess there stared a face that told me, for the first time, it was the vessel on which I had eaten dinner the night before.

Every officer, with the exception of the navigator, who had been on the bridge, was in the wardroom when the explosion came, and not one of them survived. It would be useless to describe the appearance of that room. The living, breathing, human beings who had filled it the night before with laughter and courage and hope were one shapeless mass—part of the twisted, broken steel.

I went up to the hospital to see the navigating officer, and, swathed in bandages and suffering from terrible burns, he told me all he knew of what had happened.

"We were running along at fair speed," he said, "with most of the crew on deck and watching out sharp, for I knew that sixth mine hadn't been picked up, and it's pretty safe to count on six being laid here every Wednesday. The rest of the officers were below, poor chaps.

"I was swinging her around, which, I suppose, is what brought her stern quarter on the mine. I thought a thunderclap had detonated right under my feet. I went spinning off the bridge like a catapult. I don't pretend even to know whether I was conscious as I hurtled through the air, but the shock of the cold water brought me to. I was some yards from the destroyer and started to swim toward her. I could see some of the men lying on the deck, others crawling up the companionways and some crawling about the deck. A very few were standing on their feet and doing the best they could to help the others. There wasn't an officer in sight.

"My leg hurt me so that I could hardly move it, but I kept on struggling. The water tasted oily, and I could make out that oil was escaping from the destroyer and spreading all over the surface of the sea, which was as calm as if it were a mirror.

"Suddenly there was a flash. A little tongue of flame darted out of the wounded destroyer and ran a short way over the surface of the oily patch, then died. Presently came another tongue. Then half a dozen. A dozen! Twenty!

"They came toward me, and I may have screamed. If I didn't it was because I was too scared. I struck out away from the destroyer. The tongues ran toward me faster than I could swim, then seemed to curl back upon themselves, but only to dart out once more, and each time nearer to me.

"If only I could get beyond that oil! The sun glimmered in rainbow colors on its surface, but the only thing it meant to me was I was still in it. The smell of it in my nostrils and the taste of it in my mouth so terrified my imagination that I could feel the piercing pain of burns already. I envied the men who had been smashed to jelly quickly in the wardroom.

"At last the flames were upon me. I felt them on my neck. I dove and drove myself forward under the water, but when I came up my hair was singed and I could smell it burning. After that, I do not remember what happened. I am here; that is all I know."

I found out what had happened after my friend lost consciousness. He knows by now and has done whatever is in his power to do for the man who saved him. One of the matloes (sailors) who had been on deck, saw the officer just as the flames were reaching him. The very sea around the destroyer seemed on fire. It meant almost certain death to leap into it, but the matloe jumped.

He swam under the water as far as he could. When he came up the flames were close to him. He filled his lungs with stifling, burning hot air and dove again. Bit by bit he reached the officer, who had apparently lost all consciousness, although he still was struggling feebly—just enough to keep him afloat, but rapidly weakening.

When once he had his arm under the officer's shoulder, the rescuer could no longer dive and he had to swim slowly, supporting his heavy burden. Although the officer could not remember it, he must have regained consciousness once, for he ordered the sailor to leave him and shift for himself, but the brave fellow would not do it. Seeing that it would be easier to swim away from the destroyer beyond the fire zone, he did so, instead of trying to get back to the vessel.

Other craft had heard the sound of the explosion,

A new way to wash sweaters and sportcoats

Lux and very hot water! That's all you need to make soiled sweaters or sport coats look like new!

Lux and very hot water! That's all!

You may not believe that Lux will not shrink wool.

You may hesitate to use it on a lovely sweater.

You may say that woolens can't be washed in hot water!

All we ask is that you get a package of Lux—and try it on any old woolen you happen to have in the house—notice how wonderfully Lux washes it. Then wash your sweater!

What other women say

"It gives me pleasure to tell you how much I like Lux. I have a white sweater which has been washed several times with it, and it is still white, soft and unshrunken."—Mrs. F. W. B. Pratt, Reading, Mass.

"I have just secured Lux and have washed a heavy chinchilla coat with it, and the results are very satisfactory. I shall never be without it again."—Mrs. A. S. Fowler, 43 Beverly Street, Melrose, Mass.

Wash the children's sweaters without fear of shrinking

Now, you let the children wear their sweaters just as long as possible without washing, because each washing makes them so much harsher and inches shorter. But with Lux, they can be washed so they will remain just as soft as when new, and actually not shrunk a thread!

Give Lux one trial. Follow the directions carefully—hot water and no rubbing, and you will be amazed and delighted with the results you get!

Lux can't injure anything that water alone won't injure.

Lux is now on sale at all grocery and department stores—get a package and see for yourself how entirely different it is. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

The Lux Way

Throw the thin, transparent Lux flakes into very hot water; whisk them up into the fluffiest lather you ever saw Allow your sweater to soak ten minutes in these rich, hot suds. When the water has cooled, so the hands are comfortable in it, dip your sweater up and down in the lather. The dirt will come out easily without rubbing. Rinse in three relays of water of the same temperature in which you washed it; then stretch into shape and lay out flat to keep its form perfect.

Fashion Decrees White Veils

A WHITE VEIL always adds to the smartness of the summer costume and makes the fairest face seem fairer.

The four veils shown here give only the merest suggestion of the delightful variety of beautiful Van Raalte White Veils you will find at the best shops.

Always ask for Van Raalte Veils—they wash without wearing, stretch without tearing and outlast three ordinary veils.

Write for Style Book, "Veils by Van Raalte." Address Dept. (V).

A new way to wash sweaters and sportcoats

Lux and very hot water! That's all you need to make soiled sweaters or sport coats look like new!

Lux and very hot water! That's all!

You may not believe that Lux will not shrink wool.

You may hesitate to use it on a lovely sweater.

You may say that woolens can't be washed in hot water!

All we ask is that you get a package of Lux—and try it on any old woolen you happen to have in the house—notice how wonderfully Lux washes it. Then wash your sweater!

What other women say

"It gives me pleasure to tell you how much I like Lux. I have a white sweater which has been washed several times with it, and it is still white, soft and unshrunken."—Mrs. F. W. B. Pratt, Reading, Mass.

"I have just secured Lux and have washed a heavy chinchilla coat with it, and the results are very satisfactory. I shall never be without it again."—Mrs. A. S. Fowler, 43 Beverly Street, Melrose, Mass.

Wash the children's sweaters without fear of shrinking

Now, you let the children wear their sweaters just as long as possible without washing, because each washing makes them so much harsher and inches shorter. But with Lux, they can be washed so they will remain just as soft as when new, and actually not shrunk a thread!

Give Lux one trial. Follow the directions carefully—hot water and no rubbing, and you will be amazed and delighted with the results you get!

Lux can't injure anything that water alone won't injure.

Lux is now on sale at all grocery and department stores—get a package and see for yourself how entirely different it is. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

The Lux Way

Throw the thin, transparent Lux flakes into very hot water; whisk them up into the fluffiest lather you ever saw. Allow your sweater to soak ten minutes in these rich, hot suds. When the water has cooled, so the hands are comfortable in it, dip your sweater up and down in the lather. The dirt will come out easily without rubbing. Rinse in three relays of water of the same temperature in which you washed it; then stretch into shape and lay out flat to keep its form perfect.

YOU CAN GROW YOUR HAIR

Old or Young Either Sex

Successful Scientific Treatment

Do you suffer from loss of hair? Does your hair get prematurely gray? Is your hair stripy, sticky or matted? Do you suffer from dandruff, itching or eczema of the scalp? Are you bald-headed or about to become so?

If you suffer from any of the above-mentioned hair troubles do not neglect it, but try to relieve the trouble at once. Delays are dangerous. Write at once for our illustrated booklet, "The Triumph of Science Over Baldness."

SAMPLE OFFER

We want to prove to you at our own risk that the Calvacura Hair Treatment stops the falling of the hair, destroys dandruff and eczema of the scalp and promotes the growth of new hair. We will send you a box of Calvacura No. 1, together with the above-mentioned booklet, "The Triumph of Science Over Baldness," if you send us your name and address, together with 10 cents in silver or postage stamps to help pay the distribution expenses.

Please write your name and address plainly and inclose 10c in your letter to
